Little Leaguers Seek New Park

The prospect of having no place to play ball unless it allows girls to join its team has prompted the American League of the Mill Valley Little League to seek a ball field in Tamalpais Valley.

"Pressure from the Mill Valley City Council has had something to do with it," admitted Bruce Williams, league president.

The council has ruled that the little league organization can't play at Boyle Park next year unless it relaxes its boys-only rule.

"The American League does draw most of its players from Tamalpais Valley and other unincorporated areas and we have always been interested in getting a ball field at Eastwood Park," Williams said.

So the issue of whether organizations that discriminate on the basis of sex should be allowed to use public facilities now lands in the lap of the Tamalpais Community Services District.

The district board will hold a public hearing on the little league proposal at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 14 in district offices, 305 Bell Lane and directors are expected to decide on the proposal at the session.

"The sex issue has not been discussed among directors," said board president Richard A. Drever Jr. "We have been considering whether a field should be one element of the master plan for Eastwood Park."

Attempts by 10-year-old Jenny Fulle of Mill Valley to strike out the 34-year-old all-male rule of the national Little League Organization has sparked the battle of the sexes in Southern Marin.

Her supporters say the blue-eyed Jenny can bat and field as well as any boy, but the little league claims that injuries would be likely if girls are allowed to play with their male contemporaries. And the league contends it could lose its charter if it breaks the national boys-only provision.

"There has been very little opposition during the two previous meetings on the (league's) proposal," said Drever. "The few people who did speak up are against having a ball field at the park at all."

The diamond would cover about an acre of the five-acre park and would be built and maintained by the little league with donated materials and labor.

"If it is approved, we're ready to go to work," Williams said. "We'll try to have the field ready for next season."

Freeze Law Is Broken Unknowingly In Marin

By PATRICIA PERRY

Many Marin doctors, lawyers, accountants and other individuals or firms which provide a service or sell anything are breaking the law without even realizing it.

An Internal Revenue Service spokesman told the Independent-Journal Friday that anyone "supplying a commodity or service" is required to put p a notice of his fees or prices which were in effect from June 1 through June 8.

The requirement is part of the administration's Phase III price freeze, designed to alert the public that such fees or prices are frozen at early June levels, at least until Phase IV goes into effect Aug. 12.

The regulation, which went into effect June 24, has been largely ignored since a random check of Marin doctors, lawyers, retail stores and business disclosed that most did not know they were supposed to have such a notice displayed in their office or place of business.

The IRS spokesman admitted that it's taking some time for word of the government regulation to get around. "To date there have been no prosecutions," he said. We have been able in every case to get voluntary compliance."

The IRS itself doesn't know whether the freeze price sign will still be required when Phase IV goes into effect Aug. 12. since they're still waiting word from Washington on what the new regulation will cover.

When asked if local lawyers are posting signs about their fees, Herbert Hawkins, secretary of the Marin County Bar Association, replied: "You've got to be kidding."

The president of the Marin Medical Society, Dr. Elmer A. Weedon Jr., said he has a freeze sign on his office wall,

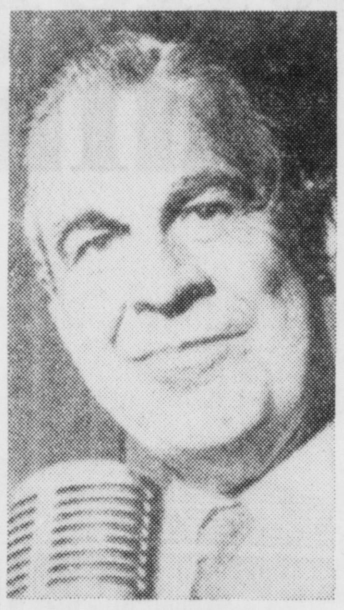
Nixon Friend, Backer Hit By $22 Million Tax Lien

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service, employing a rarely used "jeopardy assessment," Friday slapped a $22.9 million tax lien on the assets of C. Arnholt Smith, a friend and important fund raiser to President Nixon.



C. ARNHOLT SMITH
Massive tax lien

IRS agents moved against the multimillionaire financier's empire, already the subject of a federal fraud suit, in at least nine California counties.

He was accused of owing the government more than $19 million in unpaid taxes for 1969 and $3.8 million in penalties and interest.

It was believed to be the biggest tax lien for an individual for a single year in the nation's history.

The IRS laid claim to all Smith's assets—which include the San Diego Padres baseball team, which he is trying to sell —up to that amount, by both personal tax liens and simultaneously by "jeopardy assessment."

An IRS spokesman said the assessment is a "harsh action" that is rarely used, and employed only under special circumstances, when the IRS fears it may not get the money otherwise.

"There's no notice, you just pay up," the spokesman said. "We don't use it too often."

He said the IRS uses the procedure only when there is evidence the texpayer is going to hide, flee the country, conceal his assets or place them beyond the reach of the U.S. government, or "is or appears to be" in danger of insolvency. The IRS would not say which grounds applied to Smith.

Smith has been a friend and confidante of Nixon's since Nixon's days in Congress. He reportedly raised $1 million for Nixon's re-election campaign, personally contributing $250,000.

The Securities and Exchange Commission filed a civil suit in May against Smith and others, accusing them of fraud to appropriate the assets of Westgate-California Co., and U.S. National Bank, keystones of his empire, both headquartered in San Diego.

The U.S. comptroller of the currency in the same month ordered the bank to regain custody of millions of dollars loaned to Westgate and related Smith enterprises. In an agreement with the comptroller, Smith agreed to give up his place in the bank's management and indemnify the bank for any loss on its loans.

The action Friday gives the IRS first priority on Smith's assets. The IRS liens were filed in Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego, San Bernardino, Riverside, Imperial, King, Kern and Tulare counties.

Optimism Increasing For Skylab Mission

HOUSTON (UPI) — With optimisim increasing that they can orbit seven more weeks, Skylab 2's astronauts began their second week in space today by discarding a jammed instrument designed to measure a faint glow of light far from earth.

The crisis caused by dual control rocket failure in the pilots Apollo ferry ship was over, but project officials were taking no chances. Around-the-clock preparations of a five-seat rescue ship were proceeding in case the Apollo encountered more trouble.

As it now stands, NASA said, it appears the Apollo could bring Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma back home.

Before beginning a heavy schedule of research today, the astronauts ejected the photographic instrument from a small airlock in the side of the space station. It was jettisoned because it could not be pulled back into Skylab due to a mechanical failure.

The instrument was designed to scan the sky to measure strange light known as the Gegenschein. One explanation for this sky glow is that it is the

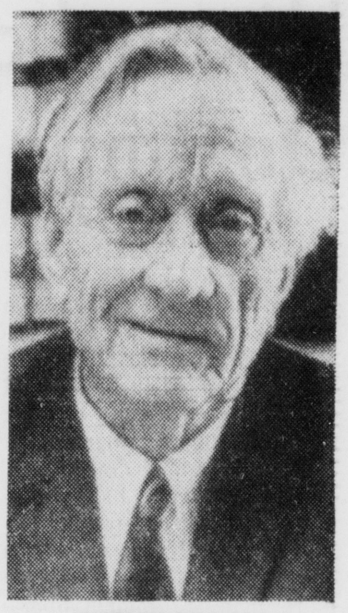
Douglas Calls Bombing Halt

Defense Department Continuing Strikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas today reinstated a lower court order to immediately stop U. S. bombing of Cambodia. The government appealed and the Defense Department said it was not going to interrupt the air strikes.



JUSTICE DOUGLAS
Upholds lower court

The United States has been flying about 40 B52 strikes and over 150 tactical bomber missions over Cambodia every day. A Pentagon spokesman said he did not know if any missions had been flown since Justice Douglas handed down his decision, but subsequent action by the Justice Department would prevent it from having any effect.

"We are advised that the Justice Department is in the process of seeking from another Supreme Court justice a new stay of the district court order which ordered the bombing stopped," said Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim.

"Pending appropriate legal action on this matter, we will abide by the congressional mandate to end the bombing on 15 August 1973."

Douglas acted from his vacation home in Goose Prairie, Wash., and called the Supreme Court in Washington with his decision. He said he felt his move was similar to a stay of execution in a capital punishment case.

Douglas in effect granted a request to restore a lower court's order to stop the air strikes July 27. That order was handed down by U.S. District Judge Orrin G. Judd in Brooklyn, N.Y., but the government won a swift stay of that ruling in the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appeals court in New York has scheduled an Aug. 8 hearing on the merits of the case, which was brought by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and four Air Force personnel.

President Nixon told Congress Friday that he would abide by previous compromise legislation providing for an Aug. 15 deadline on the bombing.

Douglas filed his order by telephone with the clerk of the Supreme Court three days after another member of the nation's highest tribunal, Justice Thurgood Marshall, refused the same request.

A court rule permits a plaintiff to approach another justice in a suit when one justice issues an adverse ruling. Rep. Holtzman and the others who brought the suit hiked to Douglas' vacation home after Marshall had turned them down.

Douglas said the basic question in the case — and one which he was not seeking to decide at the moment — is whether the Congress within the meaning of the Constitution "has 'delcared war' on Cambodia."

"It has become popular to think the President has that power to declare war," he said. "But there is not a word in the Constitution that grants that power to him. It runs only to Congress."

"This case in its stark realities involves the grim consequences of a capital case," said Douglas. The difference, he added, was that no one knows who may be killed.

"They may be Cambodian farmers whose only 'sin' is a desire for socialized medicine to alleviate the suffering of their families and neighbors," he said, or it could be "the American pilot or navigator who drops a ton of bombs on a Cambodian village. The upshot is that we know that someone is about to die."

The five page opinion, dictated to court employees by the Justice after a hearing Friday in Yakima, Wash., said "when a stay in a capital case is before us, we do not rule on guilt or innocence. But if there is doubt whether due process has been followed in the procedure the stay is granted because death is irrevocable."

Douglas said he was not determining the constitutionality of the Cambodian bombing at this point but he noted that he had expressed his doubts on the merits of the constitutionality of the war in Vietnam in earlier opinions.

Daniel L. Friedman of the U.S. Solicitor's office appeared immediately at the Supreme Court and said he had filed "a motion for a stay." He declined to comment further when asked to whom the motion was directed and there appeared to be doubt about the legal mechanics of what would happen next.

The Justice Department opposed the early cessation of aerial support for the Cambodian government on grounds it would be "extremely disruptive" to the war against Communist insurgents.

Douglas agreed to hear the ACLU appeal after another Supreme Court justice, Thurgood Marshall, ruled Wednesday that he did not have authority to order a bombing halt.

His wife, Cathy, told newsmen that Douglas would review papers filed by both sides before ruling.

State: Bedayan Was Sane Before, After Killings

By GEORGE NEVIN

The prosecution sought Friday to prove that Brent William Bedayan was sane both before and after the slayings of a Mill Valley family by presenting witnesses who described the former lifeguard as a calm and alert individual.

Inspector Robert Sisk of the Mill Valley police, under questioning by Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales, said Bedayan appeared to understand "everything being said to him" when he was questioned by Sisk shortly after his arrest.

The 22-year-old Mill Valley man is accused of the shotgun killings of Melvin J., Ruth E. and Daniel R. Schallock of Mill Valley. He has pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity.

Bedayan's attorney, Frank J. Cox, has conceded Bedayan gunned down the Schallocks but has raised doubts as to his mental state at the time.

In what was clearly intended to challenge Cox's contention that Bedayan was irrational and incapable of murder in the legal sense, Bales led the inspector to say Bedayan did not appear agitated when arrested.

"He talked in a normal voice, a voice not broken or drawn. There was nothing strange about his language or his appearance," said Sisk.

He was "alert, calm and understood everything that I explained to him" about his right to remain silent, Sisk testified.

Moreover, he said, Bedayan chose not to discuss with police his activities the day of the murder and recognized that a copy of a search warrant shown him was not signed by a judge.

Yet another witness, the man who sold Bedayan the shotgun suspected of having been used to kill the Schallocks, spoke of Bedayan's "pleasant congenial demeanor" and said he "didn't appear strange.

"There wasn't the slightest clue that anything was wrong," said Earl Buchanan, owner of Buchanan Sporting Goods in Berkeley where Bedayan reportedly bought a powerful shotgun five days before the killings.

"He seemed to know exactly what he wanted, just like any hunting enthusiast who had saved his money," said Buchanan.

The gun, a Browning semi-automatic model, was sold with a plug inside the magazine which would prevent more than three live shells from being placed in it at a time.

But the gun dealer, who took the gun apart in the courtroom, said the plug had been removed, making it possible to load it with five shells which could be discharged in four seconds.

He described the Browning as the most powerful semi-automatic shotgun carried by dealers.

Buchanan said Bedayan "carred on an intelligent conversation all the way through."

Torcom and Marcea Bedayan, Brent's parents, were among a small number of spectators in the superior courtroom of Judge Henry J. Broderick. The trial will resume Monday.

Cambodian Pullout Plans Readied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With President Nixon expressing "grave personal reservations," the administration has begun putting into effect its agreement with Congress to end all U.S. combat activity in Indochina by Aug. 15.

The Pentagon issued orders Friday ending the bombing of Cambodia at midnight Aug. 14 and banning any further combat operations in Indochina after that time.

The President and Congress agreed on the Aug. 15 deadline last June, in a compromise which averted a threatened stoppage by Congress of funds to run the entire government. Congress wrote the provision into law, and the President did not veto it.

But in letters to House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield Friday, Nixon warned that the "incentive to negotiate a settlement in Cambodia has been undermined, and Aug. 15 will accelerate this process."

He in effect put the responsibility on Congress for such consequences.

Referring to Cambodia, Nixon said: "This abandonment of a friend will have a profound impact in other countries, such as Thailand, which have relied on the constancy and determination of the United States and I want the Congress to be fully aware of the consequences of its action."

The end of U.S. combat comes almost twelve years after Army Spec. 4 James T. Davis became the first American casualty in the Indochina fighting Dec. 22, 1961.

The American toll in Cambodia during the six months of bombing since the January cease-fire has been six airmen dead and four missing. The United States has had no contact with the rebel forces in Cambodia and does not know if any of the missing are prisoners.

A Pentagon spokesman said high-altitude unarmed reconnaissance flights would continue but should those planes be fired on, there would be no retaliation. During the 1968-72 break in the bombing of North Vietnam, the United States used such attacks on reconnaissance planes as a rationale for retaliatory strikes.

There had been speculation Nixon would ask Congress for new authority to continue the bombing. But the President wrote Friday: "The Congress has expressed its will in the form of law, and the administration will obey the law.

"I cannot do so, however, without stating my grave personal reservations concerning the dangerous potential consequences of this measure," he said.

He warned Hanoi not to undertake "fresh aggression" and said, "The American people would respond to such aggression with appropriate action."

Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, briefed leaders of both houses Friday on just what operations in Laos and Cambodia were covered by the Pentagon's orders.

The Pentagon gave congressmen a statement saying orders halt "any and all of the following activities: bombing, strafing, armed air reconnaissance, helicopter gunship operations, forward air control operations (the guiding of combat planes to their targets by light spotter aircraft), artillery fire control or the employment of combat advisers with indigenous forces."

A Pentagon spokesman said flights carrying military aid would continue, but no flights would be made into a besieged area where there would be a strong possibility the planes would be fired on.

Nixon Loses Two Rulings On Impounding Of Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Separate federal judges Friday handed President Nixon two defeats concerning his impoundment of mental health and child nutrition funds—and one victory on Nixon's cutback of the antipoverty program.

These were the rulings:

—U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ordered the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to release more than $52 million appropriated by Congress to set up and staff community mental health centers. He ruled that President Nixon's impoundment, or refusal to spend, those funds was unconstitutional.

—U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, in a similar ruling, ordered the Agriculture Department to make available $34 million in presidentially impounded funds for child nutrition.

—But U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery approved Nixon administration plans to transfer to other agencies 11 antipoverty programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), which President Nixon is in the process of dismantling. Ruling against employes who challenged the legality of the transfer,. Flannery called it "fully supportable on a rational basis" to achieve greater efficiency.

The two impoundment rulings were the 9th and 10th times in the past two months that federal judges around the country have overruled Prsident Nixon's impoundment on economy grounds of funds appropriated by Congress.

Judge Gesell rejected administration arguments that the HEW impoundment was within the President's "political" discretion.

"It is time this litany was displaced by a modicum of common sense," Gesell said. "When Congress directs that money be spent and the President, as chief executive, declines to permit the spending, the resulting conflict is not political. We are a government of law, not men, and the law must be determined and upheld."

Congress Passes Late Flurry Of Measures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has adjourned until Sept. 5 after pushing through a package of major and minor legislation in a last day rush Friday.

Among legislation given final approval and sent to the White House:

—A three-year, $20 billion federal aid to highways measure which for the first time opens up money in highway trust funds for use in building urban mass transit.

—A four-year omnibus farm bill including crop supports designed to increase food production and liberalized rules for food stamps for the needy.

—A $2.8 billion Transportation Department appropriation.

—Authorization for $417 million to run the District of Columbia.

Congress also gave final approval to an increase in the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2.20 an hour—but refused to send it to the White House. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., received unanimous consent to hold the bill until Aug. 25 before forwarding the legislation to Nixon.

The maneuver prevents Nixon from invoking a pocket veto while Congress is out of town. In such a case, Congress would lose its opportunity to consider overriding a veto.

Mansfield said he received "significant, very significant indications from the House Republican leadership...and the White House, although not the President" that the minimum wage bill would be vetoed.

"If he vetoes the bill, and I hope sincerely he will not, this will afford him an opportunity to clearly state his reasons (in a veto message)," Mansfield said.

Democrats concede that there are not enough votes in the House to override the veto and probably not enough votes in the Senate.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate passed a bill Friday that would award $25,000 to Dorsie Willis, believed to be the sole survivor of an all-black infantry unit unjustly discharged in 1906.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., said he did not think the compensation was enough. He hoped the House would restore the $40,000 figure in his original bill, plus past veterans and pension benefits to which Willis would have been entitled.

Willis, 87, of Minneapolis, received his honorable discharge Feb. 11 at a Minneapolis ceremony, after spending 66 years shining shoes in a barbershop.

He was dishonorably discharged along with 166 other members of the 25th infantry regiment, following a shooting incident in the border town of Brownsville, Tex., in August, 1906.

Townspeople claimed five to 20 soldiers in the regiment were involved, but investigations failed to identify any of the guilty.

All the troops were then assembled and the commander ordered the guilty to step forward. When no one did, President Theodore Roosevelt discharged the entire unit for its "conspiracy of silence."

Later evidence cleared all the troops.

Omnibus Farm Bill Sent To Nixon For Signature

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional farm leaders have won passage of a compromise omnibus farm bill that includes crop support terms designed to increase food production, and liberalized food stamp rules for the needy.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who sent word President Nixon would sign the measure, has already announced he will use authority included in the four-year bill to support major 1974 crops without requiring the idling of any acreage.

The massive measure includes a new "target price" support plan for grains and cotton which some administration experts predict will lead to expanded production while cutting subsidies on those crops from $2.8 billion this year to around $800 million in 1974, first year of the new programs.

Rebels Open New Push On Phnom Penh

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Cambodian troops battled a large force of advancing Communist rebels just three and a half miles from Phnom Penh today, and a government spokesman in Saigon indicated South Vietnam may intervene in Cambodia after the Aug. 15 U.S. bomb halt.

U.S. warplanes were unable to bomb rebel positions threatening Phnom Penh due to the proximity of government troops who were surrounded by the Communists at the towns of Dey Eth and Koki.

The encircled troops managed to link up late Friday, military sources said, but they remained behind guerrilla lines battling for their lives.

An estimated 20,000 Communist troops began a new offensive on Phnom Penh Thursday.

The high command said the military situation southwest and northwest of the capital had stabilized but that intense fighting was under way three and a half miles southeast of Phnom Penh on Highway 1, a vital lifeline to the capital cut by the rebels two days ago.

"The stopping of the bombing will have a direct effect on the security of Cambodia," Truc said, "and Cambodia's security has a direct influence on the RVN's (Republic of South Vietnam's)."

Nixon in a letter to congressional leaders Friday reaffirmed that the bombing would end on schedule, but warned it could have "dangerous potential consequences" in Asia.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Test End Asked

OTTAWA (UPI) — Commonwealth leaders relaxed in a mountain resort today after adopting a declaration urging the cessation of all nuclear testing, the first time the Commonwealth has ever taken a stand on the actions of nonCommonwealth countries.

The declaration, passed at the urging of New Zealand Prime Minister Norman Kirk, avoided any direct reference to the recent French nuclear tests in the Pacific. It affirmed the Commonwealth's support for the 10-year old partial test ban treaty, which has not been signed by France or China, and urged a cessation of all nuclear tests.

Offers To Quit

MANILA (UPI) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today he had no intention of becoming president for life but would step aside for any person "who can present a better program."

Marcos spoke in a nationwide radio and television broadcast after receiving official results of last week's referendum giving him a 91 per cent mandate to continue his martial law regime for an indefinite period.

Truce Team

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong said today Iran was officially proposed as Canada's replacement on the international truce team, but has not yet been approved.

A Viet Cong spokesman said Iran had been suggested by "the other side" for the fourth place on the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) and that the Communists had set at least one condition.

"The first condition is whether Iran will accept the act of the International Conference on Vietnam signed by 11 governments," said Sr. Col. Vo Dong Giang, deputy chief of the Viet Cong delegation to the Joint Military Commission.

Running Mate

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron was a virtual shoo-in as his party met to choose a presidential candidate today, and posters all over Buenos Aires proclaimed his third wife, Isabel, as the "peoples' choice" for vice president.

All that remained in doubt today was the party's choice for vice president. There were reports Peron might forge a political coalition, name his wife as the candidate or possibly a military man.

With Peron certain to win, political observers said his choice for the second spot and "presidential heir" would be crucial.

Chilean Strikes

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Salvador Allende, his cabinet's resignation offer on his desk, declared a state of emergency today to confront a series of strikes that have crippled the nation's transportation system.

Allende's 15-man cabinet offered to resign Friday night to give him a free hand at settling the strikes by about 50,000 owners of taxis, buses and trucks.

A government spokesman said there was no indication from the socialist president whether he would accept the resignation of his cabinet, which was sworn in July 5. There have been more than 80 cabinet ministers in frequent government realignments since Allende took office 31 months ago.

Arson Suspected

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (UPI) — A killer fire that swept through a swank resort complex Thursday and left at least 46 persons dead was probably the work of youthful arsonists, the town's chief constable said Friday.

Constable Frank Weedon said his department is looking for three boys, all about 15 years old, for questioning. Witnesses said three youths ran away from the building just as the blaze started.

So far, police said, they have recovered 46 bodies from the charred remains of the plastic-and-steel Summerland Leisure cand-steel Summerland Leisure Center. They said they have a list of 52 names of persons not seen since the fire, and Weedon said he presumes that all died in the blaze.

Police said they have identified only six of the bodies found in the building and they are using pathologist's photos to get more identified.

Payment Agreed To For Oil Spill

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger says two firms have agreed to pay the state $156,000 as a result of the 1971 oil spill in San Francisco Bay that occurred when two Standard Oil tankers collided.

Younger said Standard Oil Co. of California and the Chevron Shipping Co. signed the agreement Friday.

Hearing Set In Drug Case For Man Twice Arrested

A Mill Valley man arrested on drug charges, who was released because of an invalid search warrant and then rearrested, may be freed once more following a hearing in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Judge Gary W. Thomas Friday set the hearing in the court of Judge Robert A. Smallman and ordered the Marin District Attorney's Office to show cause why the charge should not be dismissed against Raymond Anthony Hossbach, 25.

Hossbach originally was charged with possessing PCP — an illegal depressant — when arrested in a drug raid on a Ross house July 18.

Although Judge Smallman ruled Thursday that the warrant used in the raid was invalid and freed Hossbach, he was rearrested by Ross police on suspicion of the same offense.

A spokesman for the district attorney's office said state law allows individuals to be rearrested even after a warrant is quashed if it is believed the judge erred.

Hossbach has yet to plead to the PCP charge. The substance, is commonly used as a livestock tranquilizer, often sold in THC, the active ingredient in marijuana.

The district attorney's office claims Hossbach walked into the Ross house with 10 pounds of the newly manufactured substance in a cardboard box while police were searching the residence.

A search warrant obtained on information supplied by a telephone installer who said he spotted kilos of marijuana in the house was ruled invalid by Judge Smallman, who said the informant's reliability was not established and the affidavit used to obtain the warrant was not specific.

Meanwhile, two other persons arrested with Hossbach in the raid were set to go to trial on numerous drug charges the week of Sept. 17 in Marin Superior Court.

William Richard Paris, 29, of Ross, and Virginia MacGregor, 19, of Sausalito, were indicted last week by the Marin County Grand Jury. The same jury refused to indict Hossbach.

Paris faces two counts of possessing phencyclidine, a chemical used to manufacture amephetamine, and with possessing a blackjack.

Along with Miss MacGregor, he also is charged with possessing LSD, and possessing amphetamine, pentobarbitol and marijuana for sale.

Both remain in Marin County Jail — Miss MacGregor on $25,000 bail and Paris on $50,000 bail.

Marks Seeks Repeal Of Sales Tax Boost

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republican Sen. Milton Marks has proposed legislation to permanently repeal the recent one-cent sales tax increase in California.

"There is no reason to continue gouging the public with an unwarranted sales tax hike when the anticipated surplus in the state treasury at the end of the 1973-74 fiscal year will exceed $1 billion," the San Francisco lawmaker said Friday.

Marks said a rival suggestion to reduce the sales tax by a half-cent next year "is not enough." That proposal was advanced by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, and endorsed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Marks said the Bagley measure would leave a state budget surplus of at least $526 million at the end of the next fiscal year. "Such a surplus is ridiculous and unnecessary," he said.

Also downgrading the Bagley measure Friday was Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, who called it "just a mechanical change." Moretti said Democrats will continue to press for an override of the governor's veto of their bill which would have delayed the July 1 one penny increase until Jan. 1.

Marks' proposal calls for repealing the one-cent boost on Oct. 1 when the next fiscal quarter begins. He said it would leave a budget surplus of at least $206 million at the end of the fiscal year.

The two surplus figures were calculated to include a 20 per cent rebate on this year's state income taxes as proposed in Reagan's tax limitation initiative, Marks said in a statement.

Limit Sought In State For Campaign Spending

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. and two groups have launched a drive to place an initiative limiting statewide election campaign spending and lobbyist gifts on the June 1974 primary ballot.

Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, along with Common Cause, a national citizens group, and the People's Lobby, a volunteer political action organization, are heading the effort to obtain 325,504 voter signatures to qualify the measure for the ballot.

The proposal would sharply limit spending in races for governor and statewide offices; restrict spending in ballot measure campaigns; require full disclosure of campaign contributions received by candidates for all statewide and legislative offices, prohibit campaign contributions by lobbyists and require public officials to periodically disclose assets and outside income, Brown said.

Marinwood Skunk Found To Be Rabid

A skunk killed Wednesday in Marinwood was found Friday to have been rabid, bringing to 20 the number of rabid animals discovered in the county this year.

Dr. Carolyn Albrecht, county health officer, said the skunk was shot by sheriff's deputies at 618 Miller Creek Road after residents reported seeing the animal running in circles, falling down and clawing at the window of a home.

Dr. Albrecht said the skunk made no contact with humans, but may have bitten a dog in the neighborhood. The dog was re-vaccinated against rabies and will be quarantined for a month.

Rabies is not unknown to the Marinwood-Terra Linda area, according to the health officer, who said there have been several documented cases since 1964, including a rabid bat and skunk, found in 1972.

She reminded parents to warn youngsters to stay away from all wild animals. "We still get reports of children picking up bats — both dead and alive," she said.

Two Leap Off Bridge In Unrelated Cases

A San Francisco woman and an unidentified man jumped to their deaths from the Golden Gate Bridge Friday in apparently unrelated incidents.

The California Highway Patrol said Loretta Jen, 26, jumped from the east side of the bridge near the south tower at 1:50 p.m. Officers said a passing motorist saw a woman in a long black coat go over the rail and notified a bridge employee. Her body was recovered by the Coast Guard near Alcatraz Island.

Just two hours later an unidentified man jumped from the east walkway near midspan. Witnesses told the patrol the man was running along the walkway when he suddenly, leaped over the railing.

His body was also recovered by the Coast Guard.

No notes were found.

Optimism Increasing For Skylab Mission

reflection of sunlight off a cloud of dust suspended about one million miles from earth, opposite the sun.

Bean reported he and his crewmen were better organized and were learning how to move faster aboard the orbiting space station. But, he said, "The one thing that we have not found here is just extra time."

Their schedule today included a second earth resources photographic sweep across the Western U. S., detailed medical tests and the release of a spider named Arabella in a cage to see how it spins a web in weightlessness.

The three spacemen were awakened by an alarm signal from the troubled Apollo during the night, but a quick check of spacecraft instruments showed nothing wrong.

"We've given the vehicle a good going over and everything looks good to us," ground communicator Robert L. Crippen told the astronauts. He promised controllers would keep a sharp eye on the ship.

Skylab director William C. Schneider said flight simulations in a computer-controlled Apollo trainer showed that Bean, Garriott and Lousma have three backup ways to return to Earth if necessary in the Apollo.

"We are feeling quite a bit better," Schneider said late Friday. "Our simulations have been surprisingly good and we find that we have a very versatile vehicle."

Before going to bed, Bean asked for a detailed discussion of all the alternative piloting procedures being developed on the ground for use if the astronauts were forced by a space station emergency to fly their Apollo back ahead of schedule.

"I'd like to understand best what all the options are exactly from a technique point of view, which would we use first and if that didn't work too well, what would be used next so I can understand the total number and which is best," Bean said.

The cause of the two failures in the Apollo's control rocket system has not been determined, however, and there is still some concern that more trouble of a like nature could strike the command ship.

It is for that reason that the rescue ship was ordered prepared at Cape Kennedy. The Florida launch team is working two 12-hour shifts, seven days a week, readying another Apollo and Saturn 1B rocket for launch as early as Sept. 10. If a rescue is needed, two extra seats will be installed and the ship will be flown to Skylab by two astronauts.

Schneider said the question of how and when Bean, Garriott and Lousma will return to Earth has not yet been decided. There are three alternatives:

—They could fly back in the rescue ship which would be launched Sept. 10.

—They could return in the rescue ship on their normal Sept. 25 splashdown day.

—Or they could fly their own Apollo back Sept. 25, making the rescue launch unnecessary.

Petaluma Man Receives Army Honor Award

Aubrey E. Lord of Petaluma, a civilian employee with the Presidio of San Francisco's fire department, has been awarded a Department of Army decoration for "exceptional civilian service."

Lord received the award for bravery in November, 1972, when he attempted a rescue in the ocean off Baker Beach on Presidio property.

He swam 100 yards in rough water to save what he though was a drowning woman. After finding the woman dead, he made a 45-minute swim back with the body.

Lord also received another award for bravery in 1958 when he pulled an electrician from a hot high voltage wire.

but suspected it was a hangover from an earlier phase and completely out of date.

Accountants are also required to show the sign in their offices, but a secretary at Leader Jarvis and Keigwin Accountancy Corporation in San Rafael, said she couldn't see one there.

However, there is one man in Marin county who knows all about the freeze price signs.

Harry Mott, owner of Ram Graphics at 63 Paul Drive, San Rafael, has the signs posted in all three of his establishments, and is even printing and selling them.

"We found out about the sign requirement when the shops in Town and Country Village in Palo Alto investigated by the IRS. And news filtered through to our shop in the Strawberry Town and Country Village," said Mott.

He hastily printed signs, and has already sold hundreds to supermarkets, banks, and insurance companies.

"I hear the IRS can fine you $5,000 for not having them," he said.

DRAMA REVIEW

Lightweights Spoil 'Lear'

By GERALD M. GENESE

Columnist Charles Mc Cabe once stated, "San Francisco is too heavy for the lightweights and too light for the heavyweights." The Marin Shakespeare Festival's production of Shakespeare's "King Lear", was a heavyweight selection for a lightweight company making their debut Friday at the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco.

"Lear", according to director Douglas Seale" is about the demoralizing effect of power in the hands of unscrupulous men and women. It is about greed, materialism, inhumanity and selfishness, all of which spring from the pride that allows men to believe power is a virtue in itself and justifies any means to attain its ends."

Unfortunately only a few members of the production's large cast were capable of conveying the scope of Mr. Seale's conception.

Ray Reinhardt as King Lear brings to the role a mature talent the part begs for. When he is absent from the stage the play sags. One hopes he will reappear soon and when he does, it is a relief.

The only other cast member who is equal to Reinhardt's performance is Dan Kern as the Fool. He is the classic jester, witty and irreverent to the point of insubordination. His comments on Lear's actions and fate are devastating. When the two are on stage the audience relaxes feeling it is in good hands.

"King Lear" - by William Shakespeare. Directed by Douglas Seale, Produced by Cyril Magnin. Set by Andrew DeShong. Costumes by Warren Travis. Lights by Maurice Beesley. Cast: Earl of Kent; James Minotto; Earl of Gloucester, James Winker; Edmund, Dan Caldwell; Lear, Ray Reinhardt; Goneril, Alice Rorvik; Cordelia, Cynthia David; Regan, Laurie Walters; Duke of Burgundy, Philip Gerson; King of France, Larry Hecht; Edgar, Rick Casorla; Oswald, Victor Pappas; Fool, Dan Kern; Duke of Albany, Ralph Steadman; Duke of Cornwall, Paul Ventura.

Alice Rorvik as Goneril and Laurie Walters as Regan do a nice job as Lear's daughters who plot to dethrone him.

The rest of the talent is a bit thin and the overall production suffers from this. The character the Earl of Gloucester is so poorly conceived that one can feel very little sympathy for him when his eyes are being plucked out by the Duke of Cornwall and Regan.

Director Seale has chosen to include a bit of gratuitous nudity. When Gloucester is having his eyes plucked out by the Duke of Cornwall, Regan throws back her cape to expose her breasts. Upon completing his dastardly task, Cornwall turns to Regan and wipes his bloodied hands on her breasts. A few members of the audience booed; some laughed.

Other crucial points in the production leave one confused. In the final scene when the stage is littered with bodies it is not at all clear how Regan and Goneril die. Regan plummets from a platform into the arms of a fellow actor, and Goneril-is's death is obscured by other cast members.

Charles Lamb in 1836 stated that "Lear is essentially impossible to be represented on stage." Although that is an extreme statement, it is fairly close to the truth in this case. It was ill advised of the company to undertake a play the depth and scope of Lear. There is talent in the company, but many of the actors are not yet mature enough to handle "King Lear."

Grant Awarded To College TV Unit At Sonoma

A $102,000 federal grant has been awarded to the Northern California Regional Instructional Television Consortium at Sonoma State Collete.

The consortium is a network of state, local and private colleges formed to explore ways of using television to serve off-campus students.

Stuart Cooney, program director, said the group plans to produce television programs on environment, health, teacher training and criminal justice in the next year.

The group already has $51,000 in grants from continuing education divisions of various state colleges and universities.

San Anselmo Schools Get Budget

San Anselmo School District trustees have adopted a $2.5 million budget for 1973-74 which is expected to reduce the local property tax rate by nine cents.

Supt. Frank R. Elliott said only three persons were in the audience at the Thursday meeting and sat silent as the board discussed and adopted the spending plan.

The district's 1972-73 tax rate was $3.62 per $100 assessed valuation, but Elliott said it is expected to drop to $3.529.

The spending plan is slightly larger than the preliminary budget approved last month because of increased revenues, according to Elliott who said reserves also were increased slightly.

The San Anselmo School District board also:

HIRING — Approved employing Eric Murphy as temporary teacher at Red Hill School for $9,168 for the coming year and asked Elliott to recruit a full-time psychologist.

PROMOTIONS — Approved naming Robert Balzan as lead teacher at Isabel Cook School with a 5 per cent increase in his regular teacher's pay to $14,641 a year. Named Rulon Cook vice principal of Red Hill and Hidden Valley schools, with a 13 per cent salary increase to $18,599.

CLOSED SESSION — Held a brief closed session to discuss a personnel disciplinary matter but took no action.

TRANSFERS — Approved seven transfers into the district homes and set policy on billing the students' home districts.

PLAYGROUND — Authorized Elliott to spend up to $6,072 to install sprinklers, grass and a track — if funds permit — at Red Hill School.

LEASING — Heard a report that the City of San Anselmo has not responded to a district offer to lease part of Isabel Cook School for city public works, park and recreation offices at $250 per year per room.

MEETINGS — Voted to cancel the scheduled meetings for Aug. 9 and Aug. 23, agreed to hold a special meeting Sept. 6 and their next regular meeting Sept. 13.

ADJOURNED — To 8 p.m. Sept. 6 in the Red Hill School library.

Woman Denies Drug Charges

One of two women arrested by Sausalito police on suspicion of drug violations denied charges Friday in Marin Municipal court, while the other is scheduled to enter a plea Monday.

A preliminary hearing for Carolyn Rae Marsh, 33, of Sausalito, was set for Aug. 14 after she pleaded innocent to possessing heroin, marijuana, marijuana for sale, narcotics paraphernalia and a hypodermic needle and cultivating marijuana.

Michele Elizabeth Parker, 28, of no known address, will plead Monday to charges of possessing narcotics or dangerous drugs. The pair was arrested when Sausalito police raided Miss Marsh's apartment at 212 Richardson Street.

Five Facing Charges Of Death Plot

I-J Special Report

NEW YORK — Five Coast Guardsmen, including a Rohnert Park resident, were indicted Friday on charges of conspiring to murder a Coast Guard intelligence agent who was investigating drug trafficking.

According to Thomas Edwards, assistant U.S. attorney, three of the men met with an undercover FBI agent, posing as a hired killer, in New York on July 24. They gave him $100 as a down payment for the murder of special agent Dennis Morgan and were subsequently arrested, Edwards said.

The plot against Morgan was uncovered when an enlisted man overheard the other men conspiring, police reported.

Nude Bathers Will Fight Charges

Attorneys for eight persons who reportedly were nude when arrested on West Marin beaches vowed Friday to fight their cases on constitutional grounds.

Attorney Paul Kayfetz of Bolinas and David Mayer of San Francisco, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union filed objections challenging the arrests with Judge Gary W. Thomas of Marin Municipal Court, who set a hearing for Thursday.

The lawyers contend that the county's anti-nudity law does not apply to their clients since nudity is already regulated by state law.

Three Oakland residents charged with nudity failed to appear in court Friday and Judge Thomas issued bench warrants for their arrest and set bail at $250 each.

The three are Marc James Cousineau, 18, Ronald Edward Maddox, 23, and Catherine Cecelia Reed, 18. They and Stephen Francis White, 22, and Susan Mehrings White, 23, also of Oakland, were arrested at Muir Beach July 21.

The Whites and Walter Voigt, 33, of Strawberry, will be represented by attorney Mayer, while five other persons arrested July 24 on Bolinas Beach will be represented by Kayfetz.

The five are Roland Jacopetti, 37, Elizabeth Kreusler Ehmann, 39, Nancy Joan Denmark, 26, and Theodore Harvey Saladin, 36, all of Bolinas, and Peter Holmes Davidson, 30, of Colorado. (Saladin's name originally was incorrectly reported as Sadalin by the Marin Sheriff's Department.)

THREE OF THE Villagers at Vine Village in Napa County sit by a lake on the 40-acre plus farm that is serving as an innovative alternative for mildly mentally retarded young adults. THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Researcher Resting In Tiburon

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. E. G. Williamson of London, who has both medical and electronics background, visited at the Tiburon home of Mrs. Charles Bigelow last week, taking a rest from her search for a "cool light."

"Guy" Williamson, acting for W. H. Capewell Clincs based in London, is in California interviewing electronics scientists to find a light strong enough to project through human tissue and onto a screen, but cold enough not to burn the tissue.

The cool light would be used to automate the spectographic exam which now helps diagnose disease from dead tissue, she said, changing it into a photographic system projecting a picture through living tissue onto a screen.

Guy Williamson and Martha Bigelow have been friends for six years, and have exchanged visits during their international travels.

DR. AND Mrs. Alvin Haag returned to their home in Novato after a month in Ireland just as their daughter, Mrs. J. Paul Silvestri Jr., her husband and son and daughter departed for two weeks Canadian vacation to Victoria, Vancouver Island, Calgary, Banff and Jasper.

Back home now on Belvedere Lagoon, Shirley Silvestri remarked that they most enjoyed the scenery on Vancouver Island.

EDNA BARY is spending about six weeks in Marin visiting her sister, Helen S. Wilson at her Larkspur home. Mrs. Bary, who has lived in Guadalajara, Mexico, for 10 years, arrived in Santa Barbara in May from her home in Mexico. There she visited with her son, Dr. David A. Bary, who is chairman of the foreign languages department at the University of California at Santa Barbara, and his wife and two children. During her stay there she celebrated her 90th birthday at a dinner party.

Since Mrs. Bary arrived in Marin she has been visiting with long-time friends in the Bay Area, as she formerly lived in Berkeley. Last Saturday Mrs. Bary and Mrs. Wilson walked Muir Woods "from end to end" and Mrs. Bary only regretted that part of it was fenced off from visitors' further exploration. Last Tuesday a Berkeley friend took the two women to visit Point Reyes National Seashore, and Thursday they dined at the Blue Rock Inn with a friend from Palo Alto, with whom Mrs. Bary taught school in Utah when they were young.

THE CALGARY Stampede in Canada and the Jackson Hole country in Wyoming were the highlights of a two-week vacation for Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Evans of Novato. Friends from the Smith River joined the Evanses in Novato and they flew together to Calgary, where the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were celebrating their 100th anniversary during the Stampede events.

Afterward the Evanses continued to Wyoming, flying over the Grand Tetons to spend eight days at a guest ranch in Jackson Hole, one of their favorite vacation areas.

NURSERY SCHOOL teachers Margaret Pragoff and Barbara del Amo of Corte Madera have just returned from nine "unbelievable" days in Arizona, where they were guests of Joseph Stacey, editor of "Arizona Highways" magazine.

Stacey is writing an article for the September issue about the Ladybug Pre-School in Kentfield, operated by Mmes. Pragoff and delAmo. The school reached the editor's attention when he was sent a copy of a story that appeared in the Independent-Journal about the school's graduation, which climaxed a year of ecology study by the pre-schoolers.

Highlight of the trip to Arizona for the two was a day spent watching Kachina dances performed on a rock mesa 7,000 feet high on the Hopi reservation in northern Arizona. Few non-Indians are allowed to view the religious dances, which have a hypnotic effect, according to Mrs. Pragoff. Special arrangements for the Marin women to attend were made by the editor and the Hopi chief.

The women also toured Scottsdale and attended the opening of a Navajo show there.

MAKING THEIR first trip to California, Mrs. Victor Boncassio of Waterbury, Conn., and her 15-year-old daughter Vickie will arrive Sunday to spend 10 days in Marin. They will be visiting Mrs. Boncassio's brothers and their families, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Campopiano and Mr. and Mrs. William Campopiano, all of Novato, and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Campopiano of Corte Madera.

A PICNIC party was given at Corte Madera Town Park Thursday night as a bon voyage for Bill Nagel by his parents, Ida Lee and her husband, Lt. Col. Walter E. Nagel of Corte Madera. Friends of Bill and his family gathered to say farewell prior to his leaving for an extended tour in Europe today. He will spend the first month touring with his sister Anita, who is living in Brussels.

A graduate of Redwood High School, Bill most recently has been employed in Sun Valley, Idaho with Scot-USA ski bootwear.

Lieutenant Colonel Nagel and his son Jim have returned from participating in the Cheyenne Frontier Days in Wyoming where he worked for KRAE radio in Cheyenne. During the festivities, the senior Nagel drove in the sulky races and jim rode a bucking pony in competition for the first time. They also found themselves videotaped for television in Japan by a Japanese crew covering the events.

THREE SPECIAL guests of Marin Panhellenic for the Wednesday fashion luncheon at the Marin Art and Garden Center will be the 1973 Panhellenic Award of Merit winners. Laurel Begovich of Terra Linda High School, Gerda Endemann of Redwood High School and Melinda Lencini of San Rafael High School.

Also taking a table for their sorority alumnae that day will be Mrs. Raymond Zanzot and Mrs. Betty Pelletier, both of Greenbrae. They will arrange the Alpha Gamma Delta alumnae that day when the Greek letter groups of Marin Panhellenic are among luncheon sponsors and models.

MRS CHARLES L. Howell, formerly of San Rafael and now a Houston, Tex., resident, attended the wedding of her granddaughter, Barbara Elizabeth Tracy, and David Lee Kirland in Houston earlier this month. Mrs. Howell is now living with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tracy (Virginia Howell) of Houston.

SCOTT McKINLEY of Lafayette, Colo., and Susan Bailey Harwood of Fairview Park, Ohio, were married recently at St. Aidan's Church in Boulder, Colo. Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. McKinley of Stockton, formerly of San Anselmo. He was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School and attended the College of Marin prior to his graduation from Colorado State University. The couple are living in Boulder, and Scott is assistant manager of Boulder Valley Farm in Lafayette, Colo.

New Proposals Bear Watching In Volunteer-Oriented Marin

By BETTY FROST

Volunteering is a way of life in Marin.

The Marin Volunteer Bureau has 1,500 organizations registered. This does not include churches, some hospitals or schools, the institutions which traditionally receive greatest contributions in the form of service from the community.

According to Margery Sell, assistant director of the Marin Volunteer Bureau, 600 would-be volunteers are interviewed each year. The interests of the individual are matched with the needs of an organization. At its best, this is the beginning of a satisfying relation for the volunteer and a helpful one for a worthy cause.

Such service is a part of the Judeo-Christian ethic, and follows the American pioneer practice where neighbors helped one another build a barn or construct a sod house in the prairie.

The variety of organizations depending upon volunteers in the county is intriguing. The traditional large organizations such as Marin General Hospital Volunteers and Sunny Hills, where hundreds of women work in guilds or branches to offer continuing support to these institutions, are at one end of the scale. At the other end of the scale are those who offer service on a one-to-one basis. These services include visiting the sick, tutoring a child who needs extra help with his studies and reading to the blind.

CATEGORIES IN the organization directory put out by the Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce go from arts to youth, and encompass music, community theater, neighborhood improvement clubs, sports for adults and children, conservation, dancing, family service groups, international exchange programs, the elderly, animals and local history.

Included in the 135 organizations listed for Mill Valley alone, are lodges, fraternal organizations and people who share common business or professional interests. Each of these organizations adds to its membership program the support of a worthwhile endeavor.

Private clubs, too, offer services, whether it is a youth training program in tennis, golf or boating or the community service to which women's clubs in Marin are dedicated.

Marin families are quick to respond to a need. A recent request for housing for foreign students wishing to spend the summer in private homes was oversubscribed in Marin. Some visitors, originally scheduled to stay in other communities, which were not so open-hearted, will be housed in this county.

The phenomenon of American volunteerism is receiving national attention, too.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., in an article, "A Time for the City" in the Saturday Evening Post May-June 1973 issue, makes volunteering an important part of his theory of recreating a neighborhood atmosphere in urban centers. Furthermore, he believes the federal government should encourage the kind of volunteering that is already an integral part of Marin's communal life. He suggests that Americans should get some tax credit for time devoted to public service, just as tax credit is offered for cash contributions to charitable foundations and other non-profit organizations concerned with good works.

MRS. R. PETER Straus of New York, named "A Woman of the Year" by the "Ladies Home Journal" in this year's contest, believes volunteers should be hired, fired, trained, supervised, promoted and given references if they decide to seek paid employment.

The New Yorker, who founded the nationwide volunteer-staffed community hot line, Call for Action, also thinks volunteers should have some benefits. She favors medical insurance for the volunteer, and tax deductions for both time and money expended in voluntary service. She also thinks volunteers should be able to deduct baby sitting expenses.

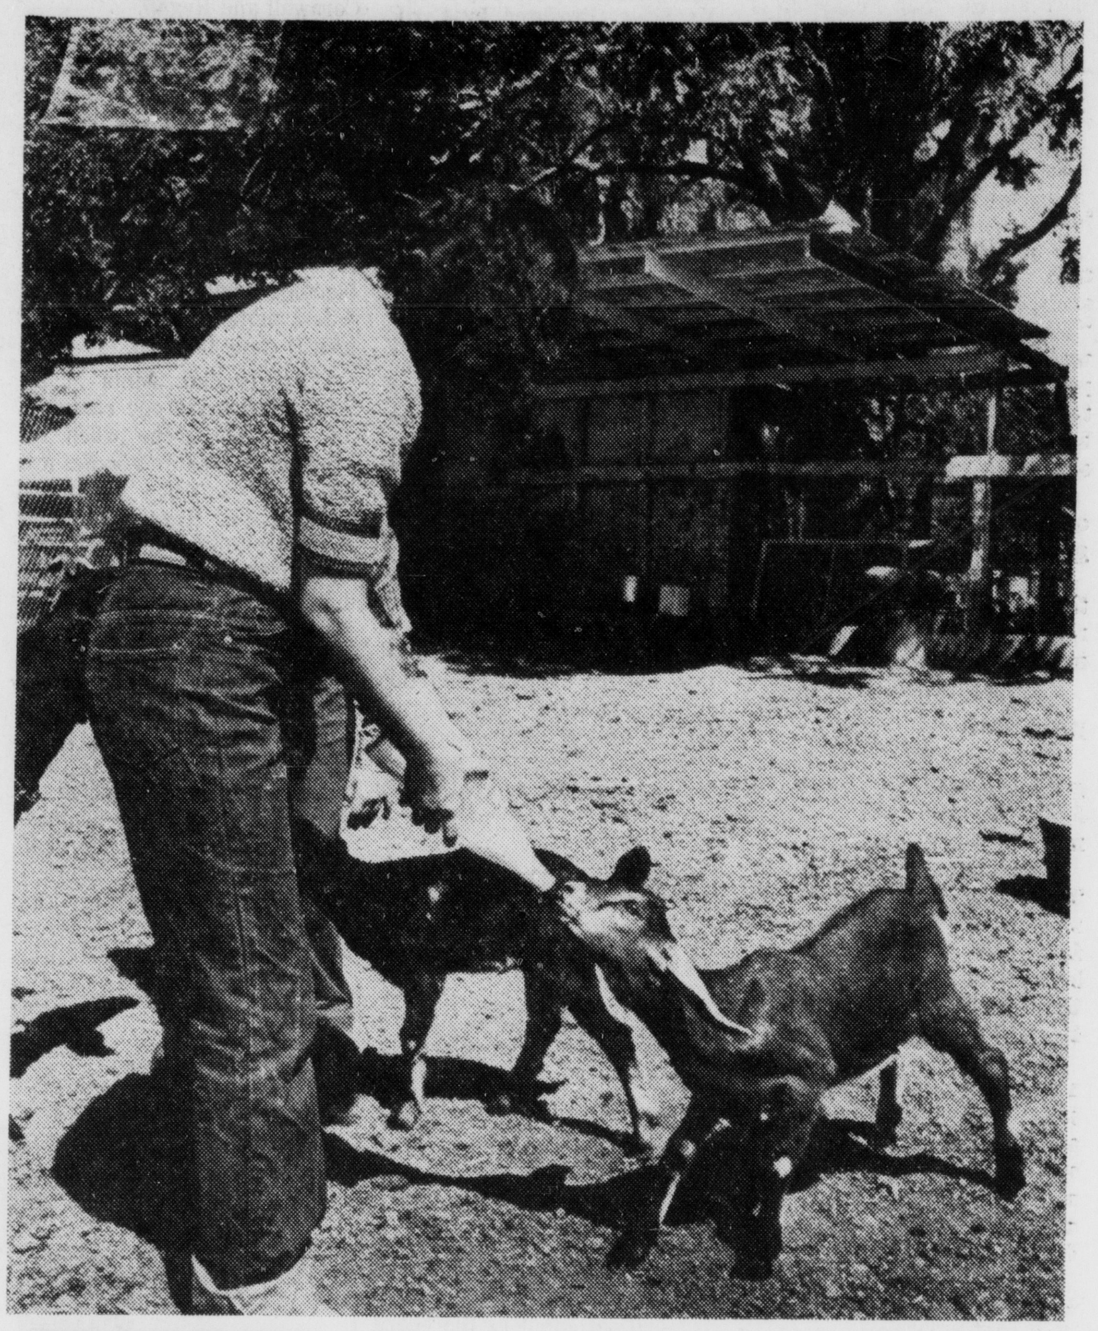
Vine Village: New Concept In Assisting The Retarded

By KAREN PETERSON



THE PHILOSOPHY of Vine Village is to "attain and maintain human dignity." And the staff at the village is preparing the young residents, soon to number up to 18, for work when they "graduate" from the farm. Agriculture plays a large part in their vocational training, and projects will include grape vineyards and catfish farming as well as animal husbandry.

Standing on the hill that overlooks most of the 40-acre farm in the wine country of Napa Valley, Michael Kerson said quietly, "There's no other place I'd rather be."

Michael is the director of Vine Village, a unique concept, in the treatment and care of mildly mentally retarded young adults located just outside the city of Napa.

The down payment on the land was made by Michael's mother, Grace Kerson of Belvedere, a founder of Marin House, a Larkspur residence for mildly retarded young women.

Living in the three buildings on the lake-dotted farm, the staff, which will maintain a one - three ratio with the villagers, alternate at being "house mothers" to the girls already in residence. The village will support from between 12 to 18 young men and women and each villager will be responsible for chores and household maintenance.

THE GOAL of Vine Village is to provide the young villagers with an environment where they can "live and grow in dignity, with increasing independence, and work at activities suited to their individual interests and abilities," said Michael.

The program is for independent living, said Inger, "and here they have the option to be independent."

"It's a whole new way of life for the Villagers," explained Michael, "It has to happen with the state closing down the hospitals. No one has taught them how to live. You can't kick them out and expect them to live on their own."

With the new state policy of phasing out the large institutions and returning the patients to the community, the staff of Vine Village believe they are developing a more productive and humane environment for the young people, and they hope to aid other such programs with their experience.

(Their program will be featured as a national model in the annual publication of the President's Committee on Retarded.)

After training at the village, the staff hopes their villagers will be ready to live, if they want, in town with other former villagers.

"We will slowly ween them away from the farm," said Michael.

"SOME MAY be permanent residents," added Nancy, "but the basic goal is to give them more independence; to help them reach their capacity for independent living."

While they expect many to leave for employment and independent living, no one will be severed from Vine Village involuntarily, and the staff will continue to maintain contact and some supervision with the "graduates" to make sure they are making a successful adjustment.

Vine Village is creating an agrarian program for the villagers which the staff believes will provide them with the best opportunity for employment.

The slower-paced, fairly unmechanized life of agriculture is ideal for the villagers, they believe, and for that reason programs at the village will soon include grape growing, catfish farming, animal husbandry, gardening and orchard care.

The farm has 15 acres suitable for grape culture and they hope to begin planting soon. The villagers and others living in the surrounding communities will be trained in cultivating and harvesting grapes commercially. In addition, the staff plans to teach the bottling of vinegars, which could develop into a source of employment.

The two lakes on the property are also suitable for catfish culture, they explained, and already the villagers are tending a large organic garden and taking care of and feeding the hens and dairy goats.

THIS WORK — training program will also include dollmaking, a skill already known to Michael and Nancy, who have designed both cloth and wooden toys commercially for the past two years.

The workshop is a craft shop, said Inger, and the vineyards are vocational. "They deserve to do creative things just like anyone else.

"It's an alternative for those who can't keep up," she added, "They can work at their own speed without competition."

The workshop will be located in one of the two barns now being renovated. It will also serve as a recreational hall for others in the community and for weekend dances.

The staff also hopes to start a day care program for young adults in the community.

The girls living at Vine Village come from different backgrounds, including Napa and Sonoma State Hospitals, Clausen House in Oakland and some have lived at home.

"We're proud of the cross-section," said Kathleen, "It's important for exposure, and they're treated like adults. They're on their own."

"We've had large response about the village," said Micahel. "There's a great deal of need for what we're doing and I hope more people will do this."

THE VILLAGERS accepted at Vine Village are judged on need, said Michael, and already waiting lists for both houses have been filled.

The monthly charge for 24-hour care is minimal, said Inger.

When the Vine Village proposal was first brought before the board of supervisors, it was defeated in a 3-2 vote.

"The neighbors protested, said Michael, "They didn't know what we were going to do here. There was a lack of information, and we didn't expect the opposition. The neighbors thought there would be 100 unsupervised people running around here."

THE STAFF then sent letters of introduction to those opposed to the village.

"We're meeting the neighbors now, at the real community level," said Michael. "They're incredibly nice and warm. Their fears were based on paranoia, a fear of the unknown."

The revised Vine Village program was passed for six women residents. Approval will be sought next year for the two additional houses on the farm.

"Once people see Vine Village," said Michael, "they will realize that it is an asset to the community. We're taking the load off of them."

Hitchhiker Shows Some Real Originality With His Sign

RAP:

At a freeway entrance the other day I saw three hitchhikers. One carried a sign saying "Los Angeles," the second waved a placard, "Anywhere you go!," but the third was truly inspired. His sign, in beautiful scrolls proclaimed simply, "Mother!"

I didn't linger to see which one got the first ride, but I can guess.—KATHY

NOTE FROM SUE: And then there was the thumber who got results with his sign announcing, "We give Green Stamps!" . . .Wonder if he really did?

DEAR RAP:

Here's a switch. I wanted to get to Chicago on the cheap, so I figured I'd get more rides if my hair was short.

Well, I was out there thumbing, with my face and the top of my head getting sunburned from lack of sideburns and hair, when a cop car stopped. He didn't bother the hairy guys, but I got a real going over.

He thought I was AWOL from a nearby Army camp. Seems a solider had broken a bottle over another trainee's head, and split. Having short hair, I was automatically suspected. Two hours and a lot of talking later, I was released.

Maybe, these days, it's safer for a man to wear his hair long. He's not so conspicuous.—CAN'T WIN

NOTE TO READERS:

Happy ending: C.W. made it to Chicago. His letter was posted from there.—HELEN

DEAR SUE:

I'm studying to be an R.N., and I work with a guy I'm madly in love with, but I can't face him. When I get in the elevator with him, I draw as far away as possible and he does all the talking, if any is done. It's all I can do to say "Hi."

I've had little crushes before, but nothing like this. I'd jump at the chance to marry him. If there was a choice, I'd die for him. Every once in a while I almost get the nerve to blurt out how much I love him, but after I say his name, then I get chicken and pretend I've forgotten what I wanted to say.

DEAR C:

You're hung-up, girl! Look, using phrases like "marry him" or "die for him" is ridiculous at this point. You haven't even had a real conversation with the guy.

Cool down and try for friendship first. Don't ruin your chances with a wrong start that would scare most men right out of the elevator (between floors yet).—SUE

DEAR HELEN:

I've been kidding (in earnest) my new wife about getting fat. She is! She got even by cooking diet foods and serving cottage cheese and no desserts. She said if she has to suffer for me, I'll suffer too. Please knock some sense into her head, Helen, like a mother should.—PORK CHOPS, POTATO AND PIE MAN

DEAR PCPPM:

Oh come on, suffer a little — and eat your pie, etc. for lunch. If you aren't willing to help your wife lose those added pounds (which came, no doubt, from overfeeding you), then you shouldn't have griped. Once she sheds them, you two can work out sensible meal plans that will keep you both happy and in trim.—HELEN

Short Sleeve Length No Problem

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

Years ago we wore bracelet-length sleeves, then suddenly they were out of style because the sleeve of a long dress would show under the shorter suit or coat-length sleeve. Now, in the newest fashions, I see the shorter length sleeve again. Won't this cause the same problems?

MRS. R.E.H.

DEAR MRS. R.E.H.,

Yes, it does create the same problem. Only today, the fashion picture is different. It's new to have the layered look and this is achieved by wearing a sweater or body shirts under coat or jackets. The neckline is exposed and built in with the high sweater look and the sleeves extend with a sweater-knit ribbing.

This look was introduced a few seasons ago and was influenced by the Chinese coolie coat. It takes several years for a fashion to develop and as you must know, fashion does repeat itself, not to the exact same details, but the same feeling is interpreted in another way. As you will note in the sketches, these jackets look well with skirts as well as pants.

DEAR EUNICE,

I am making a blazer jacket from a designer pattern. No matter what I do, the shoulder seam twists to the back. Was there an error in the pattern?

NANCY W.

DEAR NANCY,

If you are referring to the same pattern I have in mind, the designer definitely intended the shoulder seam to angle off toward the back. One way to be certain, when you are in doubt, is to check the marks on your pattern. The shoulder will always be marked. If the seam is not exactly on the shoulder, you will find extra marks for the shoulder. We must all be very careful to check out any markings on the pattern itself. It can help make the construction much simpler.

At the same time, always mark the shoulder of the sleeves themselves. These marks must correspond to the shoulder marks of your garment.

The very same is true of the underarm seam. If your sleeve is a two-piece sleeve, the seam will not correspond with the underarm seam of the garment. Instead, you will find a mark at the center of the underarm section of the sleeve indicating the underarm. This must be matched to the underarm seam or mark on your garment.

DEAR EUNICE,

My daughter and I are busy making her wardrobe for her first year away from home at college. There are so many new fake suedes and leathers available that we are thoroughly confused. Some say they can be dry cleaned. Others say they should be washed, and still others say not to wash or to dry clean, but to sponge off with a damp cloth. I thought anything that is made of polyester is washable. How in the world will she know what to do with these clothes when she is away from home?

MRS. C.H.

DEAR MRS. C.H.,

Sorry, but this is not only true of fake leathers, but most fabrics today. Be sure you know what the instructions are when you leave the fabric shop. It's a good idea to have the clerk actually mark it on the sales ticket. As soon as you get home, I would suggest you print the instructions on a piece of marking tape and tack it permanently into a pocket or seam of the garment.

It's so simple to remember what to do at the time, but we all forget when confronted with many types of fabrics. These new fakes are fantastic, but must be treated with respect.

The same precautions must be taken for all fabrics today. If they are going to be washed, be sure and wash them first. This takes away any chance of shrinking. At the same time, be sure to shrink the zippers and any trim you will be using.

For your free Fabric Conversion Chart send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Marin Golf Courses Catering To Youth

By RON LENT

Youth must be served.

Certainly this truism is applicable to sports in general and golf in particular.

Fairway followers in Marin County will tell you that the local courses are exceedingly helpful in planting the seeds of golfing desire into a field of growing youth. All major Marin courses, private or otherwise, are seeking to foster the game among the under-18 set.

They include: (private) Marin Country Club and Meadow Club in Fairfax; (semi-private) Peacock Gap in San Rafael, Indian Valley and San Geronimo Golf Clubs; and (public) Mill Valley Golf Course.

Of these courses, it is said that San Geronimo has the most extensive summer juniors program in Marin. Assistant pro Tony Savala says that "We had a clinic going every day last week (July 23-27)."

About 60 took part in the free public clinics running three hours daily directed primarily by pro Wayne Wallick and Savala.

Savala said "The kids were very enthusiastic and eager to learn. They said afterwards that they wanted more, so we decided to hold a clinic every week (through August). They've been asking some good questions: like how to get lift into the ball.

"Because of their interest, we're going to have the clinics again next summer and maybe have a juniors' tourney at the end of a one-week clinic."

A juniors' tourney at San Geronimo would prove a welcome addition there, because, said Savala, "We don't have any here now. We try to get juniors to play in tournaments out of town. It uplifts their game by playing in these competitive situations. And they are our golfers of the future."

Except for the public course in Mill Valley, the remaining golfing establishments limit their free clinics to members only.

Example: Indian Valley club pro Jeff McAndrew presents a week-long clinic in June after school lets out. "I try to show the basics and get up their interest. Once they're interested, they advance very fast. And, at that point, I just guide them along — give them pointers."

This summer, he had 25 youngsters taking part in the 10-year-old program.

McAndrew also gives junior lessons to Novato Unified School District students below the high school level. This project takes place in August and September and has about 20 students. "The classes are smaller, but it makes for better control and more personal instruction," said McAndrew.

Example: Personal instruction is also the theme at Meadow Club where assistant pro Larry Babica says that the clinics have 15 boys and 12 girls. The six-week clinic ran from the middle of June to the end of July. Boys came Wednesdays, girls on Fridays.

Babica claims that it is hard to get girls started, but "once they get into it, they have a lot of enthusiasm."

The assistant pro adds that Meadow Club has a problem peculiar to its locale, namely: "We're isolated and out in the hills. We're a little tougher for people to get to."

Example: Marin Country Club assistant pro Paul Fakundiny states that "We have our (one-day) clinics twice a month during summer. We also have some kids representing us in the Bay Cities League." Ten Bay Area courses have junior teams in this 10-week competition playing Saturdays during summers.

Fakundiny notes that his club has an active juniors program in summer but not in winter. "Winter is too hard due to the weather factor, and also because the kids are in school. It's tough to get them together then."

Example: Mill Valley Golf Course assistant pro Tom Wishon admits "We didn't have much going in the past, so we reorganized our junior club for our boys (13-16 years old). We have 15 boys (who paid $3 to join) who are most enthusiastic. They want tournaments, so we'll have a junior club championship later this month. We might even put on a clinic beforehand.

"It should be easier to expand now, because of the good interest level. We should keep it up in the fall, if the weather is good. We know the kids will be around."

Indeed. The youngsters will be around. If the good weather continues in the months ahead, young golfers will look toward the local fairways for play or instruction.

A's Blue Gives Singer Accolades

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Vida Blue kept the Oakland A's from losing ground in the American League West race but the sweat he wiped from his brow afterwards wasn't just from exhaustion.

"Singer pitched a heckuva ballgame and I feel very good and very lucky to come out on top of this one," Blue said.

The 24-year-old Blue had just outlasted California's Bill Singer in a 2-1, 11-inning decision Friday night in which he gained his first victory over the Angels this season in three starts.

Both pitchers were working on no-hitters until Bob Oliver opened the fifth inning with a single against Blue and Gene Tenace spoiled Singer's bid with a double to start the eighth.

Singer finished the game giving up just three hits and striking out 13 to take over second place in the major league strikeout race with 173. Teammate Nolan Ryan leads with 250.

Blue was not disconcerted about taking a backseat to Singer in the statistics, however.

"I'm always happy when I win," Blue said. "It's the big 'W' by your name in tomorrow's paper and that's what counts. I'm really looking forward to my next start."

The win enabled the A's, who completed their first day in

Raiders To Use 3 QBs Against Pats

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders open their National Football League exhibition schedule here Sunday night against the New England Patriots, who pulled an upset the last time the Raiders visited.

Two years ago, the Raiders and Patriots opened the regular National Football League season here and the Pats won 20-6 behind rookie quarterback Jim Plunkett in the first official NFL game at Schaefer Stadium.

Oakland coach John Madden may use three quarterbacks Sunday night, Daryle Lamonica, Ken Stabler and Don Milan. He's indicated that Milan, with two years of taxi squad experience, will see the most duty.

"You can't help but be a little nervous. I've wanted the chance to play the last few years and now it's here," says Milan, 24.

The biggest 1973 addition to the Raiders, defensive end Bubba Smith, is expected to be held out of the preseason opener. He was acquired from the Baltimore Colts just two weeks ago and Madden is in no hurry to use him.

No. 1 draft pick Ray Guy, the long-range punter from Southern Mississippi, is among the rookies who will be playing for Oakland. The Patriots' rookies include running back Sam Cunningham and guard John Hannah.

Former Stanford star Plunkett completed 12 of 19 passes for 104 yards last weekend when the Patriots opened with a 20-7 loss to the San Francisco 49ers at Canton, Ohio. The Pats started Tom Reynolds and Reggie Rucker at wide receiver in that game, and will have rookie Darryl Stingley of Purdue available to help Sunday night.

The Raiders' starters are expected to be all veterans, but there are some new faces in the starting lineup. Bob Moore will be at tight end instead of Ray Chester, who went to Baltimore in the trade for Smith.

Gus Otto, a starting outside linebacker for the Raiders at this time last year, has announced his retirement. Gerald Irons now holds the job.

Owens Scores 24 To Lead Cage Win

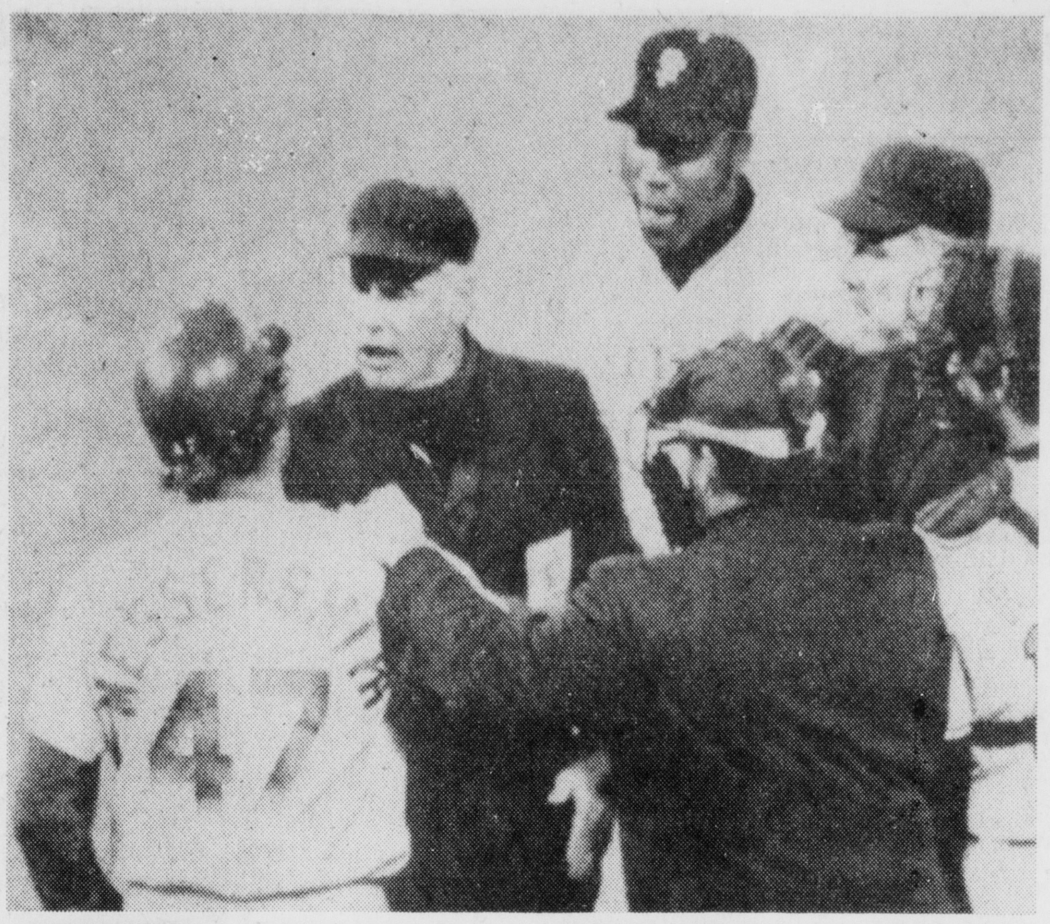
In other games, Bulldogs defeated the Crusaders 47-38 and Pirates edged the Cardinals 48-47.



RHUBARB — Umpire Shag Crawford stood between Los Angeles Dodgers' pitcher Andy Messersmith (47) and San Francisco Giants' first baseman Willie McCovey during an argument Friday night at Candlestick Park. Messersmith was batting in the ninth inning when San Francisco relief pitcher Elias Sosa nearly hit the Dodgers' right-hander with a pitch. During the rhubarb that ensued, McCovey and Messersmith exchanged words and nearly came to blows. Umpires Andy Olsen (hand on Messersmith) and John Kibler also stepped between Messersmith and McCovey. The Dodgers defeated the Giants, 3-0. (UPI Telephoto)

MANAGER FOX SAYS:

Messersmith Dominated Game Against The Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Andy Messersmith used to watch the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants play on television.

"But you have to be in one of the games before you know what the rivalry is all about," the Dodger right-hander said after beating the Giants 3-0 with a three-hitter Friday night.

"It's different when we play the Giants than it is with any other team in the league," he continued. "We're not the best of friends."

Messersmith found himself in the middle of a dispute that almost erupted into a fight in the ninth inning. It came after Elias Sosa brushed him back with an inside pitch.

Messersmith took a couple steps toward the mound but was restrained. He shouted something in the direction of Willie McCovey and the big Giants first baseman had to be held back as he went after Messersmith.

"You'll have to ask Sosa if he

A Man's Dream Comes True With Revival Of Olympics

By VICTOR A. SCHLICH
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

The stadium in Athens buzzed with excitement in 1896 as Harvard student James B.Connolly strode forward to receive his medal as Olympic champion — the first winner in more than 1,500 years. This was a historic moment for Connolly and for international sports.

The ceremony also marked a happy end to a long struggle for a small, wiry man seated next to the King and Queen of Greece in the royal box. Baron Pierre de Coubertin had worked years to revive the Olympics as an international sports event.

His efforts since have been remembered on postage stamps by several nations, among them Haiti, which included his portrait in its stamps commemorating the 1960 Olympic Games.

Baron de Coubertin developed a keen interest in history while a student at St. Cyr, the French West Point. There, he developed a theory that France's defeat in the Franco-Prussian War was due largely to the lack of any national sense of vigor.

He believed this lack stemmed from the absence of competitive sports in French schools and universities. It was a strange thought for someone not at all athletically inclined himself.

He discussed his theory with anyone who would listen and began studying the educational systems of other nations for clues. He found that competitive sports played an important role in U.S. and British schools.

While the diminutive Parisian was doing his research German archaeologists uncovered the remains of the ancient Greek city of Olympia. The last Olympic Games had been held there some 15 centuries earlier.

Pierre de Coubertin visited the ancient city and soon began thinking about reviving the Olympics. But instead of a strictly Greek event, he saw them as a worldwide sports event.

At a meeting of the Amateur Sports Union in Paris, Count de Coubertin pleaded, "Let us export oarsmen, runners, and fencers. Here is the free trade of the future. On the day when it shall take place, the cause of peace will have received new and powerful support."

His listeners were apathetic and unimpressed, yet Count de Coubertin did not surrender easily. He persisted and renewed his proposal at a meeting in 1894 of an international athletic congress. Now, the reception was enthusiastic and plans were made for the modern Olympics.

At first it was decided to hold the games in the stadium at the ancient city of Olympia, but it had been so ravaged by the years that reconstruction was not possible. So the site was shifted to Athens.

To Count de Coubertin, the games were more than an opportunity to establish athletic records. He saw in them a chance for people from all parts of the world to meet, to get to know each other on the field of friendly sports combat.

When the King of Greece turned to congratulate Count de Coubertin after Connolly received the first olive crown, tears streamed down the cheeks of the little Frenchman who had given birth to a giant idea.

RECORD FALLS

DeMont In A Swim Win

I-J Special Report

His first helped to keep the Marin Aquatic Club in the top six, but no team scores were available. "We're still doing very well," Marin coach Don Swartz said today.

DeMont, who went after the world record in the 1,500-meter free race today, set a meet record for the 200-free with a 1:56.04. The previous mark was 1:56.4.

DeMont also took a third place in the 400-meter individual medley in 4:42.83, and anchored the men's 800-meter free relay which finished 14th.

Robin Backhaus of San Rafael, another 1972 Olympian, did not win an event Friday, but contributed mightily to the Marin cause. He took a third behind DeMont in the 200 free in 1:57.12 and came in fifth in the 200-meter butterfly with a 2:08.65.

Marin got a good effort in the men's 100-meter breaststroke from Keith Strange, who finished fifth. His time of 1:10.76 was one-tenth of a second faster than his previous best time he set in the preliminaries.

In that same event, Jeff Miller and Dan Stewart swam their best ever times with a 1:13.6 and 1:15.6 respectively.

Art Morrill shattered his previous best time in the 400 individual medley by two seconds with a 4:51.2, good for 10th place behind Steve Furniss of the Huntington Beach Aquatic Club.

The men's 800 free relay, with Backhaus, Strange, Morrill and DeMont, finished 14th with a time of 8:23.3. The women's 800 free relay took 18th place in 9:22.5, with Jo Hislop, Susan Kay, Cyndi Salvisberg and Maura Campion.

The tournament concluded today, and "if we can survive the relays, we can finish in the top six," according to Swartz. "We've had two good days, and if we can finish out with a third, we'll go home happy."

Meanwhile, Jorge Delgado of Pasadena, broke the South American, Ecuadorian and meet 200-meter butterfly records Friday night, the second day of the swim meet.

The 19-year-old native of Guayaguil, Ecuador, had a time of 2:04.38, his best. It was the fastest in the world this season.

His previous best was 2:04.6, which earned him a fourth place in the 1972 Munich Olympics.

World record holder Cathy Carr of Albuquerque, N.M., had to go all-out to take a narrow decision over Amy Bettencourt of Santa Clara in the womens' 100-meter breaststroke. Her time of 1:17.38 was considerably slower than her world record of 1:13.58 set in the 1972 Olympics.

MOOREHEAD WINS

A Surprise In Mill Valley Net

Peter Moorehead proved to be the biggest surprise of the 15th annual Marin Junior Hardcourt Tennis Championships Friday by winning the Boys 16 singles crown with a 6-1, 7-6 victory over Mark Cullers of Sacramento.

Unseeded in the five day tournament sponsored by the Mill Valley Tennis Club, Moorehead of San Mateo started his unforseen assault on the seedings with an upset over fourth-seeded Chris Kerley. He followed that up with wins over sixth-seeded Tom Boyd and top-seeded Doug Carlisle. So much for the seedings.

In the Boys singles competition, just one top-seeded player won a title. Chip Hooper of Sunnyvale won the Boys 16 championship with a 6-1, 7-6 victory over seventh-seeded John Rosenberg of Saratoga.

In Boys 12, third-seeded Greg Sherman of San Jose beat Dennis Sandkulla of San Bruno, 6-2, 6-4, to win the title.

Second-seeded Carlos Aguilar of Atherton took the Boys 18 championship with a tough 6-3, 1-6, 6-4 victory over third-seeded Dave Lucky of Alameda.

The Girls singles division was a little more predictable, with three of the four titles going to top-seeded players.

The only one that did not was in Girls 18 where third-seeded Joan Pennello of Sacramento beat unseeded Sally Thompson of Los Altos, 7-6, 6-0.

In Girls 12, Kelley Hook of Tiburon scored a 6-2, 6-2 victory over unseeded Rhonda Holt of San Quentin to win the championship.

In Girls 14, top-seeded Jean.

Net Loop Has 8 Stars Committed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Proudly announcing it had signed Billie Jean King and John Newcombe and saying that it had eight other unnamed but top players committed, the World Team Tennis League held its 16-team draft Friday amid some confusion.

Billie Jean, at an estimated $100,000 a year for five years with Philadelphia, Newcombe, at $75,000 for five with Houston, were not in the first round selection since they had already agreed to the terms offered by the cities where they wished to play.

The other eight, according to Steve Arnold, player recruitment director for the 16-team league, had come to terms with the league but went into the draft pool and the teams selecting them would take over the contracts.

With each franchise seeking a team which would play 44 "games" of a men's singles, a women's singles, and a mixed doubles, the first round was a strange mixture of names and sexes.

Conspicuous by their absence in the first call-over were Stan Smith, Ilie Nastase, Wimbledon champion Jan Kodes and Arthur Ashe.

Miami, given first pick by lot, went for 18-year-old Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., America's darling of the court two years ago but who has yet to win a major title.

Rod Laver and Ken Rosewall, both nearing the end of astonishing careers, were grabbed by San Diego and Pittsburgh, respectively. While the men are members of the Association of Tennis Professionals, whose executive board is opposed to the new league, they could conceivably pick up an additional $100,000 by playing team tennis.

Dennis Murphy, president of the league who helped found the American Basketball Association and the World Hockey League, stressed his new organization, which has not sought sanction from the International Lawn Tennis Federation nor with Lamar Hunt of World Championship Tennis, is not seeking a fight with anyone, least of all Hunt.

"Our schedule, from May to June, won't conflict with WCT or Wimbledon," said Murphy.

Of the 14 named in the first round, five were women, nine were men. Miss Evert headed the list with Kerry Melville going to Boston, Rosie Casals to Detroit, Margaret Court to Golden Gate (Oakland-San Francisco) and Linda Tuero to Minnesota. In addition to Laver, Rosewall and Connors, the men were John Alexander to Los Angeles, Roy Emerson to New York, Bjorn Borg to Cleveland, Marty Riessen to Chicago, Tom Okker to Toronto and Tony Roche to Denver.

Smith was not chosen until the third round by Minnesota, Nastase went to San Diego in the fourth round, Kodes to San Diego on the fifth and Ashe to New York on the fifth.

San Rafael's Sharon Walsh was selected by Boston on the fourth round.

Later rounds dredged up some real oldtimers: Bobby Riggs to Chicago on the ninth go-round, Pancho Gonzalez to Cleveland on the sixth and Pancho Segura to Golden Gate on the tenth.

There was even a husband-wife combination drawn as a single selection on the fourth round. Clark and Carole Graebner have committed themselves to play for Cleveland. Clark will play regularly, with Carole available for emergency duty should one of the Cleveland girls be unable to play. The contract is in the $50,000 range for two years.

49er Kickers Share Duties Vs. Browns

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — Tom Wittum, trying to move ahead of both punter Jim McCann and place kicker Bruce Gossett, will alternate with McCann Monday night in the San Francisco 49er exhibition battle at Cleveland against the Browns.

Wittum, a taxi squader last season, averaged 45.5 on four punts and kicked field goals of 12 and 17 yards in the 20-7 win over New England and has been booting well in practice.

McCann averaged only 39.3 last year but his kicks are high and his left-footed boots arrive with a reverse twist that seems to produce more than the average number of fumbles. Receivers averaged only 3.5 yards per runback.

Coach Dick Nolan, meanwhile, tightened security at his practice sessions here after noticing "too many people taking notes."

Hepner of San Francisco scored a 6-3, 6-1 win over fourth-seeded Stacey Naugle of Saratoga for her crown.

Top-seeded Mareen (Peanut) Louis of San Francisco added another title to her burgeoning scrapbook with a comeback, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, victory over unseeded Jill Toney of Diablo.

The San Rafael duo of Frank Casella and Bobby Greene upset the third-seeded team of John Miranda and Brian Barlay, 6-2, 6-4 to win the Boys 14 doubles crown.

Lisa Beritzhoff of Mill Valley teamed with Toney to beat the Piedmont tandem of Peggy Kincaid and Debbie Douglas for the Girls 16 doubles title.

second place after holding the division lead for more than a month, to keep pace with the winning Kansas City Royals.

Oakland Manager Dick Williams made no apologies, however, for his starter, who was aided by an unearned run scored by his teammates in the second inning on a walk, an error by third baseman Al Gallagher and a fielder's choice.

"That's as good a game as I've seen Vida Blue pitch," Williams said. "He was just great. His combinations were perfect."

Blue, 10-7, allowed five hits and struck out six before giving way to Rollie Fingers in the 11th.

Singer said, "it's a shame how they got their runs but I feel that I'm back in the groove now and should win a lot more games."

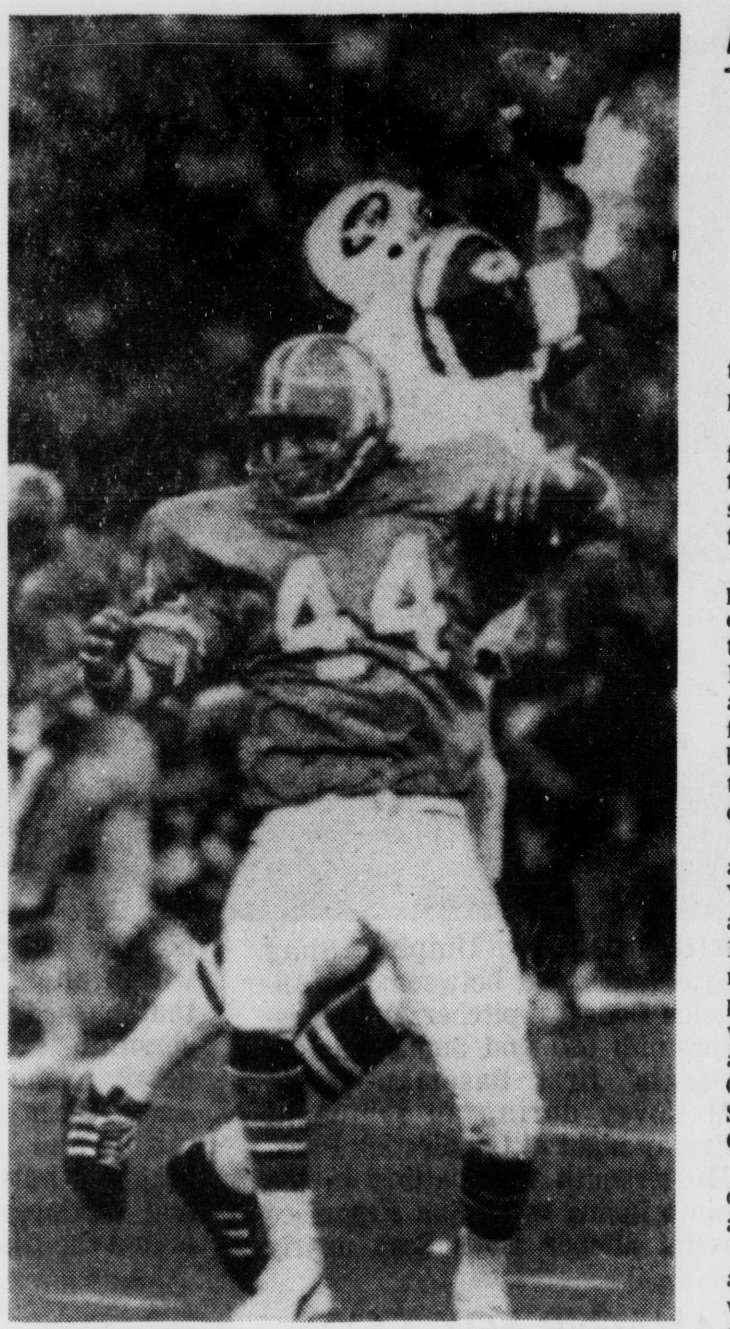
Sharon Defeated

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI) — San Rafael's Sharon Walsh bowed Friday 6-3, 6-2 to Los Angeles' Laurie Tenney in the $25,000 Atlantic City Tennis Classic here.



WHERE'S THE BALL — New York Jets' linebacker Ralph Baker intercepted Houston Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini's pass during the first quarter Friday night in Houston. Oilers' intended receiver Fred Willis (44) was looking for the pass when Baker made the theft during the National Football League pre-season opener for both clubs. New York won, 16-13. was throwing at me," Messersmith said. Sosa said the pitch got away from him.

Messersmith, now 11-6, now has pitched two three-hitters within a week against the Giants.

"I think it helps to pitch against a team a few times. I'm learning about the hitters. People can tell you about them but you have to see them yourself. The key to beating the Giants is keeping Bobby Bonds off the bases. We did that pretty well."

Steve Garvey paced the Dodger attack on Tom Bradley, 9-10, with three hits, including a triple.

Manager Charlie Fox of the Giants was impressed with Messersmith, a pitcher he tried to get from California before the Dodgers did.

"Messersmith dominated the game. He had three pitches and got them all over the plate."

The Giants made two roster changes in an attempt to get some batting punch. They called up Steve Ontiveros and Bruce Miller from their Phoenix farm team.

Ontiveros was hitting .357 and Miller .312. Both are infielders although Ontiveros can play the outfield. To make room, they sent pitcher Charlie Williams and infielder Domi Blanco to Phoenix.

Concord Wins Little League Baseball Title

Concord National scored a run in the ninth inning on a passed ball Friday night to beat West Vallejo-Mare Island, 3-2, and win the sectional championship of the Little League All-Star Tournament at Rancho Field in Novato.

Concord scored single runs in the third and fifth innings, but West Vallejo came back to tie the game in the bottom of each of those frames.

Eric Messick led off the ninth with a walk for Concord, and after being moved to third, he scored the winning run on a passed ball.

Nick Storr went the distance for Concord to pick up the win. He allowed just three hits, struck out seven and walked none.

Softball Results

Horse Shoe and McArthurs Tavern tied 9-9, William Timmer edged Youngbloods 8-7, and MMWD beat Big Four Rents 5-4 in San Rafael Recreation Department adult softball league play Friday night at Albert Field.

Cowboys' Stowe Shows What He Has Learned

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

It didn't take Otto Stowe long to show how much he learned playing behind Paul Warfield.

Stowe, a backup man to Warfield at Miami last season, was traded to Dallas in the off-season. Friday night he made the Cowboys look like geniuses.

He caught two touchdown passes as Dallas opened its exhibition season with a 24-7 trouncing of the Los Angeles Rams. Charley Waters also had a 54-yard interception return for a touchdown and the Cowboy defense completely throttled veteran John Hadl in his debut as a Ram quarterback.

In the only other pre-season action Friday night, the New York Jets edged Houston 16-13 and Detroit upset Washington 17-14. In action tonight, Baltimore is at Pittsburgh, Buffalo plays Philadelphia at Jacksonville, Fla., Cincinnati is at Miami, New Orleans at Kansas City, the New York Giants at San Diego and Chicago takes on Green Bay at Milwaukee.

Oakland is at New England on Sunday and San Francisco is at Cleveland Monday night.

After a scoreless first period, a crowd of over 75,000 fans watched Roger Staubach throw a 16-yard pass to Stowe for the first score. Toni Fritsch's 20-yard field goal gave Dallas a 10-0 halftime lead and the Cowboys iced the game in the third period when Waters made his TD run and Jack Concannon hit Stowe with a 12-yard TD pass.

James Harris, in relief of Hadl, who was booed soundly, threw 13 yards to Harold Jackson in the last period for the only Rams' score.

The Lions scored a pair of touchdowns in the second quarter and added a fourth quarter field goal by Errol Mann to beat Washington and spoil Duane Thomas' return to pro football.

Greg Landry threw nine yards to Larry Walton for one score and after the Redskins tied the game on a two-yard pass from Bill Kilmer to Jerry Smith, Mel Farr burst 47 yards for a TD and Mann kicked a 10-yard field goal. Rookie Moses Denson ran six yards in the last period for Washington's only TD.

Thomas, who had not played since the January, 1972 Super Bowl when he led Dallas to victory, gained 36 yards on 11 carries and helped set up the Redskin score.

"He looked like the Duane Thomas of old," said Redskins' Coach George Allen. "He's learned our offense but he still has a lot to learn. He's disappointed with his performance and I'd appreciate it if you guys (press) wouldn't try to talk to him. We've got a chance to save a guy and a performer and if you don't want to interfere, stay away from him."

Running back Larry Brown, the National Football Conference Player of the year last season, did not play for Washington because of a virus infection.

Bobby Howfield's third field goal of the game, a 23-yarder with 1:35 left to play, lifted the Jets over Houston. With the Oilers leading 3-0, Al Woodall came off the bench in the secand period to spark a 91-yard drive capped by Mike Adamle's six-yard TD run that gave New York the lead.

Howfield boosted it to 10-3 at the half with a 44-yard field goal but a 35-yard TD pass from Dan Pastorini to Clifford McNeil and Skip Butler's 39-yard field goal gave Houston a 13-10 lead. Howfield tied it with a 31-yarder before winning it in the last period.

In action around the camps Friday, Minnnsota signed defensive back Jackie Wallace, their No. 2 draft choice from Arizona and dealt linebacker Greg Slough to the Rams. Minnesota and St. Louis meet in a controlled scrimmage tonight.

Rentzel Set Back In Court

Combined AP & UPI

LOS ANGELES — A Federal court judge Friday denied a request by Lance Rentzel, the suspended Los Angeles Rams' receiver, to have his suspension lifted.

Rentzel filed a similar action in Superior Court, however, and a decision will be handed down Monday.

Rentzel missed the Rams' exhibition season opener against Dallas Friday night because of the suspension, which was handed down July 20 by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle. The suspension stemmed from Rentzel's conviction for possession of marijuana in May. That case is currently being appealed.

Rentzel, along with the NFL Players' Association, filed the Federal court action Thursday, charging that his suspension would cause him irreparable harm.

U.S. District Judge Charles H. Carr denied the request, saying, "There is no indication that irreparable damage will occur." Rentzel dropped the request.

Tennis

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Tom Gorman of Seattle Friday defeated Chile's Jaime Fillol 17-15, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 in the American Zone Davis Cup finals, giving the United States a 1-0 lead in the competition.

Basketball

CINCINNATI — George Wilson, former player of the National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves, Friday filed a $1.4 million suit in U.S. District Court charging that he was cut from the team because of a racial quota system.

Baseball

Golf

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Rookie Laura Baugh Friday fired a three-under-par 69 and earned a share of the first round lead in the $35,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Classic along with Judy Rankin, Murle Breer and Donna Young.

HARRISON, N.Y. — Tom Weiskopf fashioned an eight-under-par 64 and took a three-stroke lead after the first round Friday of the rain-delayed $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Emil Zatopek wins 5,000 meters in 1952 Olympics.

TIME MACHINE

Zatopek Takes 3 Olympic Victories

HELSINKI, Finland — The greatest runner circles the track in Helsinki. The Flying Finn, Paavo Nurmi, with torch in hand, is part of the opening day ceremonies for the 1952 Olympic Games.

Nurmi dominated distance running in the 1920's and was a great Olympic champion.

The Finns have always loved great distance runners and there is a talented group of them here at these games.

In the first final of the track and field events, Zatopek outclasses an excellent field in winning the 10,000 meters in Olympic record time.

Most of these same runners also enter the 5,000 meter run. A crowd of 70,000 watches as one of the great footraces in Olympic history begins to unfold.

Four of the world's best runners leave the rest of the field behind and stay bunched up for almost the entire race with none of them able to establish a commanding lead.

There are 400 meters to go and Zatopek goes into a sprint and passes the frontrunners. Emil is running in his characteristic style of flailing arms and contorted facial expressions.

Chris Chataway of Great Britain stays right with him. Now the Englishman moves in front.

They come around the final turn, and they're nearly even as Zatopek makes another move. Emil comes off the turn in the Chataway, in an attempt to come back once again, trips and falls on the track. Left unchallenged, Zatopek charges down the home stretch and hits the tape for another Olympic record.

Zatopek goes on to win the marathon for still another Olympic record and his third gold medal.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Stocks Battered On Many Sides

NEW YORK (UPI) — Watergate, rising interest rates, and profit-taking dealt stocks a blow this week on the New York Stock Exchange, and sent investors back to the sidelines following a two-week buying spree.

The Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 27.84 to 908.87, following the two-week, 50-point gain. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader market barometer, skidded 3.03 to 106.49. The NYSE index fell 1.57 to 56.79.

Declining issues topped advances, 1,394 to 406, among 1,985 issues traded.

Volume fell off sharply from the previous week, with little in the news to spark continued buying interest. Turnover totaled 60,265,908 shares, compared with 85,402,580 a week earlier and with 80,275,400 the year before.

On that day, the market dropped about 5 points in the last half-hour of trading — minutes after news of the resolution hit the Street—and foreshadowed much worse things to come for stocks on Wednesday.

With the word "impeach-

WEEK IN BUSINESS

ment" in the news the market reacted Thursday with a 14.22-point slide, and nearly 1,200 declines, confirming doubts that the Watergate issue had been thoroughly "discounted" by investors.

Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. commented, "Wall Street realizes there will be an economic slowdown, more trouble for the dollar, probably worse inflation. But Watergate remains the great unknown, the source of continued disquiet."

Lurking in the background, too, were rising interest rates. There have been a dozen boosts this year in the prime lending rate. On Friday, three of the nation's banks boosted their rates to 9 per cent. Other lending institutions are likely to follow the move within days, according to observers.

But, as a number of analysts pointed out, Wall Street had fully expected an eventual 9 to 9 ¼ per cent plateau. A rate beyond that level, according to economic consultant Robert Johnson, might do damage to stock prices and investor confidence. The recent surge in other money rates was more worrisome. Utility issues, particularly sensitive to rates on borrowed funds simply because utilities are such big borrowers, have been hard-hit for some time, and the Dow Jones utility average hit new 1973 lows several times this week.

There was surprisingly little despair at week's end, though. Most analysts seemed willing to look on the bright side of the week. Lucien Hooper of W.E. Hutton said a technical pullback was overdue after "the market advanced too quickly two weeks ago."

Others said a slowing of activity was typical at this time of year. Saul Smerling of Standard & Poor's saw the sluggish trading as a blessing of a sort: "Now, as Wall Street has seen some of its fears confirmed, volume has dried up, and selling hasn't been too severe."

International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. was the volume leader, off 1 ⅝ at 32 ⅜ on 719,300 shares. American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was second, losing 1 ½ to 49 ⅞ on 540,000 shares, followed by Texaco (ex-dividend) which dropped ⅞ to 31 ⅞ on 519,000 shares. Curtiss-Wright, holder of North American rights on the Wankel rotary auto engine, gained 4 on the week. General Motors and American Motors issued statements indicating larger commitments to the use of the controversial engine.

Glamors were mixed. Bausch & Lomb rose 4, and Upjohn 3 ⅛, while Xerox, Avon Products, and ARA Services fell 3 ¼ each.

Burroughs was the leading loser, off 11 ⅜. IBM dropped 6 ½. Fairchild Camera advanced 2 ½.

Chemicals weakened. DuPont declined 6 ⅜ and Eastman Kodak 4 ⅛.

General Motors dropped 2 ⅜, Ford 1 ½ and Chrysler 1 ¼, after two weeks of solid gains.

Among lower airlines and aircrafts, Delta lost 4 ⅝, TWA 2 ¾, and United Aircraft 2 ¼.

Steels and rails took smaller losses.

City's Oldest Buildings Should Be Identified

WHICH IS THE oldest building in San Rafael?

I-J historian Dorothy Gardiner thinks it is probably what is known as the Bagley Apartments on the upper side of Mission Avenue between B and Wilkins.

This may also be the very first all-wood home built in San Rafael. It is believed to have been erected in 1852 by Walter Skidmore, pioneer Marin district attorney.

That was 121 years ago. Mission San Rafael was already 35 years old. What we know as Marin had already passed from Spanish to Mexican and finally to American control. Our county government was only two years old. San Rafael was not yet incorporated. Marin did not yet have a newspaper and would not have one for nine more years.

THAT HISTORIC house was between 15 and 20 years old when William T. (for Tell) Coleman, the wealthy vigilante leader, acquired it.

It was his home and headquarters during the period when he and his contemporaries developed San Rafael.

Today's beautiful Dominican area started as Coleman's Magnolia Valley subdivision. The elementary school there was named for him.

On the other side of San Rafael valley he opened Laurel Grove, a park for picnickers which attracted thousands of visitors.

On the floor of the valley, he planted thousands of trees on what previously was barren except for natural grass and brush.

He was a leader in efforts to build a new courthouse in 1872, incorporate San Rafael as a city in 1874, attract the Dominican Sisters to start their convent and college here in the 1880s, promote the building of Hotel Rafael. Some believe he was instrumental in urging Peter Donahue to extend the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad to and through San Rafael.

Coleman founded San Rafael's first water company.

If the walls of the old Bagley apartment building had ears and could only tell us all that went on there, what a story it would be!

NEXT YEAR, San Rafael will observe the 100th anniversary of its incorporation.

Mrs. Gardiner is already researching the history of that signal event. The results of her research will be published in the I-J in connection with the centennial observance.

Logically, she observes that the old Coleman house should be appropriately marked and honored, along with other historic buildings in the county seat city.

The Ru Ann Apartments building on the north side of Fourth Street between B and C may be the oldest building on San Rafael's main thoroughfare. It was built by convict labor, from San Quentin brick, in 1860. It was first the Marin Hotel.

Marin's first newspaper, the Marin County Journal, was printed there 111 years ago. The San Rafael Stage Co. had its offices there. Visiting judges and lawyers stayed there during litigation over Mexican land grants in Marin. It also served as social center for the growing town. Many a fancy dress ball was held there.

On the opposite side of the street between C and D (formerly occupied by Moore's Stationery store), Gordon's Opera House building still stands, although its upper floor has long since been converted to apartments. It was built in 1878. Edwin Booth was among the notables who performed there. It was the locale for political rallies and even school graduations. When Marin's first physician and San Rafael's first mayor, Dr. Alfred Taliaferro, died, his body lay in state there before burial in Mt. Tamalpais Cemetery.

As Mrs. Gardiner has suggested, such buildings need to be recognized, marked and honored.

Monarch Migration

Have you ever wondered how far monarch butterflies fly when they migrate? No one knows for sure. But we have a few clues. A monarch was marked in Ontario in August, 1957, and was recovered in January, 1958, in Mexico, 1,870 miles away.

Experts believe that many monarchs travel more than 2,000 miles in the course of their year of life. They have tougher wings than most butterflies, but even so it's an incredible journey.

Letter To A Young Man — One Who Didn't Get The Job

(Reprinted from King City Rustler)

Dear Young Man:

Today, you asked me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids out of high school can't find work.

But I hired a teen-ager today. Maybe you saw him. He was the one with the polished shoes and a ecktie. What was so special about that? Not experience, neither of you had any. Attitude put him on the payroll. He wanted the job badly enough to shuck the leather jacket, get a haircut, and look in the phone book to find out what this company makes. He took time out to find out my name and he called me "Mr." or "Sir," not "Hey you." He did his best to impress me, that is where he edged you out.

You see, people who hire people aren't "with" a lot of things. We know more about Bing than Ringo, and we have some stone age ideas about who owes whom a living. Maybe that makes us prehistoric, but there is nothing wrong with the checks we sign. If you want one, you'd better tune to our wave length.

I want someone who will go out in the plant, keep his eyes open, and work for me like he would for himself. Of course, I am interested in your problems, but I want you to be interested in my problems, too. If you have a vague idea of what I am trying to say, let it show next time you ask for a job. You'll be head and shoulders over the rest.

You may not believe it, but all around you, employers are looking for young men and women smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way. When they find one, they can't wait to unload some work on him.

Genuine Protector Of Four-Footed Friends

Helen Galantiere has to be one of the great ladies of the world! And hopefully, Patricia Perry's story about her pet foster home in the I-J (July 31) will communicate the depth of Helen's compassion for "small things that have no words," and perhaps result, by some miracle, in widespread support for her animal adoption society.

Many of us are genuinely concerned about the four-footed friends among us. But how few of us do something dynamic and definitive about that concern as Helen has continued to do for years, even before founding the St. Francis Animal Protection Society.

My own contacts with Mrs. Galantiere have been realtively brief. But they've established that she's an incredibly dedicated protective society all by herself. Nothing supercedes that one-pointed involvement. Yet, she never remonstrates with those of us who have to cop out on her calls for help in temporarily housing some deserted little guy she's encountered while driving or whatever. Instead, she'll go on spending her dimes in phone booths, all the while watching over the forlorn creature she's determined to rescue, until someone gives in. Or else home it goes with her, to join the others.

Her gracious understanding about those of us who are only part-time humanitarians doesn't make me feel any less guilty, though, knowing that her own household and life are given over completely to the orphans.

If the Larkspur City Council does bring a "nuisance abatement" (an incredible charge!) against her, surely somewhere there's a more hospitable environment for her humanitarian project — and additional volunteers to help, as well.

'You Cannot Do This To My Country'

I have just written my congressman the following letter:

The sickenining revelations of Watergate and the scandalous use of taxpayers' money for the President's homes in Florida and California bring this one thing to mind, the question the attorney for the Army, Joseph Welch, asked Senator Joseph McCarthy: "Sir, have you no decency left?"

I care far more for my country than I do for my party. Would that more politicians did! And it's all right with me if Vice President Agnew finishes Mr. Nixon's term and a Democrat wins in 1976. The moral climate in the country smells to high heaven and it's time for all citizens, Democrats, Republicans or independents, to cry out, "You cannot do this to our country! You can no longer stand by and watch it being done!"

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

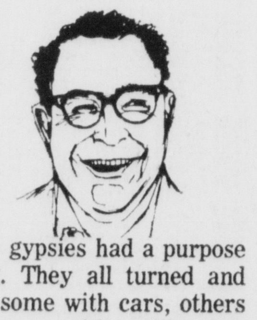
Big Thinkers in the Rand Corp. have been gratned granted to think up ways to melt the icebergs after they're delivered from the South Pole.

If sunny California is as sunny as Californians claim, liquefying the bergs should pose no problem.

Environmentalists have been unkind enough to suggest that instead of towing icebergs from the Antarctic, we tow California to the South Pole.

ART BUCHWALD



In The Middle East, Mecca; In America, Watkins Glen

WASHINGTON — An estimated 600,000 young people showed up at Watkins Glen, N.Y., last week end for a rock concert. That means there were 1,200,000 parents biting their nails and drinking booze to keep from thinking the worst about what was happening to their children.

I speak from personal experience because I donated a daughter to the concert. Actually I didn't give her to the concert. She gave herself. She announced in no uncertain terms that this concert was the most important thing in her life and if she missed it there would be nothing worth living for.

The fact that she had heard the same group, The Grateful Dead, three weeks earlier in RFK Stadium did not enter the picture. She hadn't, she pointed out, heard them at Watkins Glen — and if you didn't hear them at Watkins Glen, then you just couldn't say you had heard them.

AFTER MY DAUGHTER departed in a Volkswagen with five other people, I had a lot of time to think about Watkins Glen — all night to be exact.

Why would 600,000 youths drive hundreds of miles, wallow in the mud, bake in the sun, and do without water and shelter to go to a rock concert that most of them couldn't even hear?

The answer is that all over this great country of ours there are millions of teenagers aimlessly wandering around with nothing to do and no place to go.

Everyone needs a goal in life. And when it was announced there was going to be a concert at Watkins Glen, it gave these rootless young people a place to head for.

In India it would have been the Ganges. In the Middle East it would have been Mecca. In the United States this year it was Watkins Glen.

FOR THE FIRST TIME all summer these 20th-century gypsies had a purpose in their traveling. They all turned and faced New York, some with cars, others with buses, and many with nothing but their thumbs.

With a goal ahead of them, their lethargy left them and their spirits brightened. Now when they called their parents collect, they could say with pride that they were going somewhere.

What started out as a rock concert put on by a couple of smart promoters turned into a religious rite for which no sacrifice was too great to be where it was happening.

All over America bourgeois parents turned on their television sets to watch with trepidation as helicopters hired by the networks filmed the masses of humanity down below. There they were, 600,000 of our children, wall to wall, sitting on the hard ground, zonked out by bearded men screaming into electronic speakers that shattered the eardrums of anyone within 20 miles of the bandstand.

THE BIG QUESTION every parent must have asked himself or herself was: "Where did we go wrong? You spent 18 years of your life seeing they got all their vitamins, making sure they did their homework, teaching them to brush their teeth, providing them with a security you never had. And the final result of it all was down below in some pasture land in New York state where they came to blow their minds."

But, as I have been told many times, it isn't for us to judge what our children do. Our only role in the summer of '73 is to accept their collect telephone calls so they can let us know they're still alive.

And so, as the sun came up over the Washington Monument, I stood in my bathrobe on the balcony facing New York state and the only thought I had was, "It could have been worse. We could have been living in Watkins Glen."

Record Hints Highest Court Will Order Release Of Tapes

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court of the United States has in these turbulent times encountered heavy weather. Both within the law and for individual justices drafted for outside assignments, the authority of the highest tribunal of the third branch of government has been eroded. For the court now to be required by the President to resolve the greatest constitutional crisis in the history of the republic, with all its political implications, is to impose a burden with unforeseeable consequences.

In the weeks ahead, until the court hands down its fateful decision, interest will be concentrated on the nine men who must reach a decision. Rarely in recent history has the court had such a mixed bag of judges representing the choices of four separate presidents, with four men nominated by Nixon and five selected by three previous administrations.

THE POLARITY on the court is reflected in the oldest justice, both in age and term of service, and the youngest and most newly appointed. William O. Douglas was nominated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in March of 1939. In October he will be 75 years old and, while this is not ancient in comparison with veterans in the past who have stayed on the bench into their 80s, his 34 years of service equals that of the late Justice Hugo L. Black, who died in 1971 a week after he resigned from the court at the age of 85.

Douglas has voted, with few exceptions, against any and all restraints on information from government or private sources. This comes out in his repeated dissents, one of the latest being a vigorous dissent from the opinion of a majority of five justices giving states and local communities the right to set their own standards of what is obscene. This, Douglas held, puts "an ominous gloss on freedom of the press." On the basis of his record Douglas would almost certainly vote against "executive privilege" as grounds for withholding presidential tapes and documents.

Douglas and his wife are flying this month to China for a long-delayed visit of three weeks to the People's Republic. Friends are concerned for him in view of his age and the fact that he has a heart pacer, and particularly since not long ago when he passed through an airport X-ray detector, the pacer was thrown off and he had to be rushed to a hospital. His absence from the bench, when the court must reach a decision, would further complicate an already fearfully complex situation.

THE NEWEST member of the court and the youngest is Justice William H. Rehnquist. Forty-nine years old, he cites in his official biography that he was Phi Beta Kappa and first in his class at Stanford University Law School. From school he served as law clerk to the late Justice Robert H. Jackson.

In Phoenix, Ariz., where he practiced law, he was an ardent Goldwater man and a protege of former Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst. He tangled with Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. when he appeared before the senator's constitutional rights subcommittee, saying that, while it would be inappropriate and a waste of the taxpayer's money, it would not violate the senator's rights for the government to put him under surveillance. With rare exceptions Rehnquist has voted with the three other Nixon appointees on the strict constructionist side.

Between these two poles the other seven have shown a wide range of opinion. What the court will finally decide in this constitutional crisis is anyone's guess, in light particularly of the often-unpredictable outcome in cases where observers had thought the result was foreordained.

WHEN THREE NEWSMEN claimed the right of confidentiality to protect their sources, the four Nixon appointees were joined by Justice Byron R. White, the sole appointee of President Kennedy, in denying that right. In writing the opinion for the majority of five, White stressed the requirement that all persons, high or low, give any evidence they might have in any case however trivial its nature. This would seem to commit the majority to ruling against executive privilege and requiring the President to produce tapes and documents requested by Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox and the Watergate investigating committee.

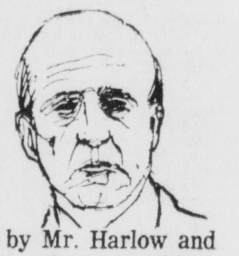
JOSEPH C. HARSCH



Agnew Suddenly Gets Attention; How Would He Be As President?

One day recently Bryce Harlow, newly back at the White House, telephoned Vice President Spiro T. Agnew across the street in the Executive Offices Building and said:

That marked the third big change in the career of Mr. Agnew. The first was when he became governor of the State of Maryland. The second was when he became vice president of the United States in name only. Beginning with Mr. Harlow's telephone call, people around the White House, and in other places as well, have been paying more attention to Mr. Agnew. As one of his staff puts it: "We no longer feel like a wasted asset."

MR. AGNEW STILL operates on a narrow base. He has a staff of nine assistants plus about 20 secretaries and assistants to assistants. He and his staff use a third of the second floor of the EOB. Henry Kissinger has a far larger staff — and more visitors. But more people are asking to see Mr. Agnew these days. He has presided over one cabinet meeting. He regularly attends cabinet and National Security Council meetings.

He is kept informed by Mr. Harlow and by Melvin Laird, the other new White House adviser, of background affairs in the White House.

During his first four years he was used to make hard-line political speeches at campaign times, was allowed to visit 28 countries of lesser importance and Japan, and attended what were known as "dog and pony shows" (ritualized White House occasions). He was not informed in domestic political affairs. His foreign travels were mostly in Asia and the Middle East. The nearest he got to Europe was Greece, Portugal, and Spain. He has never visited China, Russia, the Communist countries of Eastern Europe, or the major allies — Britain, France, Germany — in Western Europe.

His conversation reflects his experience pattern. He talks from first-hand knowledge about such places as Indonesia and Malaysia. His knowledge of Western Europe is second-hand. In domestic matters his references are almost entirely to events which happened when he was governor of Maryland. He has a lot of catching up to do in domestic affairs.

THERE IS NOTHING new about vice presidents being treated around the White House as gate crashers. Hubert Humphrey was miserable under Lyndon Johnson. Mr. Johnson remembered his vice-presidential years as his most uncomfortable. Mr. Agnew's first four years in "purgatory" were at least as bad — some of his staff think worse.

But he has acquired composure through the ordeal. In private he is a quietly congenial person. He can laugh at himself and is aware of his own flaws. His skin has toughened over the last four years, but he is still sensitive. He is free of all pomposity.

He is not assertive. He does listen.

WHAT KIND of a president would he make?

Perhaps one of his strongest qualifications is an honest doubt in his own mind whether he really wants to be a candidate in 1976. Unlike a Johnson or Humphrey, he has not been "bitten by the presidential bug." He might deliberately decide not to run.

Judging a man's qualifications before he enters the White House is difficult. Warren Harding was supposed to be highly qualified. His presidency ended in disaster and tragedy. Harry S Truman was widely perceived to be an opportunistic product of a corrupt political machine with extremely limited ability. He was one of the best presidents.

Mr. Agnew thinks of himself as being politically somewhere near the middle of the American political spectrum, to the left of Mr. Nixon in some respects, to the right in others. My own guess is that he is free of dogmatism and would, if he ever found himself in the White House, be like a Truman in the sense of facing his problems pragmatically as they came along. He would probably decentralize the White House and run the federal government more through cabinet officers as in pre-Kennedy days than through White House super-assistants as in the Kennedy-Johnson-Nixon manner.

LITTLE OL' WINE MAKERS

Retirement project, almost an acre of sundrenched hillside w/ westerly exposures, we furnish three dozen of grape vines, you furnish the energy for planting, pruning, harvesting & eventually the wine making. Of course, the pocketbook of the LITTLE OL' WINE MAKER couldn't be so skimpy to get the oak vats to be stored in the basement where the juice could mature into your very own brand of wine to your special taste. This stately home is rustic in appearance, but quite elegant. The floor to ceiling rock frplc., w/12' high ceiling, gives you a feeling of solidity while the spaciousness of the room would allow for sizeable library. The dining, wining & entertainment room is a couple of steps up from the most practical brand new kitchen, 2 modern baths, 3 bdrms., & 2 unfinished rooms could accommodate the great grandchildren. Once you put this on your list, we help you check it out. $70,000.

BARGAINS GALORE — Los Angeles resident Robert Valencia found many good buys on a shopping spree through the Grand Central Market in downtown Los Angeles, where in spite of Phase III, IV or otherwise, the food market that started in the depression era still draws a carnival of people who look for quantity rather than quality at half the price found elsewhere.

AT UNIQUE MARKET

Southlanders Find Bargains

By MARK JONES

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The world of open markets here has its prince and commoner. The prince is doing nicely thank you, but the commoner is thriving in the renaissance of the bargain hunter.

The prince is the Farmer's Market, a tourist attraction where the well heeled can pay top dollar for strawberries in January.

The wife of an auto executive had a craving for watermelon this winter, and didn't hestiate to pay Farmer's Market $29 to fly one to her at a San Francisco hospital.

"We generally cater to three kinds of shoppers here—the ones who know the best, who want it and the ones who don't have to sacrifice to get it," boasted Farmer's president John Gostobich.

For a Depression-era market which began with 18 farmers selling produce from the tailgates of their trucks, Farmer's Market has come a long way.

But it's strictly an uptown market; downtown is another story.

On Broadway, between busy third and fourth streets in the heart of the civic center, is the gestive and popular—but less famous—Grand Central Market. Under its bright orange awning this half-century old institutin has the city's largest array of foodstuffs and nationalities under one roof.

A writer once described Grand Central as the "Auntie Mame" of markets in Los Angeles. And, in a city of squeaky-clean shopping centers, the name fits.

Perhaps the oldest continuous marketplace in Los Angeles, Grand Central first began selling cheap, volume produce about 1917, drawing buyers right to the front door by way of the city's rumbling streetcars.

Freeways took over in the 1950s but low-income families from south and east Los Angeles still flock here on weekdays and particularly on Saturday. Judges on their noon hour break drop by to shop, along with longhairs buying big for their communes.

"Mainly, though, we still cater to laboring people with large families who want quantity rather than quality, although some of our food is as good quality as any," says former market manager Harold Abbot.

"It's a carnival of people here," he said, adding that the United States Information Agency once filmed the market, then sent the movie overseas to show that the United States is more than a white, middle-class mass and that "all nationalities live together here."

Tons of fruit and vegetables are trucked here from downtown wholesalers each morning while the city sleeps and the effect is an eye-opening perfume.

The unexpected aroma is more like a Mexican or Middle-Eastern bazaar than an American market.

This and perhaps the lowest grocery prices in the city lure some 750,000 shoppers a month, and some 60,000 on a typical frantic Saturday.

Down the market's narrow, crowded, sawdust-covered aisles shoppers find exotic fruits, nuts and breads, oysters from New Orleans halvah candy from Israel, Brazilian coffee, Alaskan crabmeat, edible cactus from Mexico, most of Italy's noodles and cheeses, Iranian dates, real lambs heads and golden papayas the size of little basketballs.

The market's nearly 20,000 square feet of aisle space—the size of a large auditorium—is jammed with five dozen produce stalls, bakery and lunch counters.

At Grand Central, shoppers can find such bargain meats as turkey tails and beef hooves for less than 50 cents a pound. Pork, in small supply throughout the country is abundant here and priced 15 cents a pound less than chain stores.

Lettuce goes two for 35 cents, corn five for a dollar, two cantaloupe for 35 cents and tomatoes — a little higher this year—are 31 cents a pound.

Compared with chain store prices uptown and elsewhere in the country, it seems President Nixon's Phase Four policy was stopped even before it got to Grand Central's front door.

"You learn very quickly how to shop for buys here. And if you're a good shopper—and you know your foods and prices—you can come away with some fine bargains," says Hiram Cedrario, 60, dean of the Grand Central merchants.

Cedrario went to work for his father's bakery-delicatessen counter here in 1923 then opened his own stall in 1938, selling big loaves of French bread for 12 cents. Today they're 62 cents.

"People go uptown to chain stores and maybe get a 'good morning, or good evening' and that's it. Here they get individual attention," he said.

"They like it and they come back." Cedrario grossed $275,000 last year, enjoys his work and relishes election year when he gets to pump the hands of politicians who flock to Grand Central looking for ethnic America.

Cedrario and Irving Kazan, another long-time stall owner, have been selling food here longer than anyone else. Kazan, who started when he was 25 and gave up his ambition to be an optometrist, now grosses about $400,000 a year selling fruits and vegetables and glazed fruit.

"Grand Central Market is really coming of age these days," because of the food price situation Kazan said, looking over the panorama of busy stalls. He rises at 6 a.m., does his own buying at the wholesalers and stays behind the counter until 6 p.m. "There's a lot of excitement here for me and the people who come here," he said.

Burglary Charge Is Admitted By San Franciscan

A San Francisco man admitted Friday he burglarized a Belvedere house July 4 and his codefendent was bound over to Marin Superior Court to stand trial on the charge.

Smallman reduced the charge of a misdemeanor and set sentencing for Aug. 24.

His codefendant, Raymond Stanley Glasser, 22, also of San Francisco was ordered by Smallman to appear Aug. 13 in Superior Court on a felony burglary charge after the judge ruled there is enough evidence to try him.

San Francisco's Record Sundae

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco, celebrating the centennial of its cable cars, served a world record 1,201-pound sundae Friday at a party in Union Square.

Mrs. Hans Klussmann, who led the fight eight years ago to preserve the little hill-climbing cars, stood on a step-ladder to put the final scoop on the 8-foot-high confection.

That scoop was the record-setter since the Guiness Book of Records lists the previous record holder as 1200 pounds.

Fuel Lack Said Real By Oilman

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Robert R. Dorsey, chairman of the board of Gulf Oil Corp., denied Friday that major oil companies are contriving the fuel shortage.

"There is absolutely no truth to the charges," Dorsey said during graduation ceremonies at the Graduate School of Business at the University of Pittsburgh. "Personal judgment and uninformed opinion have been used to present an entirely false picture."

Dorsey said the energy crisis is "very real," and has been the subject of repeated warnings from oil company spokesmen for many years.

"I fail to see the reasoning behind the false allegations... except that, possibly, some individuals are reluctant to accept the blame for failing to heed the warnings of impending energy shortages," he said.

In apparent reference to a Federal Trade Commission complaint, Dorsey said, "if the public knew how closely the oil industry is regulated and monitored, it would realize that the major oil companies could not have contrived the shortage."

He said some 60 federal agencies and bureaus monitor and regulate the petroleum industry. Dorsey also said "the complex structure of the industry is added proof that collusion would be impossible."

Gas Main Work To Start Monday

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. crews will begin replacing a mile of gas main in downtown San Rafael Monday, according to Donald L. Johnson, Marin County manager for the utility.

The work will modernize gas distribution lines originally installed between 1924 and 1940 on Main and Shaver streets and in the 13-block area bounded by Fourth Street, Fifth Avenue, Lootens Place and F Street. Street digging will be minimized by inserting new plastic pipe into existing old installations, Johnson said.

The work will be finished by early October.

Wrong Address Given Officers

One of those arrested Tuesday in a vice squad raid of an alleged bordello in San Francisco apparently gave police officers an incorrect San Rafael address.

The landlord of the 90 West Crescent Drive property told the Independent-Journal that Patricia Hebert has never lived there.

San Francisco police said today that it was possible that Miss Hebert had given them a bogus address.

10-Year Tam High Reunion Is Slated

A reunion of the Tamalpais High School class of 1963 will be held Sept. 22 at the Sausalito Women's Club and Mill Valley's Boyle Park, according to Douglas Chambers of San Rafael, chairman.

A baseball game is planned for noon to 4 p.m. at the park. A buffet dinner with music by Eggs over Easy, is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the women's club.

ALMANAC

The moon is approaching its first quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1735, freedom of the press was established when John Zenger, publisher of a New York City newspaper, was acquitted of libel charges.

In 1914, the United States issued a proclamation of neutrality in World War I. The United States declared war on Germany on April 6, 1917, after the Germans initiated unrestricted submarine warfare.

In 1949, more than 6,000 persons were killed when an earthquake leveled 50 towns in Ecuador.

In 1972, Arthur Bremer was found guilty of shooting and critically wounding Alabama Gov. George Wallace and sentenced to 63 years for the crime.

A thought for the day: Scottish comic Sir Harry Lauder said: "Oh, it's nice to get up in the morning, but it's nicer to stay in bed."

Oxidants, clean air.

Carbon monoxide, clean air.

Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, clean air.

San Jose, significant pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

THE ENERGY CRISIS

Gas Rationing Could Work Well

By S. FRED SINGER

(Last of 12 Articles)

A set of energy policies to safeguard national security has to consider all kinds of possibilities, ranging from a partial or even a complete embargo by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to situations where sabotage or third countries interrupt OPEC supplies.

A deliberate blockade could bring the United States close to warfare. For this reason it is only proper that a large portion of the costs of securing an energy supply and of making the nation invulnerable to interruptions be billed to the defense budget.

Rationing is a policy of last resort when there is a real shortage of supplies or an anticipated shortage. Wartime rationing has worked reasonably well. There is no reason why it should not work during peacetime, for short periods. In case of national emergencies, of if supplies are interrupted by accidents or natural disasters, rationing is a fair way of allocating whatever energy supplies are available.

A credible rationing scheme is an excellent bargaining chip in negotiating oil-import agreements. The emphasis has to be on the word "credible." It has to be perfectly clear that a supply interruption cannot cause unacceptable economic damage or collapse.

This requires that a rationing plan be prepared in great detail and that the preparations be fully displayed. In essence, one avoids blackmail by showing that one is immune to it; one invites blackmail always if it is evident that it will produce an effect.

Along with preparations for rationing, there must be adequate storage and reserves of fuel supplies. They have to be on all time scales, from extremely short, 30 to 60 days, to medium-term and long-term — more than one year.

Stockpiling not only gives us real national security, it also saves us money by improving our bargaining position with respect to negotiating long-term contracts for oil imports.

Short-term storage must be in the appropriate products rather than in crude oil, and storage must be dispersed geographically since transportation facilities may not be available or may be overtaxed. Such short-term storage is needed also in the event of natural disasters and is a sensible national investment and insurance policy.

This does not mean, however, that the federal government must take on the complete job; rather it should be done by public utilities, industries, farmers, and even households.

With respect to a possible interruption of oil imports, medium-term storage can be mostly in the form of crude oil, which should be accessible to refineries. This avoids the tremendous dislocations that come with longer supply interruptions. Such storage must be available on a time scale of a few months and may consist of wells operating at less than 100 per cent capacity.

In order not to penalize the owner of the well the government may wish to purchase the oil in the ground, and then sell it when it is lifted and recoup the purchase money.

Long-term storage can consist of crude oil in place — in oil fields that have been proved in but not fully developed. Such fields should generally be owned by the government/and could even be offshore or Arctic fields that have been defined and partly drilled up, analogous to the existing naval petroleum reserves.

Hand in hand with storage must go construction of deepwater ports, or preferably offshore terminals, to handle the oil supertankers of today and of tomorrow. There are none on the East Coast today. We also need adequate internal transportation for energy supplies, pipelines for oil and gas, and unit trains for barges for coal.

Above all we need a geographically dispersed refining capacity. At present refining capacity is strained, with refineries operating close to 100 per cent, and at considerable profit, too.

No new refineries have been constructed on the East Coast in the past five years. Hopefully, we have overcome the economic distortions of the oil import control program, which have unfortunately led to an export of refining capacity. Hopefully also, the vociferous environmental objections have taught us how to construct refineries that are essentially pollution-free.

Refinery construction also has been held back by general uncertainties on where the oil is going to come from and what kind of oil it might be. Few realize the huge investment that a refinery represents and the great risks involved in locating and in constructing it in a certain way.

With more certainty re-established with respect to oil imports and with respect to Alaskan oil, and with environmental concerns satisfied, there is no reason why refinery construction cannot proceed rapidly.

The complete program of establishing reserves, better transportation capabilities, and adequate refining capacity will require great capital outlays by government and by industry. But it will be worth it: More value added in the United States means more jobs and fewer dollar outflows; more national security and more protection against disasters, natural and manmade; and finally, less likelihood of shortages in either fuel oils or gasoline.

Setting up a detailed allocation program for national emergencies, a hierarchical stockpiling program, and an infrastructure represents a tremendous job of planning.

What is the optimum amount of stockpiling and of redundancy? How much insurance do we really need? The answer depends on the likely scenarios, the risks, and the economic consequences of interruptions. But the insurance, provided it is credible, also will buy us cheaper and more secure oil imports.

Mill Valley Man Admits Charge In Bordello Raid

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Mill Valley man has received a 90-day suspended jail sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of living in a house of prostitution.

Charlie Banks, 32, of 333 Countryview Drive, was also placed on 18 months probation Wednesday by San Francisco Municipal Judge Thomas Dandurand.

A second charge, suspicion of being in a place where narcotics are dispensed, was dismissed by the district attorney's office.

Andrew J. Waite of Sausalito, and Patricia Hebert of San Rafael will both appear Aug. 14 before San Francisco Municipal Court Judge Eugene F. Lynch on charges stemming from the same raid.

Christian Churches Not Fond Of Strong Organization

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

"We are not the only Christians—but we are Christians only."

That is the historic slogan of a large family of American Protestants who were a full century ahead of the modern ecumenical movement in seeing denominationalism as a blight on Christianity.

Despite valiant efforts, however, they have not managed to avoid all the pitfalls of denominationalism — including its worst one, schism.

This Protestant movement, which emerged in the 19th Century under the leadership of two Protestant Irishmen, Thomas and Alexander Campbell, has been divided since 1906 into two main branches, which have little to do with each other.

ONE CONSISTS of about 5,000 local congregations with approximately 1,400,000 members. Although each congregation enjoys complete autonomy in managing its own affairs, there is a national organization with headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind. This body is known as "The International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ)". Its members call themselves "Christians" or "Disciples."

The other branch consists of some 6,000 local congregations, whose total membership is in excess of 1,000,000 and may approach 2,000,000. Precise statistics are hard to obtain because these congragations—which call themselves simply "Churches of Christ"—have no national organization and no headquarters.

PERHAPS THE nearest thing to a Church of Christ "center" is Abilene, Tex., where thousands of members gather for an annual lecture series at Abilene Christian College, and where the Highland Church of Christ sponsors a nationally-broadcast radio-tv program called "Herald of Truth."

Both Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ are found in all 50 states, but Disciples membership is strongest in the South and Midwest. Churches of Christ are most frequently found in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Years ago, members of both branches were called (by other Protestants) "Campbellites." The name was taken from a remarkable father-and-son team of frontier preachers. The father, Thomas Campbell, was a Presbyterian clergyman who immigrated to the United States and settled in Western Pennsylvania in 1807. He deplored denominational divisions among Christians, and appealed for spiritual fellowship of all Christians based on no formal creed save common adherence to the Bible.

HE PRACTICED what he preached, admitting all confessing Christians to communion in his church. In that era of strict and contentiously-minded denominational lines, this was enough to get him formally censured by the Presbyterians, whereupon he withdrew from that denomination and formed what he called "a Christian association." The one thing he never meant it to become was another Protestant denomination.

Thomas Campbell said denominational divisions within the Christian family are "uncharitable, anti-Christian, antiscriptural, anti-natural, and productive of confusion and every evil wok."

He believed churches should base their teachings and practices solely on the New Testament, accepting into membership any person who professed faith in Christ and requiring no creedal test other than acceptance of the New Testament as understood and interpreted by each believer for himself.

WITH CHARACTERISTIC American passion for capsulizing complex ideas in simple slogans, his followers soon summarized Campbell's teachings in two catch-lines:

"No creed but Christ."

"Where the scriptures speak, we speak; where the scriptures are silent, we are silent."

These slogans remain dear to "Christians" in both branches of the now-riven movement begun by Thomas Campbell.

Alexander Campbell, a gifted preacher who joined his father in Pennsylvania in 1810, added several other cardinal concepts: that each local church should be entirely independent, calling its own pastor, handling its own finances, making its own decisions; that the Lord's Supper should be served at every Sunday service; and that baptism should be by total immersion, and restricted to believers of sufficient age to make a conscious decision for Christ. In practice, this means that Christians, like Baptists, reject infant baptism and normally baptize children around age 13.

BOTH OF the Campbells worked in close association with Barton Stone, a frontier evangelist of Cane Ridge, Ky., who shared their passionate belief that denominationalism was the curse of Christianity. Stone, who is revered by both branches as a patriarch of the movement, taught that salvation had little to do with formal church affiliation or even with giving assent to defined doctrines. "Deeds," he often said, "are more important than creeds." This view also has a decidedly contemporary ring.

Since both groups deny being denominations, the Disciples of Christ and the Churches of Christ do not officially acknowledge, to this day, that a schism occurred between them. The historic fact which they cannot blink is that their congregations have been listed and their members tabulated separately in every official or unofficial census of religous bodies since 1906.

THERE ARE at least four distinctive differences between the two groups.

First, the Churches of Christ tend to be considerably more fundamentalist, more literal in their reading of the Bible, than the Disciples.

Second, Churches of Christ still forbid instrumental music (because scripture doesn't mention it as part of early Christian worship) while Disciples congregations have organs or pianos.

Third Churches of Christ carry their fear of "hierarchicalism" to the point of refusing to form any kind of national organization, even a missionary society. (Each congregation supports its own foreign missionary.) The Disciples, after seven years of agonizing reappraisal, adopted in 1968 a new structure under which its local congregations are welded into a national body that must be called a denomination, out of fidelity to common sense, however little the term may appeal to them. It has a national headquarters, and national officers, boards and societies; a General Assembly that meets annualy; and a policy-making General Board.

THE FOURTH difference is that the Churches of Christ, because of their wariness of all forms of ecclesiastical organization, have kept aloof from the contemporary ecumenical movement. But the Disciples, translating the Campbells' vision of Christian unity into contemporary terms, have been extremely active in the National Council of Churches and in the Consultation on Church Union.

New Catholic Leader Sees Need For Priority Changes

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the new general secretary of the United States Catholic Conference (USCC) has his way, one of the top priorities of the organized Roman Catholic church in the United States will be to mobilize on the issues of aid, trade and population policy.

Bishop James S. Rausch, in one of his first major statements since assuming the post with the administrative arm of the American Catholic heirarchy, singled out the issue of international economic development as of particular urgency.

"The plight of the developing countries is in danger of becoming a forgotten factor of international affairs," he said.

While Catholic teaching has given the issue of underdeveloped countries high priority, the problem is assigned "low priority...on the American agenda of world order issues," he said.

"To be the American church, standing in the face of the present inequities of international economics — often brought about by the policies of our nation —and bound in conscience by Catholic teaching of the rights of every man and woman to the conditions for decent human development, is to face an awesome challenge."

He added: "The function of informing, motivating and mobilizing a community of people, directing it toward a significant human problem and evoking from it a selfsacrificial response is preeminently a task of the church."

The tortuous path of recent foreign aid bills through Congress —and growing sentiment for trade restictions —indicates that Rausch has given the church just that —an awesome challenge.

Rausch drew on analyses by World Bank President Robert S. McNamara to show that the gap between developed and undeveloping nations is growing wider.

According to McNamara, there has been a failure on the part of the developed countries to provide development assistance and to make structural reforms in trade relationships.

This, Rausch said, "constitutes the primary moral issue for those of us in the developed world." Development assistance —foreign aid —and trade relationships are the primary means available for lessening the gap between rich and poor, he said.

Rausch cited lack of leadership for the development of an informed and effective constituency to move on the issue.

"Mr. McNamara was thinking of political leadership, about which he was not optimistic," Rausch said. But the bishop said the church could provide a means of leadership which McNamara did not consider.

In Rausch's view, the role of the church is not to provide technical expertise or massive financial assistance to the developing countries but rather "to shape a community with a conscience."

"Such a community, properly informed by the teaching church, motivated by the preaching and worshipping church, and mobilized as members of the servant church, could provide the critical margin of difference in the American body politic —the margin between forgetting the developing nations by insulating our consciences and isolating our affluence, or by following the drastically different course of fostering their development by a program of extensive cooperation on aid, trade and technical assistance," Rausch said.

One of the difficulties the church will face in forming that constituency is the overlapping of Rausch's own constituency — the Roman Catholic laity —to a considerable extent with the labor constituency.

In recent years, it has been the labor constituency that under the threat of losing jobs, has been one of the prime voices arguing for greater trade restrictions.

Another possibly more touchy issue for both the Catholic constituency and the development establishment, is Rausch's insistence that Catholics assert a voice in articulating "a just global population policy."

Noting that the Catholic community "has not been conspicuously involved" in the question, Rausch said: "Within the ambit of the best theological reflection our tradition can provide, Catholics should be visible, audible and intelligent participants in the forthcoming U.N. Population Year."

At a time when American consciousness of developing countries is on the wane, Rausch, citing church teaching, claimed as one of the church's chief priorities, that: "...in a very real sense, it is no less important for the church to be doing the work of social justice every day than it is for us to provide for the celebration of the Eucharist or to preach the Gospel."

Collegians To Sing At Nazarene Church

Five collegians called "Love Revealed," from Point Loma College in San Diego, will present a program of sacred music at the Church of the Nazarene, 1509 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in San Anselmo California Thursday, Aug. 9, at 7:30 p.m.

The group was organized in the spring of 1973 for travel during the summer. The name was selected because of their desire that Christ's love will be revealed through their songs and testimonies.

Richard Fauss is a sophomore from Ceres, Calif., and is speaker and soloist for the group. He is a speech major and has lettered in basketball and baseball. He is a member of the Modesto First Church of the Nazarene.

Soprano Cynthia Mokhtarian is a junior from San Mateo. She is a sociology major and has a minor in music. She is a member of the College Treble Choir and "The Belles," and a member of Pasadena Central Church of the Nazarene.

Soprano and Alto Janine Jones is a junior from Visalia, Calif. She is a nursing major and belongs to the Student Nurses Association of California. She is a member of the Treble Choir, "The Belles" and Chamber Singers. She is a member of the Ivanhoe Church of the Nazarene.

Second Soprano Debbie Latter is a sophomore from Walnut Creek. She is a music major and is a member of the Treble Choir and "The Belles". She plays both piano and guitar. She is a member of the Walnut Creek Hillside Covenant Church.

Pianist for the group is Melva Pagan, a junior from Pasadena. She is a piano major and holds a president's and piano scholarship. A member of the Treble choir, and "The Belles," she is a member of the Glendora First Church of the Nazarene.

A wide repertoire of hymns, spirituals, gospel songs, and contemporary sacred music will be sung by the group. Some of their most popular numbers include "I've Got Confidence," "I'm Gonna Keep On Singin' ", "Amazing Grace" and "I Don't Know Why Jesus Loves Me."

Faith In God Is Best Help For Ex-Prisoners

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Faith can still work wonders, even in getting a job.

Once the head of a school for men released from jail, Rev. Small says:

"I took the wrong approach. I tried to teach them a trade, but its useless to train a man for a job when he's hooked on alcohol or dope. As soon as he's free, he'll go back to stealing to maintain his habit."

Now Rev. Small relies mostly on faith itself. He concentrates on helping "my prisoners" to find God.

The House of Mercy operated by Rev. Small now helps the needy and the down-and-out, as well as newly released prisoners, with free clothes and food. But that's only part of it.

"Faith means hope," he says, "and more than anything, these men need hope. That's what I try to give them."

Answers To Violence Are Planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Television, which increasingly has the finger pointed at it as an influence in creating violent behavior among children, will have a chance to present some mini-alternatives early next year.

Broadcast agencies from four denominations are cooperating in producing three television spot announcements aimed at helping children see and use methods other than violence in resolving conflicts.

"The models a child finds in a majority of his TV experiences depict physically violent behavior as a workable and socially acceptable method of dealing with conflict," according to Ben T. Logan, coordinator of the project.

"We believe TV can also present positive models of dealing with conflict," he added.

Cooperating in the creation, production, research and distribution of the 30-second "counter-commercials," are the broadcast agencies of the Episcopal Church, the United Methodist Church, the Christian Church, Disciples of Christ and the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Logan said the spot announcements will show everyday conflict situations which a child could encounter and offer an alternative to violence with a model, drawn from the Christian faith, as a way to settle the problem.

"The hope is that as children view the messages they will imitate the model and thus put Christian principles to practical use in dealing with conflict," Logan said.

While based on Christian principles, Logan said the spots will not contain "overt Christian content." Such content, he added, makes children's spots very difficult to market.

Sign Language Sermons Given By Young Girl

She preaches sermons on Sunday mornings, teaches a speech class Sunday nights, sings in the choir and twirls a baton as a majorette in parades.

Her speciality is teaching the sign language for the deaf. Every Sunday morning she uses her unusual knowledge to interpret the sermons for the deaf members of the congregation.

"I learned the sign langugage as a hobby six years ago," Carol explains. "I love to teach it to others."

In interpreting the sermons, Carol says she does a little acting to get across.

"When the minister preaches fire and brimstone," she says, "I put a little speed and emphasis into my sign talk." (Los Angeles Times Syndicate)

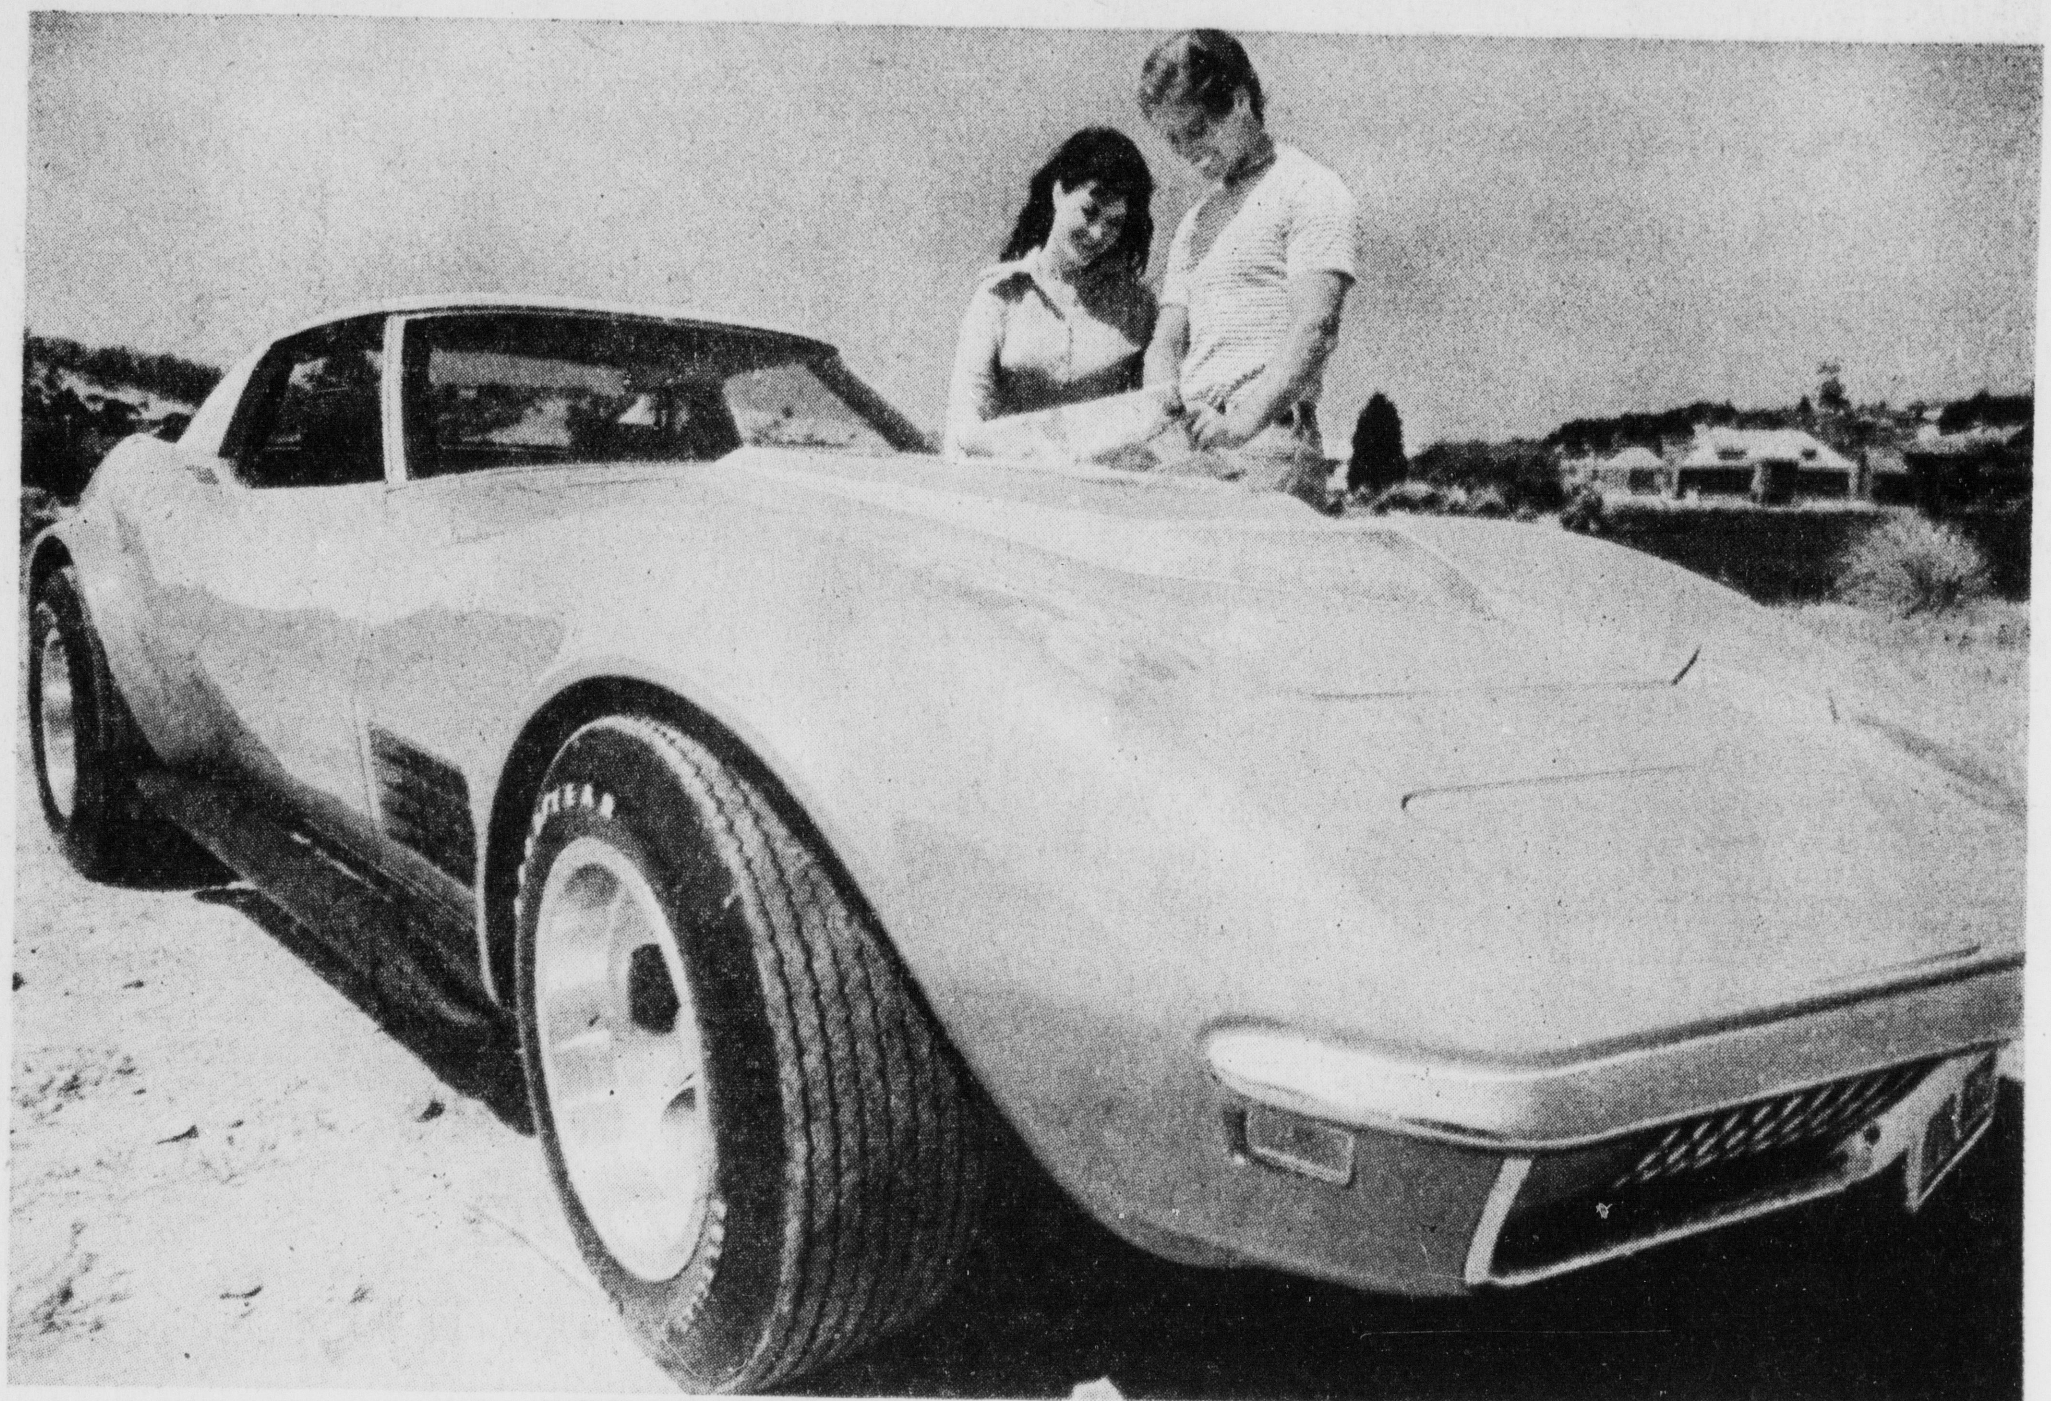
Corvette Clubs On The Go In Marin



MARIN'S TWO ACTIVE clubs of Corvette owners, the North Bay Corvette Assn. and the Redwood Corvettes Unlimited, participate in a busy schedule of social, car show and racing events, with tomorrow's eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show at Mill Valley, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., one of the highlights. Included in a record showing of Corvettes will be the burnt orange car of Jim and Susie Simontacchi, "updated from a 1969 wreck to look like a 1972 model," including 25 coats of paint plus a layer of crushed glass. Simontacchi, president of Redwood Corvettes Unlimited, spent six months on the restoration.

And she is totally feminine in appearance — blonde, tanned and a tall five feet 11 inches, moving and walking with the grace of the model that she was in her days as a San Rafael High School student.

But the most ardent advocate of Women's Liberation would find good reason to take pride in her driving. She handles the family's 1964 gray fastback Corvette like a man — and sometimes better.

In what used to be the all-male sport of drag racing, Robin aced out her male competitors in 1969 to win the San Francisco Open Championship at Sears Point. She became the only woman to do so, and still is. Scared to death of motorcycles, Robin is blissfully happy racing on a quarter-mile strip revved up to 105 miles per hour and once did 114 miles an hour. Her fastest clocking was 12.6 seconds.

THE CHAMPION also excels in auto crossing.

About as unassuming as a person can be and "not really competitive," claiming she races for the fun of the sport, Robin is, nevertheless, regarded by other women drivers as a formidable opponent. Known from California west to the Mississippi, the boundaries of the Western States Corvette Council, Robin took first place in the 1972 competition's women's prepared class.

This year's winner in the Corvettes women's prepared class autocross in the Northern California Sportscar Council, Robin is also in first place for ongoing autocrosses with the Northern California Sportscar Club Council.

IN FACT, ROBIN'S point lead is so great that she can afford to miss a few events. Which, she claims in a soft, high octave, little girl voice, may be a good thing.

"Maybe some more girls will race. Anyway, I couldn't drive last month because the accelerator stuck and I hit a cyclone fence. I wasn't scared, just mad. It looked awful because Corvettes crumble upon impact and don't bounce like other cars. But it really makes them much safer."

She recalls one frightening incident when the car hit oil on a strip and rolled over. "I was worried about fire, but that's silly. It just can't happen because of the fuel injection system. Sirens were wailing and people were all over the place trying to help me. I climbed out fast yelling, 'I'm fine, I'm fine, but my jade ring is broken.' I didn't leave until we found every piece."

MORE ACCOMPLISHED with a wrench than with knitting needles, Robin can pull the head, drop leaders, change spark plugs, jumper the battery and adjust the clutch.

"Now, when worse comes to worse, I'm sure I can figure some way out on my own. I wanted to learn about the repairs and help Neil since I was doing so much racing."

Leaning toward more domestic interests, Robin sews "easy things," gardens, works for Coleman School Parent-Teacher Assn., where Rebecca, age 6, is a student, and anticipates getting involved again in the San Rafael Co-operative Nursery when Sarah, aged 3, starts in the fall.

ROBIN AND NEIL Andersen have been "in-to" Corvettes for more than 10 years. They met through mutual friends interested in racing.

"I didn't know anything about it then but after I met Neil it was either fight him or join him. I joined. You see, I have a nifty husband and if his thing was jumping off the Golden Gate Bridge I'd be doing it, too. But instead it's cars: Corvettes, drag races, autocrosses, rallies, concourses. He just loves it, and so do I."

To prove the expertise of the team, there is a wall-to-wall display of 450 trophies of which Mrs. Andersen has won about half.

Robin's most precious award is the Sears Point trophy "because I won it all by myself. Neil didn't help me at all. I keep it close to the door so if this old house ever burns I can grab it fast, take my kids and run."

A CHANCE TO add to their collection comes up tomorrow for the Andersens at the eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show, Strawberry, Mill Valley, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The admission price of $1 will benefit the Marin County Chapter Kidney Foundation of Northern California. Children under 12 are admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

Co-sponsored by the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, and the Antique Car Club of America, the show expects more than 140 entries. James Webb, shopping center manager, is show director. Gene Babow will be master of ceremonies.

The show's nine classes of stock autos (that is, cars not customized or hot-rodded) will include Horseless Carriage 1900-22; Antique 1923-34; Vintage 1935-48; Classic 1925-48; Post-War Sedan 1949-63; Super Sport and Sport 1930-72; and two Porsche classes.

Marin Counts Its Serious Bridge Players In The Thousands, And Numbers Grow

By WAT TAKESHITA

The card game of bridge has suffered many a black eye it does not really deserve.

The classic story about marriages being wrecked at the bridge table, and the standard joke about the player who was shot dead because he trumped his partner's ace are exaggerations that reflect unfairly on a popular social activity that has probably accomplished far more good than harm.

Admittedly, there are a few rude and arrogant bridge players, especially in the highly competitive duplicate bridge circles, but for every one of these are a hundred friendly people who enjoy an inexpensive (about $1.50 fee for an afternoon or evening of entertainment and socializing) pastime that keeps the mind alert and provides social companionship and camaraderie that might not be available otherwise for the retired, the lonely or the non-joiner.

NEW PEOPLE moving into Marin find in the bridge clubs a built-in social center where young and old mingle in friendly competition, drawn together by a common interest. Chance aquaintances at bridge clubs lead to lasting friendships and sometimes to marriage.

Serious bridge players in Marin number in the thousands, and those who occasionally dabble in afternoon or evening card parties or follow the bridge columns in the Independent-Journal would raise the figure into the tens of thousands. This large group of "party" bridge players are fairly well known.

The group that needs an introduction and perhaps an explanation in their behalf are the duplicate bridge players, who have earned the reputation in some quarters of being rude and conceited grouches, who think bridge is a matter of life and death.

MUCH OF THIS reputation is undeserved; they are just as human as "fun" players — except that the rules of duplicate bridge make the game much more competitive.

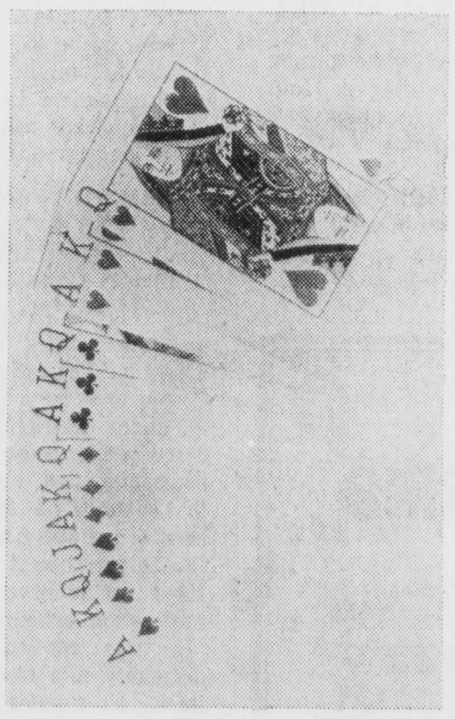
Here's the difference between "party" bridge and "duplicate" bridge: In party bridge, a group of four will sit at one table (other foursomes at other tables) and take turns dealing out cards — 13 cards to each player. Normally, if you happen to get good cards all evening, you'll end up the winner, even against a Goren or a Sheinwold.

At a duplicate bridge club, the element of luck is largely eliminated. Each foursome deals out the first deck of cards and plays the hand, but the cards are never reshuffled thereafter. The four hands (each with 13 cards) are placed in a metal holder with four slots. The metal holder, called a "board," is then passed to the next table of players so that each table plays the same hands that were played at each of the other tables.

AFTER ALL COUPLES have played all the boards, the results are compared. Those who make the most out of the same hands get the best scores. In other words, you can sit all night without a single face card and still emerge the winner because each of the other couples sitting in the same direction will have played the same hands.

Like any game with intense rivalry, emotions run high and tempers may flare, but these instances are exceptions, particularly within Marin's three duplicate bridge clubs, which are favorably known throughout the Bay Area for their friendly atmosphere.

Every club in Marin has novice and junior games where those inexperienced in duplicate bridge will get instructions, pleasant partners, a warm welcome, and free refreshments.



MARIN'S THREE bridge centers are:

CROSSLEY BRIDGE CENTER

Marin's first bridge club was launched in 1952 by Dr. C.F. (Cap) Crossley and Lura Crossley at the old Jewish Center on Mission Avenue in San Rafael. They were the only two members of the American Contract Bridge League at the time.

The club drew only about three tables once a week. As the club expanded, it moved to larger quarters at 714 C Street in 1967 where it operated for six years. Last February, the Crossley Bridge Center moved to Greenbrae in the spacious Greenbrae Rod and Gun Clubhouse, with kitchen facilities and beer and wine in addition to coffee and snacks.

Crossley Bridge Center now has 10 games weekly, drawing about 3,000 players each week.

Mrs. Crossley now operates the club with the help of sons Bill, David and Bob, all life masters, and daughter Janet. Also on her staff is Les West, who has 3,200 master points and is one of the leading players in the country.

The Crossley brothers were members of a team that won the knockout team-of-four event in the regional tournament held in Medford, Ore., in May. They have been qualifying for years in the Blue Ribbon Pairs event of the fall national tournaments, where almost every team is nationally ranked.

Crossley Bridge Center has the following games:

Mondays — 10:30 a.m., open game for all players. (Crossley Center also spon-

PROFILE OF A MARINITE

"Swimming teaches you that when you think you're trying hard to do something, you're really only touching the surface of what your body can do," says Marin's Olympic star Rick DeMont, who has never regretted the time and the effort he has devoted to the sport, and who now looks forward to a college career.

'I'm Naturally Competitive,' Says Swimming Champion Rick DeMont. 'I Don't Want To Lose At Anything.'

By PAUL CANE

A recreation that started out as just "something to do" has turned into a life style for Olympic swim champ Rick DeMont of Terra Linda, and the 17-year-old college freshman doesn't think he's missed out on anything at all.

"I just do my thing — swim," DeMont says.

And swim he does: up to five hours per day, six days a week. But not even considering the many awards he has received — the wall of his bedroom is lined with plaques and certificates, including a personal letter from President Richard M. Nixon — DeMont says that swimming has given him something special that will stay with him for the rest of his life.

"Swimming teaches you that when you think you're trying hard to do something, you're really only touching the surface of what your body can really do," DeMont philosophized. Afflicted with many allergies, and later asthma, since early childhood, DeMont's rise to prominence, and then fame, in the sports world is a testimonial to his determination to succeed in what now consumes his days.

THE OLDEST OF four children of Dr. Willard and Betty DeMont, Rick lived his first six years in Mill Valley. The family moved to their current home in 1963, seeking a more complimentary environment for Rick's many ailments.

A nature lover, DeMont would spend much of his time wandering in the woods in the Mill Valley area, a hobby not agreeable to the many allergies he suffered from at that time.

"I'd go off into the woods and come back with welts all over my body, and puffy skin around my eyes," he recalled. "But my mom didn't baby me — she didn't say, 'You can't do this or that.' "

JUST AFTER moving to his present 138 Circle Road residence, DeMont and his younger brother, Ken, joined the Ann Curtis swim team in Terra Linda, and it was while representing this club that Rick gained his first national recognition — at the ripe old age of 10.

Although only training "about an hour a day" DeMont set a National Amateur Athletic Union record for the 10-and-under age group 200-yard freestyle: 2:09.5. (Rick's time for the event now is nearly 30 seconds faster than the mark he set at age 10.)

With a national age group record to his credit, was he starting to think "Olympics?"

ALTHOUGH AT the top of others his age then, Rick says, "I mostly was just fooling around. It was just fun time, and I really wasn't working out that much."

A rapid series of local swim club mergers had DeMont training under a series of coaches — from former Olympic gold medalist Ann Curtis Cuneo to Art Octavio and Galen Hopkins of the Marin Aquatic Club. (Rick's siblings, 15-year-old Ken, Diane, 12, and 8-year-old Jeanine are also swimmers for the Marin A.C.)

After a three-year period of relative aquatic dormancy — "I didn't really get serious about it until I had Don" — DeMont's attitude and performances underwent tremendous changes in the beginning of 1971. Now Rick can trace the start of his surge to a particular incident.

HE HAD BEEN selected to participate as a relay member on the "North" squad in the annual Pacific Association vs. Southern Pacific Association dual age group meet.

"I didn't want to blow it," he remembers, "so I came to every practice (the Marin A.C. was then working out 3.5 hours per day) for about three weeks." When the time for the meet came, he said, "The coach (former DeAnza Swim Club coach Lash Turville) didn't let me swim the relay." That angered DeMont so much that he decided, "From now on I'm going to do my best all the time."

The way to greatness, he affirms, is nothing but hard work. "There's no way you can do it without working, especially in distance events," he said.

HIS DEDICATION paid off that spring, because although he didn't qualify for the National AAU Championships, he startled local swimming fans by being the first Marin County swimmer to break four minutes in the 400-yard freestyle, traveling the route in 3:51.

He did attend the Nationals, though, as a spectator. "That was the neatest thing I ever saw, it was so exciting, watching guys like (Mark) Spitz, (Gary) Hall, and (John) Kinsella for the first time."

Although it was, as he put it, "a little mind-blowing," he said the experience inspired him to work even harder for higher levels of success.

HE COMPETED in his first national championship that summer in Huston, Tex., and despite suffering an asthma attack the night before his 400-meter freestyle, he improved his best times in both the 400 and 1,500-free races, placing 14th in the 1,500.

Now was he thinking "Olympics?" No way. "It seemed so far away, Rick recalled. "I didn't consider myself in that class."

The winter of 1972 saw a little reorganization of his personal priorities. The summer before he had taken time out to go on a Canadian vacation, but this year other interests were put to the side. Hobbies like fishing, backpacking, bicycling, nature study, ping-pong and chess were relegated to backseat importance. "You have to give yourself to swimming," DeMont said.

BUT DESPITE that dedication, the Munich Olympics still did not seem a possibility, he said.

Good finishes in the early spring led to a third place at the short course National AAUs in Dallas. Then, all of a sudden, Olympic-mania struck. "I was freaked out, and got all nervous," he reports. "It was like a piano dropping on your head."

All he could do to escape the mounting pressure was to train harder, harder, harder. Top performances in early summer meets labeled him a favorite to land an Olympic berth in the 1,500, and when the Olympic Trials in Chicago came along, Swartz also sent Rick to the blocks in the 400, an event that was considered by some to be too short for the distance ace to do well in. DeMont justified his coach's gamble by grabbing second in the U.S. Trials behind Tom McBreen of the Golden Gate Aquatic Club.

FROM THEN ON at the Trials it was almost a breeze. Two days later, he won the 1,500-meter free in a world record 15:52 time. On to Munich.

The biggest thrill of his life came just four weeks later in the 20th Olympiad, when he outdueled Australia's Brad Cooper to score a surprise victory in the 400-meter freestyle in 4:00.2. His joy ("My whole body just tingled for two hours after that. I think I wore my medal to bed with me that night") turned to sorrow and shock a few days later, when the International Olympic Committee ruled that an ingredient in Rick's asthma medication, ephedrine, was illegal.

He was notified of the decision to disqualify him from the upcoming 1,500 finals just minutes before he was to leave the locker room for the race.

"IT DROPPED ME from the highest high to the lowest low," he said. He was more bothered that he was not allowed to swim the 1,500 than he was that his 400 title was to be taken away, because "I knew I won the 400, and that's what counts."

Sickness hurt DeMont's short course season in this post-Olympic year, as he only took fifth in the 1,650-yard free in the April Nationals. But he gave every indication that he was back on the beam in the end of June, capturing the Santa Clara Swim Invitational 1,500 crown in a speedy 16:08.8 clocking, a time that promises a better summer this year than in 1972.

What goals does he have for the future?

"I'M HOPING to make the World Games (in Belgrade, Yugoslavia) this September," he said. To do so, he would need a top-two placing first at the long course Nationals in Louisville, Ky.

To again bring up the eternal question, what about the Olympics in 1976?

"It's too far away to look," Rick says. The Terra Linda High School grad said he plans to relax a little next summer following his first year at the University of Washington.

"You can't go full speed for four years or you'll never make it," he said.

ALTHOUGH CAUTIOUS about burning himself out over the next few years to the point where he's sick of swimming, DeMont says he hasn't missed anything in life through his dedication to the sport. On the contrary, he feels he has gained a great deal in return for the long hours he's spent in the water.

Obviously, his labors have been financially useful since he has earned a four-year scholarship. "Some guys work all summer to pay for their college education. I do it in the pool," he said.

But Rick certainly isn't swimming just for the financial aid. If he gets tired of the sport, "I'll give up the scholarship and quit."

HE DEBUNKED triple-gold medalist Shane Gould's reasons for retirement. She has claimed that she just was not leading a normal life in the rigorous conditioning routine.

"There's no way you can do it without working, especially in the distance events," says Rick DeMont of achievement generally, and of the challenging sport of swimming specifically.

DeMont said, "I have time to do whatever I want." He noted that few students his age had done as much travleing as he had, and emphasized that he had many friends out of the pool as well as in it.

Swimming, he continued, has taught him to organize his time to get everything done, a habit that will stay with him long after he hangs up the suit.

But mostly, DeMont says, swimming has taught him that a person can accomplish far more than he believes possible, in any endeavor.

A GOOD STUDENT in high school, Rick is looking forward to his upcoming college career, both in the water under coach Earl Ellis, and out of it. When he traveled up to look at the school, he said he fell in love with the setting and people there.

DeMont commented, "The area is like utopia" for an outdoorsman such as he.

Also entering Washington as freshmen are Olympic medalists Robin Backhaus and Doug Northway, both of the Marin Aquatic Club. Rick predicts Washington will challenge for an NCAA championship in two years.

DeMont admits he's "naturally competitive."

"I don't want to lose at anything," he affirmed.

An attitude like that should carry him far — in any field.

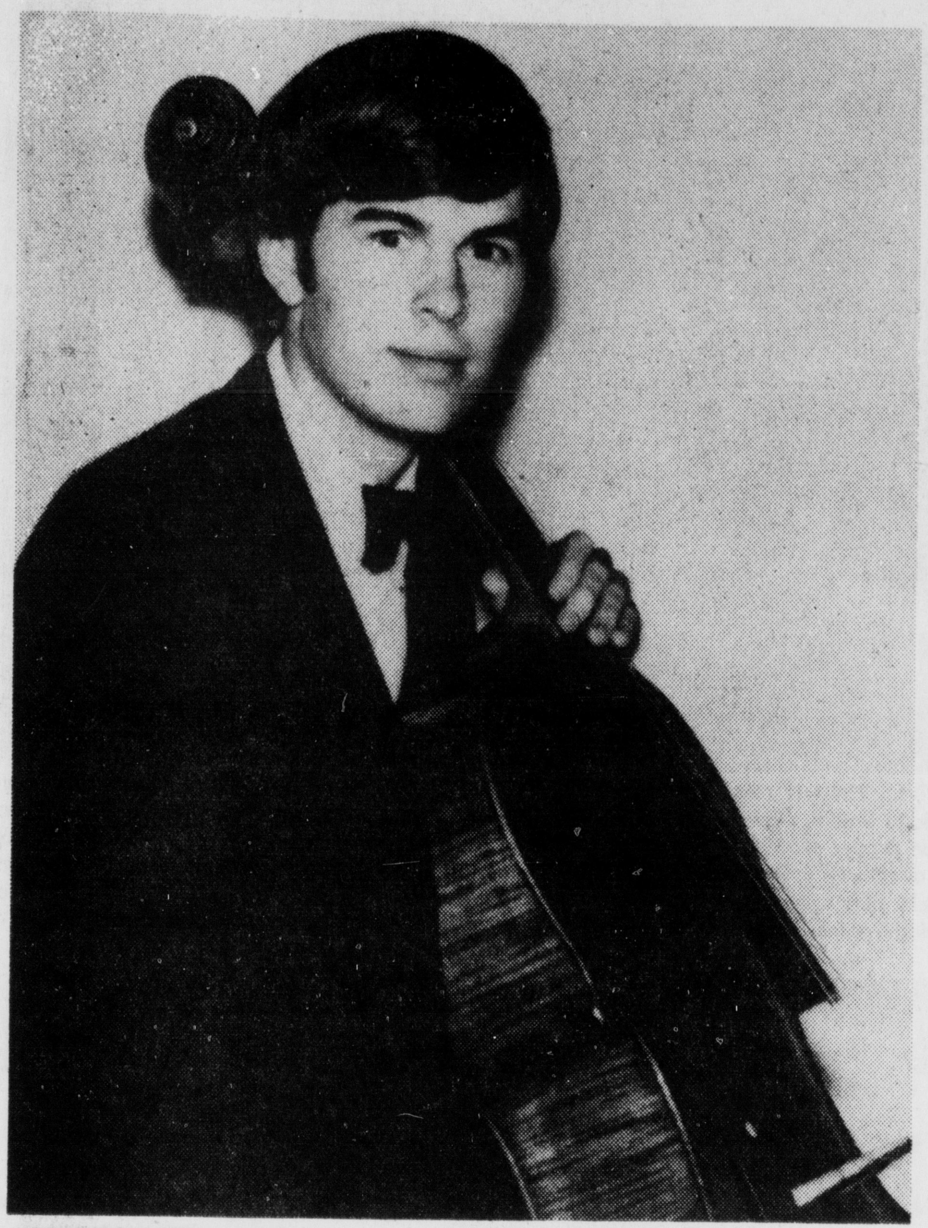
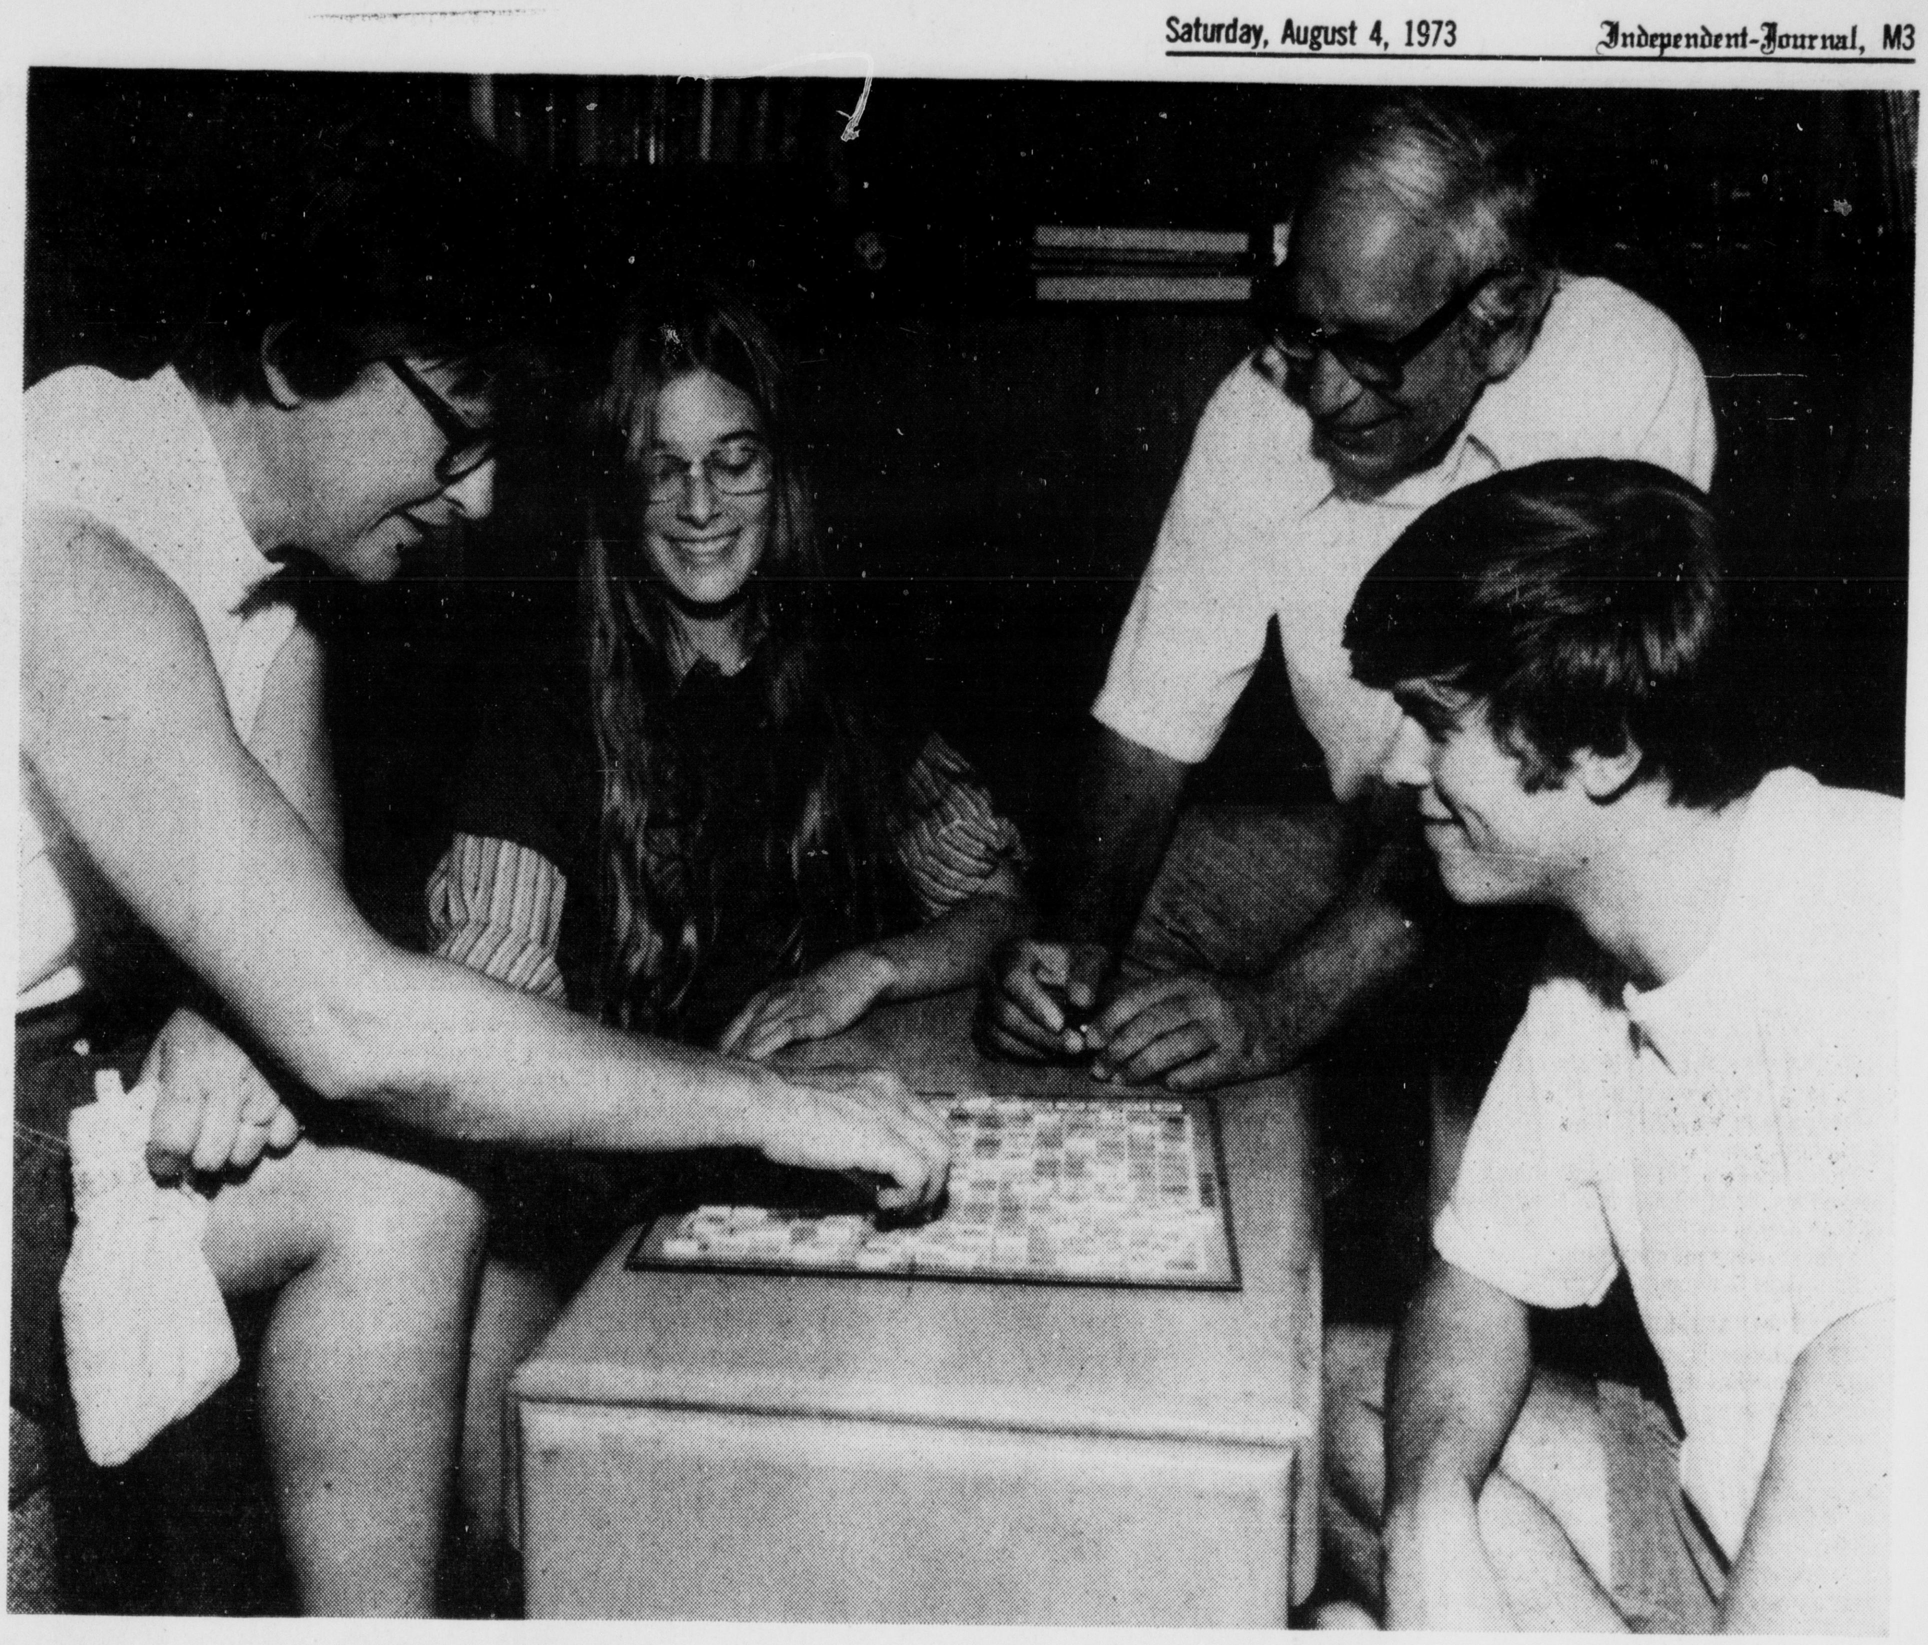
MARIN LIVING





UPON THE INSTRUMENT he chose at age 9, the cello, Jed Barahal, now 18, performs with a brilliance that belies his youth. He will next be heard Saturday, Aug. 11, at 8 p.m., in an Inverness Music Festival performance at St. Columba's Church, Inverness. But Jed is a young man of many interests and a member of a versatile family. At right, with his mother, Anabel, his sister Rachel, 17, and his father, Allan, he enjoys a game of multi-lingual scrabble in their Terra Linda residence. They share a fascination for languages sharpened by an extended stay in Europe in 1971.

Virtuoso cellist Jed Barahal carries himself with a serene poise and self-confidence bespeaking a maturity and depth of sensitivity beyond his 18 years.

Having just graduated as a top honors student in his class at San Rafael High School, Jed looks back upon an impressive early career of concerts and solo recitals, and upon years of training under the tutelage of several world renown instructors.

Looking slightly ahead, he is devoting practice time to his recital next week with the Inverness Music Festival, to be directed by one of Jed's most enthusiastic admirers, Maestro Sandor Salgo.

JED STARTED WITH the piano at the age of 6, but in three years he transferred his interest to the cello under the auspices of the Dixie Schools String Music Program. Concurrently, he drew much encouragement and support from the rich cultural home environmental provided by his talented parents Allan and Anabel Barahal, both teachers and string musicians themselves.

"Richard Anastasio is the most important person in my musical development," emphasizes Jed. "We are very close in musical concepts. We have a one-to-one student-teacher relationship.

"I also studied with Hugo Rinaldi in the Marin Youth Orchestra for four years. He is a great person and his attention and help was vital."

IN 1971 THE BARAHALS toured Europe, and Jed, by virtue of his outstanding sophomore year scholarship at San Rafael High School, took a year long leave of absence and spent a summer in the master classes of Paul Tortelier in Nice and Pierre Fournier in Zurich,. In the fall he attended the Geneva Conservatory of Music.

While Jed was studying Mrs. Barahal and Jed's siter, Rachel, 17, made a tour of medieval English churches and cathedrals where they set to the intriguing art of "brass rubbings," whereby impressions of 14th and 15th Century brass engravings were transferred to large sheets of paper rubbed with colored wax sticks. Many of these striking replicas of Middle Ages folk history have been suitably framed and now grace the walls of the Barahal home in Terra Linda.

The year in Europe was worth a lot in experience to Jed: "The masters are not teachers but coaches. They show you how to play, and hopefully you learn from that. I was upset about it, I expected them to be teachers. I did get personal attention from Tortelier, but essentially it was a one-way relationship.

"MAINLY THE master classes were an opportunity to relate and compare with other young students from around the world. I found teacher relationships secondary to relationships with other students."

"I spent six months at the conservatory in Geneva. Contrary to their reputation the level of musicianship is much lower there than in American schools. The teaching is old-fashioned and backward there . . . the European schools don't compare . . . the schools here are much better. European schools over-emphasize technique with too little inter-relation with the feeling of the music, the performance.

"Perhaps the distance of the European schools from the United States explains the undue romance and reputation."

NOTWITHSTANDING his experiences in Europe, Jed has been awarded several grants and scholarships for outstanding musicianship, and this fall begins his study of music theory at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

"I don't want my life to become restricted by music, I still have a lot of growing and learning to do. Music is an emotion derived from life's experiences. Music involves living and experiencing.

"You don't need theory to feel music; its not basic but secondary. My greatest difficulties are maintaining my concentration on the music and trying not to become overly involved in technical details . . . they become a trap.

"THE AUDIENCE provides stimulation — it also makes you nervous — and I do better in concerts than in practice. Playing for the audience keeps me from becoming overly involved in the technical aspect.

"European audiences clap madly at the end of a performance, clap in unison for an encore, American audiences are more critical and have more taste.

"Europeans start learning their instruments much later than American students and it affects the quality of musicianship. It is important to start early and to grow up with music."

LOCALLY, JED has been involved in the performing youth groups, the San Rafael High Orchestra and the Marin Youth Symphony with which he gave his first solo recital at the age of 13. This year he has appeared as guest soloist with the Fremont-Newark Orchestra and as solist with the Marin Symphony Orchestra to rave reviews under the direction of Salgo.

Among his other credits he was first cellist, on scholarhip, with the World Youth Symphony at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich., with the All California Youth Orchestra in Santa Barbara, the Dominican Chamber Orchestra, the Orchestra Piccola, and the Boston University Young Artists Program at Tanglewood.

He has also participated in music camps at Sun Valley, Idaho, and Flagstaff, Ariz.

HIS MANY scholarships include the 1971 Marin Symphony Memorial Scholarship and the Maurice Wilk Memorial Scholarship from Dominican College in 1970.

Jed had planned to spend his summer in Santa Barbara at the Music Academy of the West directed by Maurice Abravanel, but found the relationship with his instructor unworkable and thereupon returned to Marin to devote his time to rehearsing for the Inverness Music Festival.

It was in fact Sandor Salgo's decision to include the gifted young cellist in this year's West Marin festival program. "I enjoyed performing with Maestro Salgo, although we've had only one performance together."

SALGO'S INTEREST in Jed is particularly noteworthy, inasmuch as the maestro has heavily emphasized his favorite composer, Mozart, in the program with few exceptions. And as it happened Mozart did not write for the cello.

"I guess it was because Mozart's father didn't like the cello . . . and the viola da gamba was going out of style," mused Jed.

Upon review of the cello recital, however, Salgo did delete a contemporary work by Britten.

Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms are Jed's "most meaningful composers, but he also favors the modern composers Prokofiev, Shostakovich and Britten. His recital next weekend at Inverness includes works of Luigi Boccherini, J. S. Bach and J. Haydn.

ANOTHER POWERFUL insight into Jed is his range of interests and his supportive family life. At one time he was considering architecture as a pursuit and his interests include drafting, calligraphy and a particular fascination for languages developed in the course of his European tour. (In fact, the entire family played multilingual scrabble games throughout Europe.)

Mrs. Barahal herself plays the violin and teaches string instruments and orchestra in the Dixie School District grades four through eight. She and daughter Rachel enjoy ceramics and pottery-making, and an electric kiln adjacent to the front entrance bears silent testament to this.

Barahal, formerly a longshoreman, also plays the cello, but, notes Jed, they stopped playing together some time ago "when I mentioned that he was playing out-of-tune."

BARAHAL TEACHES philosophy and humanities at the San Rafael High School alternative school Nexus. He is at the moment hiking in the Swiss Alps and may not return in time to hear Jed's recital next week.

Just behind the upright piano a full-size ping pong table sits incongrously between the living room and a seven-foot framed brass rubbing on the far wall. Outside, badminton and basketball courts, and a potter's wheel.

Next Saturday Aug. 11 at 8 p.m., Jed will give his recital with the piano accompaniment of William Grant in the beautiful St. Columba's Church in Inverness. Reservations for the Jed Barahal recital and the other performances are available at Box 2, Inverness, 94937.

Road & Track called the 450SL "one of the ten best cars in the world."

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience — maybe for the first time in your life — what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

at Old Browns is a
that sells plants. And fish and minerals and shells.

Sometimes you can hear our store before you see it. Our birds do that advertising for us. One even does a dance with his song. And in return, we specialize in keeping birds healthy. We even give our free Park Bird Survival Manual with every bird, bird accessory or birdcage that we sell. And we sell a lot of birdcages to people who keep plants in them. But that's okay. We're not just a bird store. We're also a plant store. Fish store. Mineral store. Shell store. And we're the only store that sells custom living systems. You'll find us in a redwood building with 52 stained glass windows in front, a domed skylight above, and a brook below. Take 101 to the Stinson Beach/Mill Valley exit, follow the signs to Mill Valley, and bring a little nature home with you.

The Name Of Game Is Bridge

HERE IS BRIDGE AS it should be played, in a relaxed atmosphere for those who want a pleasant diversion from daily routine, and with expert instructors to help enthusiasts with the finer points of duplicate bridge. The Crossley Bridge Center at the Greenbrae Rod and Gun Clubhouse is operated by Lura Crossley and her three sons, all life masters and well-known nationwide. Coffee and refreshment stand is in background. Note how each player places his cards in neat piles in front of him so that the same hands can be passed on to the next table unshuffled.

HOUSEWIVES FIND IT relaxing to break up the day's work with an afternoon of bridge at San Rafael Bridge Studio. Maxine Cantrell (standing), director of the studio on West End Avenue, makes a ruling on proper procedure at one of the tables. Whenever a playermakes a play or bids out of turn, the director is promptly called for a ruling on how to proceed. This large room and two others in the back, plus refreshment facilities, provide pleasant quarters for 13 duplicate games and two rubber bridge games each week.

BRIDGE EXPERT Bill Crossley gives pointers on how and when to finesse, execute squeeze plays, or just bang down the cards and pray for a drop of the key cards. The "students," all seasoned players, are (clockwise) Janet Crossley, Caye Elliott, Lorraine Hopkins, Frankie Berryman, and Virginia Goodall, and the scene is the Crossley Bridge Center.

YOUR BRIDGE GAME may turn sour on occasion, but the tasty refreshments cooked up by Maxine Cantrell at her San Rafael Bridge Studio is enough to put the smile back on the faces of her many patrons. The individually decorated cups lined on the shelves have names of customers who have won four first places in club competition during a two-month period.

SAN RAFAEL BRIDGE STUDIO

What to most people is a hobby and a social game has turned out to be a bread-and-butter enterprise for Maxine Cantrell and Gerry T. Lent. The San Rafael Bridge Studio at 215 West End Avenue operates about 18 hours a day, six and one-half days a week, but it started out nine years ago as a four-hour class once a week for 10 persons. The club now averages 1,200 to 2,000 persons per month.

Maxine Cantrell started duplicate bridge in Merced. When her husband Everett took a job in San Rafael with the city schools, the family moved to Marin where Mrs. Cantrell taught third garde at Lagunitas School and maintained a home with five teen-aged children. In the evenings she attended local bridge clubs for relaxation and to perfect her duplicate bridge game.

In 1964, she opened a duplicate club of her own at Lagunitas School. As the club grew, the Cantrells moved their bridge club to 1220 Grand Avenue in San Rafael, but parking problems forced them to seek a better location. They found a two-bedroom house in commercial zoning at the present location, 215 West End Avenue.

The Cantrells, with the help of their son-in-law and friends, remodeled the interior for bridge use, and on Sept. 7, 1967, San Rafael Bridge Studio held its grand opening at its present location.

Since then, the Cantrells built a large addition to the building to provide spacious quarters for a full-fledged bridge studio, with kitchen facilities and the coziness and comforts of home.

Lent, Mrs. Cantrell's partner in the business, first dropped into the studio in March of 1970. With a varied background in bridge, education and psychology, Lent found himself on the staff fairly quickly and worked in the studio in various capacities for two years before becoming a partner in June of 1972.

To cater to all tastes, San Rafael Bridge Studio has 13 duplicate games a week as well as two rubber bridge games per week and classes for the beginning and novice duplicate players. People who lack partners may walk in to the club any day; Mrs. Cantrell and Lent have a reputation for pairing up players of comparable rank.

They also have three full-time certified directors, with others on standby to fill in when needed.

San Rafael Bridge Studio has the following games:

Sundays — 7 p.m. open game. (An afternoon game at 1 p.m. is held once a month).

Mondays — 12:30 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. (The 7:30 game is rubber bridge).

Wednesdays — 12:30 p.m. (This one, called Vic's Club, is run by Ludovica Bigelow of Fairfax, one of the county's first life masters); 7:45 p.m., junior game.

Thursdays — 12:30 p.m. and 8 p.m., open games.

Saturdays — 12:30 p.m. open game; 8 p.m. (Vic's Club) open game.

BETTY'S BRIDGE CLUB

The county's newest duplicate club was opened in April of 1972 by Betty Krambs, who has Dirf Benford and Mary Boone Gibson helping her as directors.

Betty's Bridge Club, located at 912 Sherman Avenue in Novato, near the city hall, has the following games:

Wednesdays — 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., open games.

Thursdays — 8 p.m., both an open game for all players and a junior game for the less experienced.

Firdays — 8 p.m., open game.

Saturdays — 8 p.m. open game.

THE RUNNING argument on whether the duplicate player is superior to the "party" or "rubber" bridge player may never be settled because the differences in the games call for different styles of play.

The consensus of those who have played both types of bridge appears to be that bidding techniques of the duplicate player are more precise, but the play of the hand depends on the amount of experience and the skill of the individual.

Some of the top party players in Marin can run circles around many of the duplicate players. They take delight in inviting their duplicate friends for a fast game of party bridge, employing a free-wheeling bidding style, tempered by good card sense and intuition, that confounds the more meticulous and convention-bound duplicate players.

The aim of the party player is to draw good cards, leap directly into a game or slam contract without giving too much information to the opponents, finagle the opposition out of a trick or two, and rack up the points. Their play is rapid because the goal is to make the contract, and an extra trick or two over the contract is of little consequence. Party players waste little time discussing and analyzing each hand because the same hand will probably never be dealt again.

THE DUPLICATE player savors each hand like a tasty morsel to be chewed carefully and digested slowly. On occasion, he might ponder for three minutes before making a crucial play, calculating the odds of finessing for the queen of spades or playing to drop the queen because the opponents have only four spades in their combined hands.

For the duplicate player, making a game or slam, or even a part score contract is not enough; he must squeeze every trick he can possibly squeeze either by trickery or superior play because others in the same room will play that same hand. If either players in the room make five spades while he makes only four, he gets a score of zero for that one hand.

The duplicate player is armed with a long list of conventions, many of them artificial, which in theory should enable him and his partner to arrive at the optimum contract on each hand. In actual practice, some of the duplicate players, particularly if they are loaded down with unfamiliar conventions, sometimes wind up in ridiculous contracts that are not conducive to partnership confidence.

"Bridge," says Webster, "is a card game, derived from whist, in which the trump suit (or the fact there will be no trumps) is determined by the side proposing to take the higher number of tricks. . ." But to the game's devotees, it is much, much more than that.

THE FASCINATION of duplicate lies in the fact that the player can later discuss each hand with others in the room to see how they handled the same cards. Most duplicate players soon lose interest in party bridge, where much of the fun comes from getting good cards and the evening is a bore if opponents keep drawing all the aces and picture cards.

The question of who is better — the duplicate or the party player — need not be resolved because their objectives differ. The important thing is for all players to enjoy their game without shooting partners, wrecking marriages and showing contempt for those with a different outlook on what this game of bridge is all about.

special classes for five or more of any one type.

LAST YEAR'S event brought to the Town and Country Village show the largest display of Porsches in the Bay Area. Bidding for a similar title this year are the Corvette clubs in Marin who hope to double, perhaps triple, previous Corvette entries.

The North Bay Corvette Assn. is the biggest, with 29 cars and 50 members, the most active and oldest of the two clubs.

Starting with four Corvette owners, Bud de Castro did the spade work in 1968. Later Stan Wisness acted as adviser and Allen Foster was the club's first president.

Present officers are Nelson Humphreys, president; John Rittles, vice-president; Jean Humphreys, secretary; Ted Lindstrom, treasurer; Greg Conklin, social director. Neil Andersen, former club president for two years and membership chairman, now edits The Vette News, the club's bulletin.

SOCIAL IN NATURE, the club meets monthly at Campbell-Bishop Chevrolet, Corte Madera, and the emphasis is on members' participation in activities related to Corvette clubs and other sports-car groups. An annual event is joining the Tour to Tahoe, sponsored by the Fresno Corvette Club, and this year slated for Sept. 15-16.

Also on the calendar is the Napa Concourse for Corvette cars, Aug. 18, and the club sponsored Northern California SCCA Championship Autocross at the Cow Palace, Sept. 9.

Although guest speakers are welcomed, the club members feel that all learn more when an assigned topic is researched by a fellow member and his findings presented at a meeting.

The club's territory stretches from Cupertino to Santa Rosa and inquiries should be addressed to the North Bay Corvette Assn., Post Office Box 2012, San Rafael, or to Neil Andersen.

According to Jim Simontacchi, president, "We are still getting organized and we are in a learning period. We take tours and have planned a Tahoe Tour, Russian River Canoe Trip and Dinner Rally."

For more information, inquiries can be sent to Empire Chevrolet, Novato, where the club meets twice a month.

Although the clubs are distinct entities, mutual Corvette ownership makes them all blood brothers. And very quickly a prideful and refreshing red, white and blue streak surfaces when they declare that they chose Corvettes because they are "the only American-made true sportscar."

PRODUCED BY General Motors in limited numbers (30,000 is the estimated production figure for 1973 - up 2000 over last year) the car is built for American highways, claims the Corvette News from G.M., and "its record of 20 straight years of enhancing, enticing, frustrating, thrilling, roaring, racing, rallying and spinning wheels in pure joy is not matched by any other American car."

Most of the members agree that it can outaccelerate any other stock car. They call it a "brute — with muscle."

Some of the club members believe, however, that the days of muscle cars are over because new smog control laws are vastly influencing automobile power, and consequently motors are tuned down. Some accept the trend as necessary because of the great increase of cars on the highway, while others wonder if these devices will really alleviate the smog problems.

GARY THOMPSON, North Bay Corvette Assn, who with his brother Dave drag races in a 1963 Corvette, drives for pleasure a red 1965 hardtop roadster. He asserts that two years ago he averaged 18 miles to the gallon. Now, with smog devices, mileage is cut back to 10, which nearly doubles the fuel consumption and, he asserts, does not reduce emissions.

But car racing, which came into its own five years ago, goes on, and is now ranked as the second largest spectator sport in the USA. TV has widened coverage to bring frequent programs, and movies such as "Bullet" and "Beach Boy" have added glamour to the sport as have Hollywood stars Steve McQueen and James Garner.

THE NBCA HAILS Ken Burge as one of its claims to fame. Burge's solid black with blue striping 1967 custom roadster has been rebuilt from "the ground up." It is a show car and in five major concourses in Northern California and Arizona has taken four first prizes, one second and two sweepstakes awards. Burge shies away from the limelight, but friends will tell you that his car has over 200 per cent more chrome than the average Corvette, and that its chrome undercarriage is as clean as the interior.

Past President Bill Costello of the NBCA, who drives a 1960 white Corvette, also races and wins prizes in his hardtop 1955 Chevrolet.

Greg Conklin, NBCA, enters and wins in the street show roadster class with his 1966 maroon Corvette. Unique features include a minimum of chrome, a three-speed manual transmission and air conditioning in a roadster. Conklin believes that Corvette owners adapt the car to fit their personalities. "I'm conservative," he says.

Neil Andersen's 1964 gray fastback and a recently sold 1961 has autocross awards from Canada, Arizona and Oregon. Ted Lindstrom's 1961 silver stock roadster has taken many first places.

Because the Redwood Corvettes Unlimited Club is still so new, few of its members have competed, and many are waiting for their warranties to expire before customizing their cars. An exception is Jim Simontacchi who has owned Corvettes since 1964.

"Now I don't think I'd be happy with another car in the $6,000 to $7,000 class; besides I like them because they are American-made. When my dad helped me buy my first car he vetoed the Jaguar I had in mind and said it had to be an American product.

"Statistics show that more people are buying them now, but they've become a status symbol. I went into them when I was 14 purely and simply because they were fast."

NOT ONLY CAN the now 28-year-old Jim make his car tick on the inside, but his hobby is professional body moulding and painting — an art that should earn him the cognomen of "car sculptor" because he takes new parts and hand molds them to style. His car is a 1969 model made to look like a '72, and its only age clue is the interior.

"It was more of a challenge to take an old wreck and bring it up to date than to buy a new one," he says. The burnt orange body has 25 coats of paint plus a layer of crushed glass. Frosted silver with black and white webbing accented with orange lines drawn free hand highlights the rear roof section and the L88 hood configuration. It carries a price tag of $1,000 when done in a shop. The total remodeling took Jim six months.

For the fifth consecutive year proceeds from the Strawberry show tomorrow will aid the Marin County Chapter Kidney Foundation of Northern California. President-elect Charles Alvarez, who will head the chapter in November, is the organization's auto show chairman, which is the unit's only major fund-raising event. Receipts will substantially assist the Kidney Disease Screening Program.

THE ONLY PROGRAM of its kind in the Bay Area, its purpose is to detect urinary tract infections in school children from kindergarten through sixth grade.

What began as a pilot program at Coleman School last year has developed to include Kentfield, Reed and Mill Valley school districts with 7,500 children tested. Fall testing will cover the San Anselmo, Lagunitas and Corte Madera-Larkspur districts.

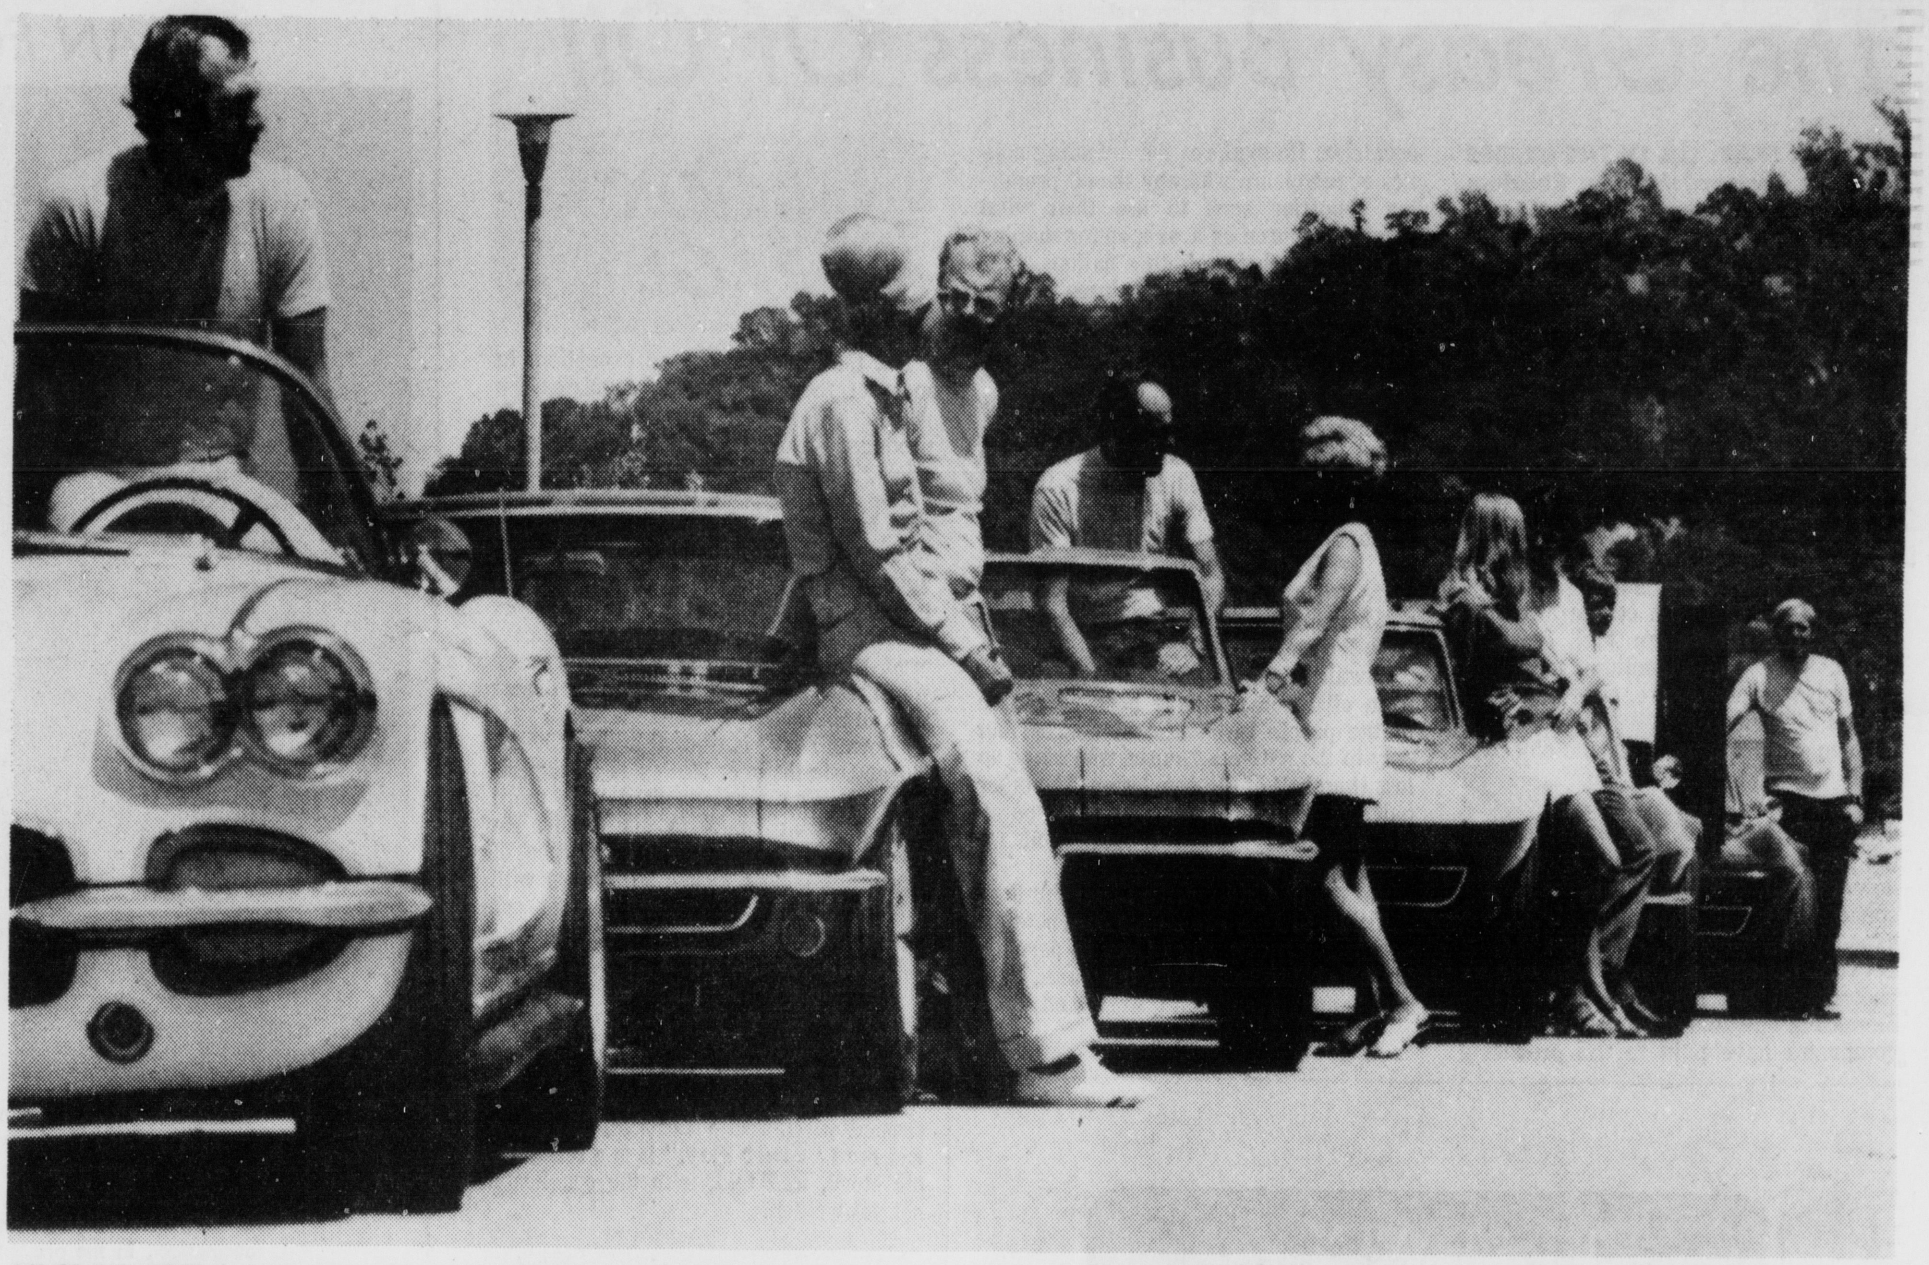
Speciemsn are checked for urinary tract infections, protein, blood and sugar. Statistics for the urinary infections show that between 1 and 2 per cent need retesting.

Volunteers with registered nursing backgrounds do the laboratory work and P-TA groups aid with the paper work. Testing was done at the Ross Valley Medical Clinic, which had donated free space. Recent remodeling of the clinic makes it impossible for the program to continue there and the Kidney Foundation is in search of new headquarters.

ABOUT 300 TESTS are run per week. To help defray the $1.60 expense per child parents are asked to give $1.

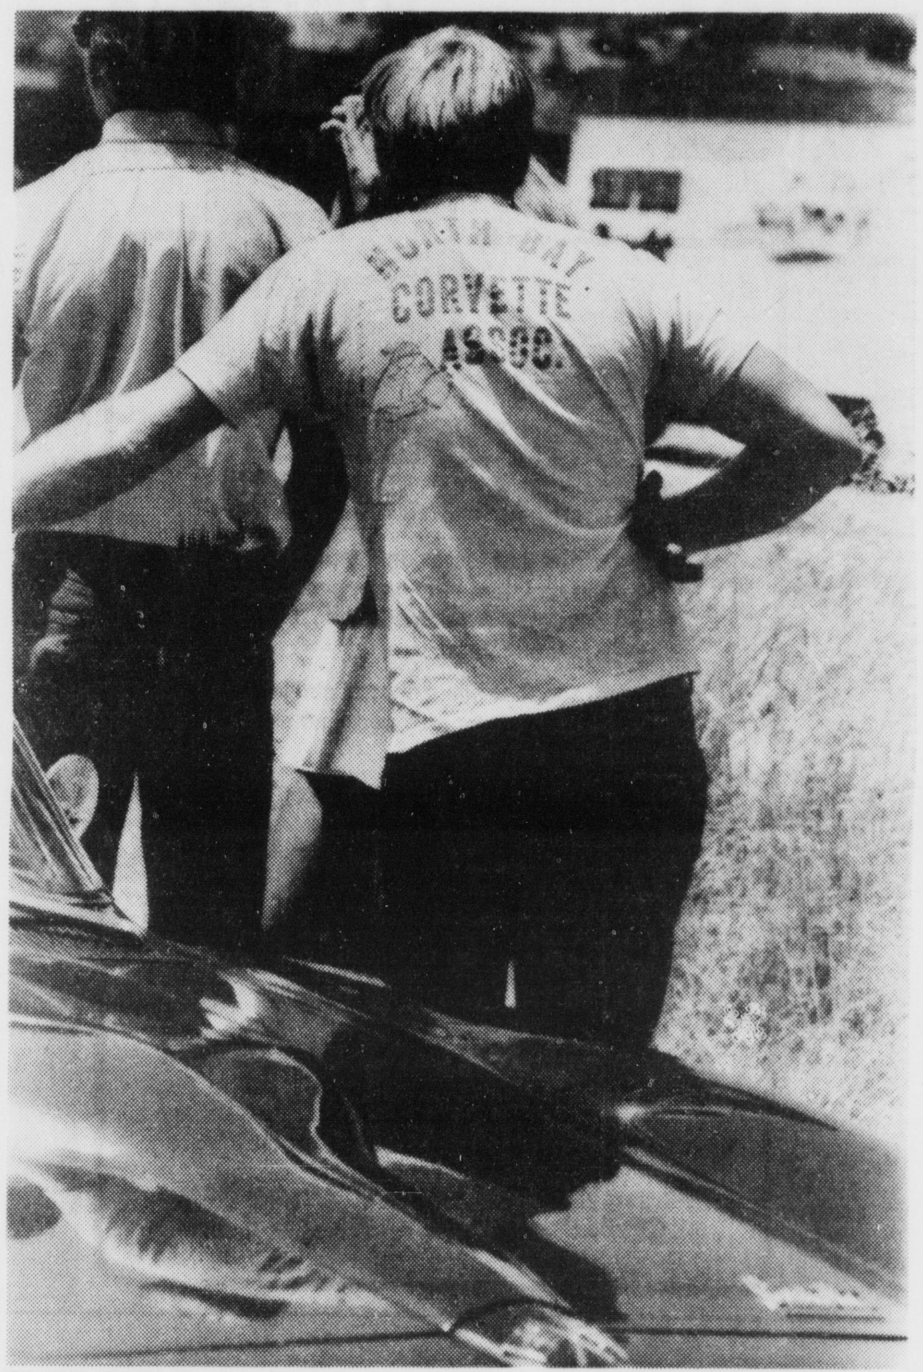
Also benefiting from the 61-member organization are 26 kidney patients who, through the drug bank program, can obtain expensive medicines at cost or, if necessary, free of charge.

Phone inquiries and donations are invited to continue the county-wide program and can be directed to Marin County Chapter Kidney Foundation Northern California, Post Office Box 153, San Rafael, or by telephoning the Marin County Heart Association.

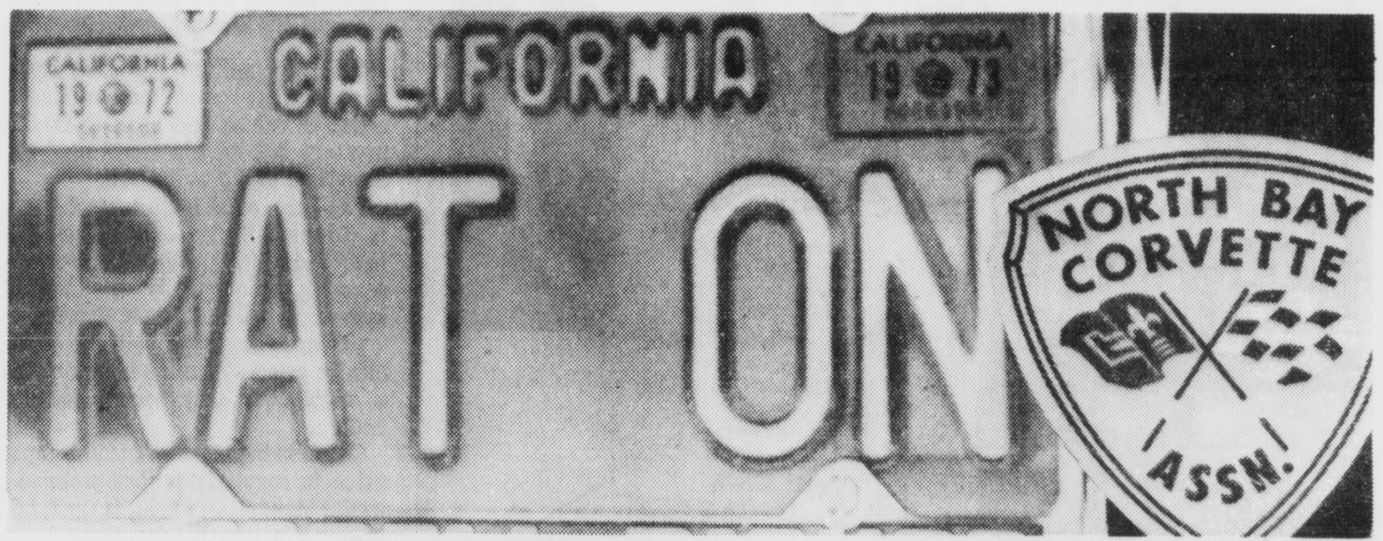


SIX OF THE MORE than two dozen Corvettes that will be on display tomorrow, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show in Mill Valley were lined up for this photo. Left to right are Bill Costello and his 1960 white roadster; Neil and Robin Andersen, 1964 grey fastback; John and Jane Rittler, 1965 red roadster; Nancy Lovell and Gary Thompson, 1965 hardtop roadster; Greg Conklin, 1966 maroon roadster; Ken Burge, 1967 solid black with blue striping custom roadster. All are prize-winning cars which will be competiting tomorrow and are owned by members of the North Bay Corvette Assn.

"YOU BROKE IT, you fix it," Neil Andersen tells his wife. And he can say it with a smile because his pretty blonde wife can pull the head, drop the leaders, change sparkplugs, jumper the battery and adjust the clutch." Between them the Andersens have a wall to wall display of more than 450 awards won in their 10 years of racing and showing their 1961 and 1964 Corvettes. Andersen served two years as president of the North Bay Corvette Association and now edits "Vette News", the club's bulletin.



OF THE TWO Corvette clubs in Marin, North Bay Corvette Assn. is the oldest and biggest. Formed in 1968, it has 29 cars and 50 members. The more recently formed Redwood Corvettes Unlimited has 17 active couples. Working together the two groups hope this year to bring the biggest display of Corvettes to the eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show tomorrow. Directed by James Webb, shopping center manager, the event is co-sponsored by the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America and the Antique Car Club of America.



KEN BURGE'S PERSONALIZED license "Rat-On" is a Corvette owner's way of telling other motorists, especially Corvette owners, that his car has a big block engine, otherwise known as a "rat motor." Small engine blocks are called mouse motors. Burge's prize-winning Corvette will be one of the many attractions at the auto show at Strawberry tomorrow. It is the major fund-raising event for Marin Chapter Norther California Kidney Foundation.

The Greasy Business Of Oil

POWER PLAY: OIL IN THE MIDDLE EAST by Leonard Mosley; Random House; 457 pages, $10. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

"Oil friendships are greasy," said Calouste Sarkis Gulbenkian, explaining why none of his friends were in the oil business, even though oil had made him one of the richest men in the world.

Gulbenkian knew at first hand the greed, duplicity and chicanery that black gold arouses in men of all colors. The industrial plant of Western Europe is fueled by Middle Eastern oil and the person, company or country controlling that oil is guaranteed immense wealth. The flame of that rich candle attracted Arab, Iranian, Western and Japanese moths. They were relentless, unscrupulous, adventurous, brave, even heroic, in pursuit of their goal. Like moths, many of them were consumed by the object of their desires.

In "Power Play," Leonard Mosley details the history of the development of the Middle Eastern oil industry. He tells how the oil companies acquired their concessions, the risks they took, the expense they went to, the double-dealing between nations that were involved. He shows what has happened to the ever-increasing amounts of money that the oil companies have paid to the producing countries. He explores the unfolding politics of petroleum whereby the oil producing countries seek to use their vital natural resource as a weapon for shaping the foreign policies of other nations.

France needs oil. She refuses to ship fighter planes to Israel. Italy and Japan need oil, but they are Johnny-come-latelies not welcomed by the old-timers, so they crack the monopoly by offering to pay more for the oil they must have.

For the people of the Middle East the great wealth from oil has been filtered through the avarice of their rulers. Aramco, damned as an "imperialist exploiter" by Mid-East nationalists has done more to provide education, health care and housing for its native employees than have the natives' leaders.

Kuwait is a unique case where benefits from oil resources have been passed on to the people in significant degree, but only to the native Kuwaitis, who make up less than half of the population. The other half are like the slaves who made possible Athenian greatness. They toil for small reward.

But the Kuwaitis are an exception. In most of the oil-producing countries the people are spared the burdens of oil-produced wealth. Their rulers don't let it trickle down to them.

The sheik of Abu Dhabi hoarded his gold and his pound notes in a storeroom. With millions of pounds a year in revenues and only 15,000 subjects, he did nothing for them. And when he was overthrown by his brother it was discovered that the hoarded paper currency was gone beyond recall, eaten by desert rats and insects.

"Power Play" is critical and forthright journalistic history. Mosley is an experienced foreign correspondent with more than a dozen books to his credit. He knows how to identify key sources of information, how to get interviews with them and most important, how to ask penetrating questions and evaluate the answers. Based on his reading and his questioning of rulers, diplomats and oilmen, he describes what has happened so far and speculates about what might happen in the future politics of power.

While you're saving gasoline during the present questionable shortage, stay home and read "Power Play." It is a remarkable story, well told, with the conclusion not yet written.

AN ECOLOGY THAT IS UNIQUE

THE DEAD HULK of a mangrove felled by Hurricane Donna in 1960 sprawls in the Shark River, among seedlings that presage a new forest, in this Dan McCoy photograph from "The Everglades" by Archie Carr, ninth volume in Time-Life's The American Wilderness Series. "The Everglades are unique," asserts Carr, before guiding his reader through 184 pages of exploration of the region and its distinctive ecology. Special photographic essays focus on particular aspects of the Everglades' fascination, in the proven Time-Life manner. Wildlife comes in for special attention, from alligators to the birds shown in a "sampler" of reproductions of John James Audubon paintings. Author Carr is a graduate research professor in the zoology department at the University of Florida. Dr. William B. Robertson Jr., research biologist for Everglades National Park, served as his consultant.

As a writer, Gerard I. Nierenberg, lawyer, semanticist, and founder-president of Negotiation Institute, is best known as the author of the popular "How to Read a Person Like a Book."

This book, however, is a combination of two of his other, more specialized books, "The Art of Negotiation" and "Creative Business Negotiation."

To those two books Nierenberg has added some new material to produce "Fundamentals of Negotiating," a basic test on how to conduct yourself in the give and take that is the foundation of today's economic and social systems.

One basic premise: In your negotiating never press for total victory. For the completely one-sided outcome is one that cannot stand the test of time. Both negotiators must feel they have gained, if they are to abide by their agreement.

Nierenberg and his publisher obviously are hopeful of an audience that will go beyond the obvious one of the professional and semi-pro negotiators of business and industry. They hope to convince the layman that he, too, can benefit from the same techniques. And well he might. But the truth is that "Fundamentals of Negotiating" is written in a style and in language that the non-professional is likely to find difficult and/or dull. And quite likely Neirenberg's readership will remain pretty well restricted to professionals whose business is the give-and-take around the table.

BROWSING BOOKMAN

Naturegraph, the based-in-Healdsburg publishers of natural history and Indian lore books, has issued a new edition of its highly regarded "Handbook of California Birds."

The book is the work of naturalist Vinson Brown and ornithologist Henry G. Weston Jr., with illustrations by Jerry Buzzell of San Jose, and now sells for $8.95 clothbound, $5.95 paperback.

The publisher describes the new addition as "more than just another revision . . . a completely new and vastly improved volume that covers nearly all the birds known in California and with more than 370 of them pictured in full color."

In addition to the photos and descriptions ideally arranged for identification purposes in the field, the book contains good basic information on bird behavior — migrations, feeding, courtship, sounds, habitats, etc.

There are maps, line drawings and black and white photos in addition to the color plates, and the improvements are more than sufficient to justify its acquisition by birdwatchers already owning the earlier versions issued in the 1960s. Indeed, it is outstanding.

FROM GOUSHA Publications, Post Office Box 6227, San Jose: "American Crafts Guide," a directory of craft shops, galleries, supply houses and craftsmen through the U.S., edited by Marian Way. The price in paperback: $3.95.

A Potential Target For The Pornography Hunters

PLAYING HOUSE by Fredrica Wagman; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 165 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Courtesy of the Supreme Court, we once again have open season on pornography. This new novel might well be target for many of the worn-out discussions of the fine line between art and obscenity.

"Playing House" purports to be a love story. But the subject, no matter how swathed in "fine writing," is incest.

The lovers are brother and sister. Now over 30, the sister tells their story in an hysterical, stream-of-consciousness, flash-back style. Most of the time she is pre-adolescent, a willing victim and an eager participant in the games — described too explicitly for this reader — devised by her 14-year-old brother.

He is a manipulator, a user, a predator, a viciously innocent character whose second favorite outdoor sport is stringing cats from tree branches and switching them to death.

This is Fredrica Wagman's first novel and she appears to have been influenced by the Bronte sisters, Tennessee Williams and James Joyce. The result is a wild combination of Gothic romance, Southern decadence, and pseudo-modernistic realism.

Yet Mrs. Wagman occasionally writes vividly and has a flair for description. A chair is "going fat and sloppy like an old army general still somehow at attention." The house is a "Victorian matriarch pitched across green velvet grass."

This book probably will make money. Quite possibly, Mrs. Wagman could do as well financially — and better artistically — if she reconciled, and learned to practice, discipline and decency.

A New Way For Listening To Your Favorite Recordings

MUSIC AND YOUR MIND by Helen L. Bonny and Louis M. Savary; Harper and Row, 161 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Sarah Mizel.

Helen Bonny, professional musician and educator, musical therapist at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center, and Louis Savary, Ph.D., writer and also a professional musician, have written a new book proposing a revolutionary approach to music-listening.

The authors show us, step by step, the way to a "new awareness." There are 25 music-listening experiences for individuals, groups and music appreciation classes.

The book invites you to learn to listen to music with heightened consciousness. The idea is to deepen your normal listening experience to learning to let music take you to places, in your mind, that you have not known to exist. Adding this new dimension to your music-listening can, the authors promise, increase your realization of your human potential and serve as a new tool for getting you in touch with yourself.

The unique, operative element in the new way to music is ASC (altered state of consciousness). The first objective of the authors is to show you how to achieve this — how to pass from ordinary consciousness into a non-ordinary state. The description of relaxation is similar to elements of Zen meditation, Gestalt therapy and hypnosis. Concentration is next, and then induction, leading to the altered state of consciousness.

You are now ready to listen to your favorite recording. It can be folk, pop, rock, country, western, classical, opera music —whatever is your thing.

But this reviewer finds the routines and experiments for relaxing while listening to one's favorite recordings superfluous if not ridiculous. Why should anyone have to try to hypnotize himself in order to have such listening?

The authors assure us that the exercises in the book are perfectly safe, when carried out according to instructions and with a healthy, positive motivation. People who are emotionally disturbed, deeply depressed or under psychiatric care are advised not to use self-induced ASC without professional approval and/or assistance.

It is a well known fact that music-listening does not need detailed analysis. One listens with their ears — their memories — and their hearts. "Music and Your Mind," thus, proposes what seems to be needless complications to a simple, intuitive, enjoyable process.

Encyclopedia Britannica maintains a staff of 400 writers, editors, researchers and experts just to keep the giant reference work going from year to year, according to Warren Preece, its editor.

For instance, he says, 20 people are assigned the job of culling the world's storehouses for illustrations. There are 16,000 in the current Britannica, which totals 24 volumes and 28,264 pages. The total number of words is estimated at 34,538,000.

Insights Into The Life Of A Texas Clan

All the ingredients for a strong family novel are present in Humphrey's story of a close-knit Texas family, but his recipe falters, with uneven results.

Edwina Renshaw, leader of the clan, is a powerful figure, but Humphrey's portrayal of her is weak because he tells about her, rather than showing her in action.

The family gathers while Edwina lies dying and the reader is bewildered, not only trying to keep track of all of them but by trying to follow Humphrey's technique, consisting of quick cuts from one scene to another and flashbacks.

A reader gains some insights into the life of the clan and life in Texas, but the efforts to work through the literary maze lessen the impact.

Fine portraits of the family doctor and the faithful daughter and a wild scene at a storm cellar entombment stand out in the clutter of characters and events.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

"A Grave Affair" seems at first to be the typical uncomplicated (at least in the sense of values and characters) English mystery but there's more meat to chew here than in the usual fare.

The hero, or at least central character, is Edmund Burke, a member of parliament, who stays with his pretty, spoiled-seeming wife mainly because of the inconvenience of English divorce.

He and the wife both have flaming affairs going — but it's his which leads to a nightmare that seems to have no ending.

Smith is his country's prime representative in negotiations that promise peace in the Middle East and, as such, he is the target of nationalist fanatics.

This circumstance, plus his beautiful well-known girlfriend and his wife's powerful boyfriend add up to a complicated plot. There is a development of characters, particularly of Burke and his wife, though, that make the novel more than averagely readable.

Alexis Karel, noted writer and Czech patriot living in England in exile from the Communist tyranny of his native land, disappears suddenly and mysteriously. His adoring niece Gail Fleming leaves her New York job to hunt her missing uncle.

The search begins in Karel's English home, Deer's Leap, and then takes Gail, and the young man who insists on accompanying her, to Majorca, Nice and into the Alps. And finally back to Deer's Leap for the conclusion.

The novel is billed as "Gothic suspense," but there is less of the mood associated with the genre than one might expect.

There is, however, the required romantic underline, and an international, fast-changing setting. One must accept yet again the old frayed Cold War suppositions with the Commies as the baddies, and one must , as so often is required of readers of this kind of fiction, put up once more with a heroine stubborn, at times blindly obtuse and quite predictable.

Still, this English writer has fashioned a story that is generally entertaining. It moves rapidly. And one becomes genuinely interested in the fate of Alexis Karel.

Jerusalem: The City Of Contrasts In Its Peoples And Its Landscapes

The dust rises from the rose colored limestone hillsides and spreads in a delicate thin film over the streets and sidewalks. In the spring and fall, when the "Sharav" desert wind blows, the dust is heavier and coats your clothing. But in the winter after the cleansing rains and pure Mediterranean winds sweep the air, a crispness predominates, giving Jerusalem an unaccustomed sharpness and clarity.

The visitor to Jerusalem will probably be most impressed by the striking contrasts offered by her people and her landscape.

THE CITY HAS historically always been a melange of ppulations. In the Old City, whose outer walls date from Turkish times, the quarters are labeled Christian, Moslem, Armenian and Jewish for the traditional residents of those areas. Today, the various populations of the Old City, which is largely Arab, and the modern new city which is mostly Jewish, mingle freely on the streets and in the markets, giving Jerusalem a unique character.

Hasidic men with side curls and caftans walk next to Arab women, baskets of fruit perched on their heads; off duty soldiers clad in khaki pass Greek Orthodox priests, and Israel matrons doing their afternoon shopping. None seem aware that to the outside observer they form an unusual picture together.

Jerusalem's 291,000 residents live scattered over an area that spans the Judean Hills almost to the Dead Sea. The hills are the most outstanding feature of Jerusalem's landscape, and each summit provides a subtly varied view of the horizon. Mount Zion, the Temple Mount, the Hill of Evil Counsel, the Mount of Olives; each have particular significance in the history of western civilization.

MOST RECENTLY, as Jerusalem builds to meet the needs of her growing population, the hills seem to be growing flatter, and the valleys more shallow.

Apartment houses now overlook the site of Solomon's Temple, and the square outline of the new parliament building stands scant meters from the seat of the ancient assembly, the Sanhedrin. But the Old City remains as always, the holy precinct, for within its bounds are contained the Western Wall of the Second Temple, the Dome of the Rock, the Via Dolorosa and the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Jerusalem's planners, careful to preserve the unique character of the city have been building with an eye to the historic view and in the Old City, especially, they have been reluctant to change a stone.

To those who anticipate visiting Jerusalem, a word of caution: Jerusalem cannot simply be visited; it must be experienced by all the senses. The casual visitor will see the holy places, the hills, the sunsets; but to enjoy Jerusalem to the fullest, one must smell the spices, taste the fruits, stroke the cold stones, listen to the church bells in the early morning, and most of all inhale the special atmosphere of Jerusalem.

EACH YEAR THOUSANDS of young people from America and Europe pour into Israel for the summer. Some work as volunteers on the communal farms, others at the archaeological digs. And still others camp out on the miles of beaches. The bicycle is a common and convenient mode of transportation for the younger visitors to Israel.

Some Dollar-Saving Tips For The European-Bound Vacationers

Prices in Europe have risen considerably since a year ago, and chances are they'll go up even higher in the future.

The dollar-wise traveler can keep his expenses down without sacrificing the enjoyment of a European trip by adhering to the following tips, according to Dick Denton, managing director of Pan Am in San Francisco.

1. Ask your bank or American Express about the advantages of European rather than dollar traveler's checks. Regardless of currency, always cash them at banks. Hotels and restaurants usually give much lower rates.

2. Save several dollars at each arrival and departure point by taking airport buses or trains rather than taxis into the city.

3. Discover where Europeans stay, and follow their examples rather than sticking to American-style hotels and tourists circuit restaurants. Buy guide books that have a good budget section such as Pan Am's paperback, "Real Economy Guide to Europe" and "Real Restaurant Guide to Europe" (each under $2), and remember that European tourist "bibles" such as the British "Egon Ronay Guide" and French "Michelin" have separate lists of inexpensive restaurants.

4. Think carefully before ordering that dry martini or mint julep. The prices are often surprisingly high and the quality of what the bartender turns up is often surprisingly low. Experiment instead with low-cost local wines, beers and liquors.

5. Don't over-tip. Many European hotel and restaurant bills include healthy service charges, and foreign coins that American tourists so freely distribute are often worth 30 or 40 cents.

6. Go easy on buying little gimmicky souvenirs. Many are shoddily made, over-priced and destined for the trash can as soon as you get home. Concentrate instead on one or two objects you can use over the years such as Italian leather goods, British woolens or French perfumes. When buying something expensive always ask about discounts for foreign shoppers. Duty-free shopping facilities are also available in most European airports.

7. Don't rent a car if you're staying in the center of car-clogged cities like London, Paris, Rome and Amsterdam. Instead utilize their excellent and inexpensive public transportation system. If touring, check on rail and bus discount tickets or consider renting a car.

8. Get out of the big cities for lower prices and for a look at the more traditional life. Experience France's Chateaux country, Eastern Bavaria in Germany, southern Italy, northern Portugal, and western Great Britain or Scotland.

9. Consider the alternatives to living in hotels. For instance, try Portugal's pousadas, state-owned, inexpensive and often charming rural inns; camping; or staying in a farmhouse. Most European tourist boards now promote farmhouse holidays, often in areas with many tourist attractions.

10. When shopping, remember that you often pay extra for the "overhead" at stores located on main thoroughfares. Try to find shops away from the center of the city where you'll find the bargains that Europeans look for.

11. Check carefully to determine what air fare makes the most sense to you. If you're planning a long trip, the 22 to 45 day excursion fare is probably best. If you're under 24, youth fares, again available this summer, are the cheapest way to travel.

12. After you've added up the cost of traveling independently, compare it to one of the major tours. Because of special group rates, tours often enable you to stay in a hotel you couldn't afford independently. Also, the price of a tour package will not change regardless of whether there are further currency revaluations.

A Canadian School In Hospitality

Run by the Quebec government in Montreal, admission is open only to students who definitely prefer to work in hotels and whose personalities are considered ideal for developing good relations with guests.

Basic subjects are psychology, philosophy, architecture, interior decorating, plumbing, electrical wiring, accounting, and business machine operation — plus — serving, bartending, pastrymaking, guest relations, and hotel-food industry administration.

An important skill is developed in the 5,000-bottle wine cellar. Students are taught how to uncork a bottle, how a wine should, and should not, taste, the differences between wines from different countries and regions of countries and the right wine for a particular menu.

The Canadian hotel school has created quite a stir in the international accommodation world.

Accolades and visitors have come from famous European hotel academies like L'Ecole Hotellerie in Lausanne, Switzerland. It is also getting an increasing number of requests for graduates from hotels across Canada and the United States.

An Inland Sea

Not far from Bolivia's capital city La Paz is the inland sea known as the Sacred Lake of the Incas. According to the American Automobile Association, Lake Titicaca is the world's highest navigable body of water. Situated at an altitude of 12,507 feet, the fresh-water lake is 120 miles long, 40 miles wide, and as deep as 1,000 feet.

THE WILD ROGUE AND NEIGHBORS

Steelhead fishing or white-water raft and boat trips down Oregon's twisting Rogue River or its California neighbors is magnificent late-summer and fall action for outdoor lovers.

The Rogue or the Klamath, for example, contain plenty of water when lesser streams are running low. Consequently downriver "floats" stay popular later in these mighty waterways.

A survey by the Redwood Empire Assn. brought these replies from private operators of river "runs" in the area:

Wilderness Waterways, 4 Live Oak Circle, El Sobrante, Calif., 94803: Rubber raft trips through Labor Day on the Rogue from Galice (near Grants Pass) to Illahe, Ore. Wild water through rugged canyons. Three-day camping trips $90 per adult, less for youngsters. "Lodge" stops for the night $10 extra. No fishing.

Orange Torpedo Trips, Box 1111, Grants Pass, Ore., 97526: Paddle-rafts on the Rogue from Almeda Park to Illahe; three days, 44 miles. Through Aug. 31, $150 per person. Day trips, 13 miles, from Indian Mary Park, $30, through September. Klamath River runs (two days, 34 miles) from Brown Bear Lodge through September, $100. Not for fishing.

Bob Pruitt River Trips, 1807 Thomas Rd., Medford, Ore., 97501: Three-day whitewater adventures, two passengers to a boat with "lodge" stops, $225 each; four-day trips $240 per person. This drops to $185 or less (three days) or $205 (four days) with three passengers to a boat. Pruitt has drift boats or high-speed, shallow draft jet boat trips for a single day at $17, lunch included. All are available through November.

Briggs Rogue River Guide Service, 2750 Cloverlawn Dr., Grants Pass, Ore., 97526: 70-mile scenic trips lasting three days: $330 per boat (two persons); four-day fishing trips, $550 per boat (two persons). Price includes licensed guide, food and lodgings and return trip to Grants Pass, if desired. (All operators provide delivery of your own car downstream at extra fee.) Through mid-November.

River Trips Unlimited, 1810 Corona Ave., Medford, Ore., 97501: Scenic "drift" or rubber boat trips lasting one through four days down the Rogue, through August: $20 to $165 per person. Four-day steelhead fishing runs through mid-November: $250 (parties of six or eight required). With three passengers per boat: $180. This firm also has one-day salmon and steelhead trips on the Rogue, Klamath, Smith and other coastal streams at $30 per person, starting Nov. 1.

Morrison's Lodge, Merlin, Ore., 97532: three-day whitewater raft trips from Merlin to Agness, through Sept. 1, $130 per person in groups of four or more, otherwise $150. Overnights at lodges enroute. There are also one-day, two-day and four-day trips at comparable prices. Fall steelhead trips, $100 a day per couple, with guide $50 or $60 extra.

Hellgate Excursions, Post Office Box 982, Grants Pass, Ore., 97526: Two-hour scenic trips in 32-foot jet boats through the rocky Hellgate Canyon, 18 miles below Grants Pass, and return to downtown. Three trips daily through Labor Day: $4 per person, children under 12, $2. Reservations (deposit) advised.

The Rogue has been declared an official "wild river" by the federal government, one of a very few accorded this status. For most of its length the only access is by boat, or on foot, along the rugged trails. (Pruitt in fact offers a hikers' service, carrying packs and gear to pre-determined locations.)

The scenic trips are made before the fall steelhead run, and are favored for boating, swimming, photography and nature-observing. The later runs benefit from some of America's finest sportfishing, climaxed by grilling steelhead or salmon on a sandy bar over an open fire.

You Can Change Your Scenery With A Movable Feast Of Color Plants

If you look upon container plants as portable props, and use them as beautiful accessories, the surroundings of your home and garden needn't ever be dull.

No matter what the season, there are always choice plants in bloom — as well as distinctive foliage plants —and featuring them in movable containers gives you the opportunity to enjoy them in prominent locations, indoors and out.

Right now, for instance, obtain and plant up Hibiscus shrubs in pink, red, yellow, gold and white for sensational color throughout the rest of summer. Hibiscus appreciates good drainage, hence growing the plants in containers is highly recommended by the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

WHITE, YELLOW and pink Marguerites are unfailing sources of summer color, as are Felicia (often called Blue Marguerite), Geraniums, and Transvaal Daisies. Since most will bloom more profusely in pots than in the ground, they are ideal for containers.

If you're entertaining, use the colorful plants indoors for the day, or overnight, for delightful, conversational decorations. Then you can move them once again outdoors into their natural environment.

The list of plants ready to bring dramatic color changes where you want them now is a long one. This barely scratches the surface. You'll get many other ideas by browsing through your local nursery.

FOLIAGE PLANTS are the backbone of a container plant collection. Once you start using artistic Japanese Black Pines, Azaleas, Camellias, Dwarf Citrus, Podocarpus, and Japanese Maples in portable containers, you will be encouraged to seek out even more possibilities for changing the scenery as you wish.

Shopping for plants, and the containers in which to showcase their beauty, is a fun experience. Be on the lookout for such unusual things as Sago Palms and Bottle Palm, whose gourd-like base supports finely textured, arching greenery. Your nurserymen will suggest other "exotics" that do very well in Marin.

Indoors, don't hesitate to try your hand at growing a tall, pendulous Weeping Fig (Ficus benjamina) in a decorative container. The creation will enhance the appearance of your rooms and furnishings, and bring enjoyment to those who share the natural beauty.

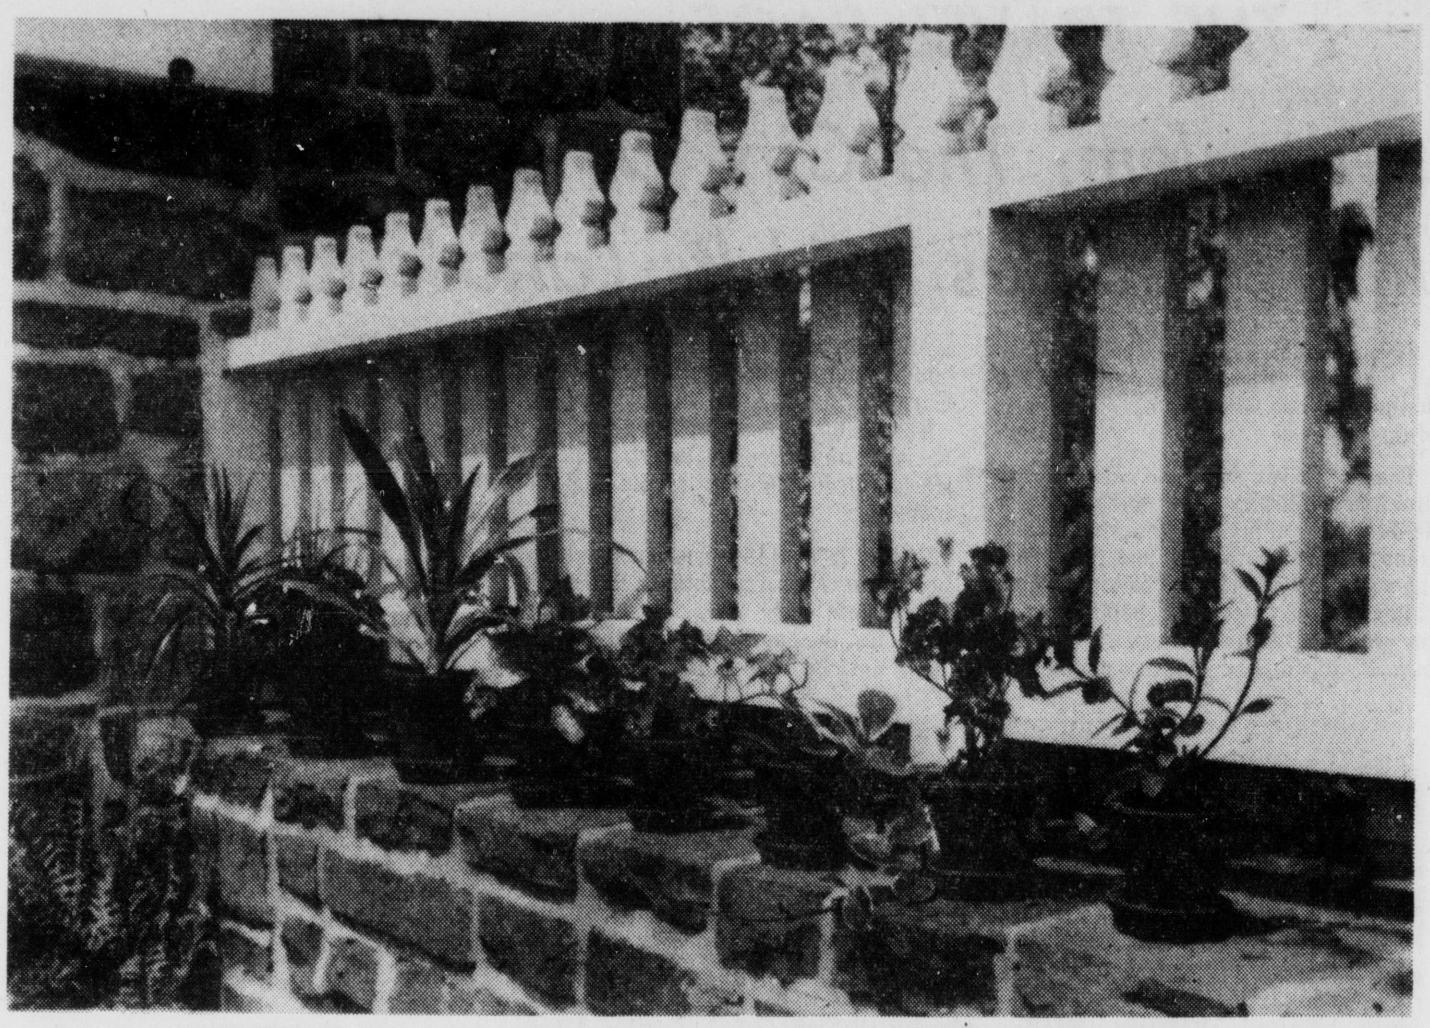
ALONG A GARDEN WALL



A GARDEN WALL or a fence almost requires plantings for their softening effect. Sometimes the conditions are such that planting your greenery in the ground itself is difficult. But you can always resort to containers, such as has been done here. Clay pots do fine, with their natural, earthy color. And your plants are now portable so that you can move them around, to follow or escape the sun temporarily, in cases of extreme weather.

THE GARDENING PAGE

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

Sometime this summer or autumn you might like to build and plant a rock garden. Fall is particularly recommended for this project because you plant as you build; but if you are moving small plants from your borders or can buy potted plants from the garden center you can build it any time that is convenient.

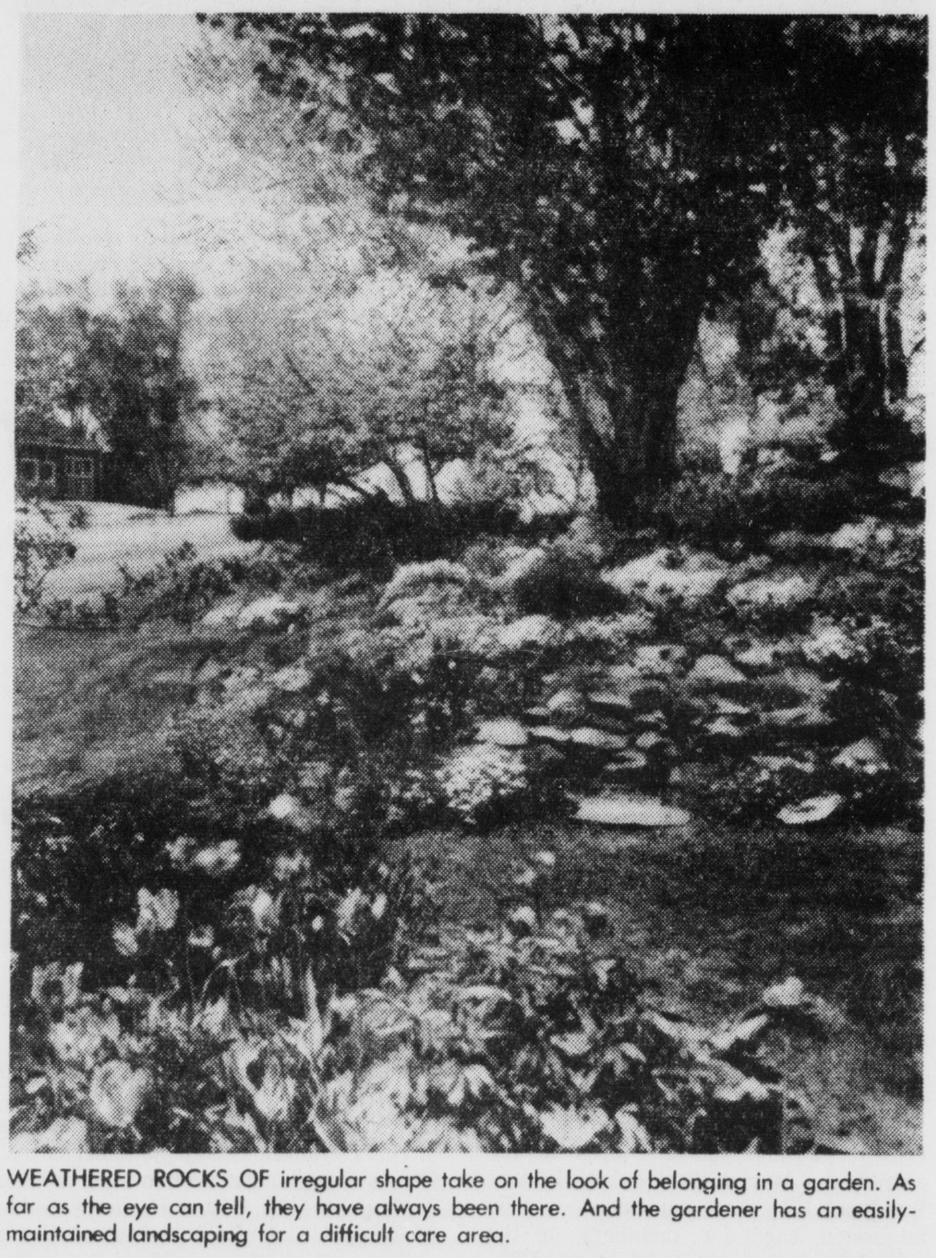
Of course Alpines are charmers and different from one's other plants. There are, however, many plants you may already have that are good for rock gardens. Alpines, too, tend to do their thing in the cool of the spring, and by choosing plants that bloom in succession you can have your rock garden in bloom here and there all season.



WEATHERED ROCKS OF irregular shape take on the look of belonging in a garden. As far as the eye can tell, they have always been there. And the gardener has an easily-maintained landscaping for a difficult care area.

WHERE TO locate it?

Wherever you decide to have it, it should look natural. If you have a bank or slope, that may be the place. Land that has rocky outcrops and ledges is fine for such treatment, provided the soil is not too shallow. If your land is flat, you ay be able to build up a rocky bank against a stone wall.

Often behind a pool is a good place, again building a bank along the back of it against a hedge of shrubbery reinforced with big rocks. The mound type of rock garden sometimes seen sitting out in the open on a level lawn never seems to look as if it ought to be there.

So if one just must have a rock garden —and many of us feel we must — the initial challenge is to locate it where it looks as if it belongs in the garden landscape.

WHAT KIND OF rocks to use? Sometimes the landowner already has some. Weathered rocks of irregular and varied shapes, preferably of local stone, serve best. So if you buy a supply, get this kind. Thin flat ones and round boulders are hard to work in and should be used sparingly if at all.

Your rocks are going to be buried so only about one fourth will show.

Suppose you are turning a slope or bank into a rockery: First remove the topsoil and set it aside. Slant the slope back the way you want it and mix coarse drainage material into the subsoil — more or less depending on your subsoil. Clay will need small rocks, pieces of brick, and other sharp drainage material.

Before placing the rocks, you might like to study natural rock formations and a few well-planned rock gardens elsewhere. You don't want rocks in rows, or of the same shapes together. The trick is to set them so they look as if they belonged there.

OVER THE subsoil spread about three-fourths of your topsoil, a layer about two feet deep. The rest you are going to use to fill in among the rocks.

Starting at the bottom of your bank and with the biggest rocks, dig out soil for each rock and set it in, with the broadest and flattest side at the base. The rocks should be tilted up in front so moisture will run down them into the bank.

As you go along, filling in between the rocks with soil and tamping it firm with a short length of two-by-two or something similar, set in your plants, spreading the roots back in and packing the soil around them.

Water the whole thing with a fine spray to settle the pockets and clean the rock surfaces. Don't plant every cranny. Save some for things you plant later, like a few little spring-flowering bulbs. Have the crannies different sizes and shapes, too.

IF YOUR location suggests it, a few dwarf evergreens will look well. Dwarf Mugho pine, dwarf box, and Cornish heath are among these. The prostrate Cotoneaster horizontalis is a beautiful plant if there is room.

From your garden borders you can transplant small things suitable for a rock garden. Here are some I moved into mine as I built it: Alyssum saxatile, dwarf columbine, Campanula carpatina, Iris cristata, perennial candytuft, sempervivum (houseleek), some saxifrages and some thymes, curly-leaved mints, Sedum acre, phlox subulata, violas, Vinca minor, nd pinks.

In most regions of the United States the intense heat and direct sun of our summers are difficult for all but early spring Alpines. (I did once try edelweiss for sentiment, but it needed the Swiss Alps for a backdrop.)

In autumn you can add some of the lesser bulbs — crocus, scilla, miniature daffodils and jonquils, and the dainty species tulips.

Your rock garden asks for little care. It does need generous watering, though, and always with a fine spray. For some plants feeding is welcome, and, of course, at intervals a spot of hand weeding.

Night Light Can Upset Your 'Mum

If your garden chrysanthemums do not set bud it may be because they are near an outdoor night light.

Bud set is influenced by the length of day and night. Generally, they set bud when the day shortens. Outdoor lighting thus would lengthen the day period and keep them from setting bud. Try covering the plants from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. with black cloth or black plastic to encourage bloom.

THIS WEEK'S CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓You should be feeding your Fuchsias lightly every three weeks or monthly. And Chrysanthemums should be fed lightly twice a month up until the buds show color.

✓Pots of Chrysanthemum in bloom are a quick and ideal solution to the problem of the summer-time bare spot in the garden.

✓Add years of life to your garden hose. Protect it by using a hose reel or storing it on a wallhanger.

✓Petunias and other annuals which are losing their first bloom can be cut back, and fed, to encourage a second flush of flowers.

✓Brighten the garden scene with yellow Marguerites and low mounds of blue Ageratum, in the foreground. Nurseries will offer both in full color this month; what quicker way to fill in garden bare spots?

✓Camellias will be soon setting buds for next year's bloom. Make sure the plants are well watered during warm weather. An overhead sprinkling is always welcome.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

Here's Lesson In Furnishing One Of The Problem Areas

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Living rooms are not meant to be showrooms where we sit uptight and put on party manners.

Living rooms should provide formality on certain occasions, but they also should offer feet-up comfort during those precious hours when the family relaxes and gets the most mileage out of its environment.

Floor plans sometimes seem to create problems when it comes to striking a balance between family and formal use.

The living room that shares its open space with dining facilities is a perfect example. The moment you devote a specified space to dining furniture, the remaining area for living room furnishings seems minimal.

Designed for a new community in Florida called Poinciana, the floor plan combines living-dining areas. The average home owner would probably be tempted to succumb to a cliche placement of one sofa, a big coffee table and two lounge chairs. Or she might have selected a pair of loveseats and used them on opposite sides of the room.

THE DESIGNER, a staff member of Armstrong Cork Co., prudently ordered an elongated chaise longue and placed it across the window openings. This left more of the available floor space free for family traffic, provided feet-up seating for more than one family member, and also utilized the nice daylight relationship with the outdoors.

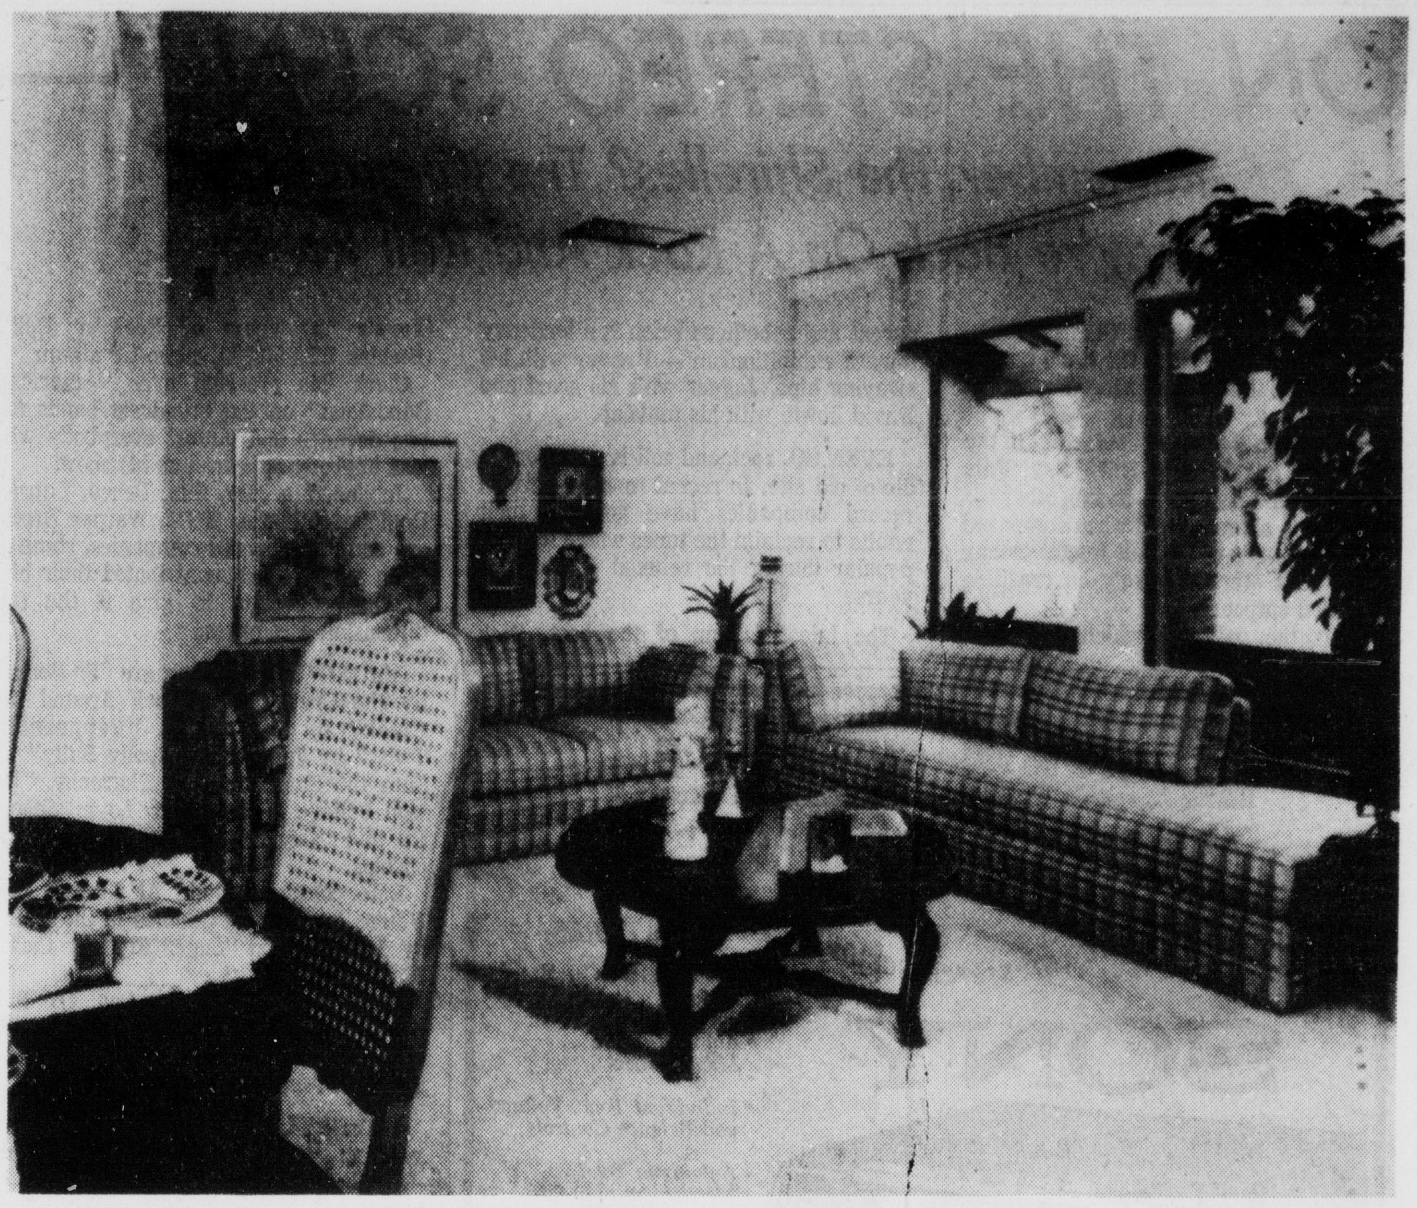
There are pull-up chairs available in addition to the dining chairs, so an overflow crowd can be made completely at ease. But during no-guest periods, there are fewer individual pieces of furniture eating up space.

THE FURNISHINGS and low-shag carpeting are all part of a pleasing country look being developed by companies like Armstrong and Thomasville for today's needs. But the project in Poinciana is part of a living experiment to solve problems with furnishings designed to fulfill specific purposes.

Sometimes it seems the needs in the home in no way relate to the needs in the furniture store — hence the lack of alternatives when it comes to shopping for problem spaces.



WHEN SPACE IS SMALL, or shared, it is wise — and nice — to minimize the number of furnishings, and especially of leggy objects. While this living-dining area wasn't lacking in space, it didn't offer much in the way of solid walls for furniture placement. The solution was a neat grouping of seating pieces emphasizing comfort, settled comfortably atop a gentle shag rug from Armstrong.

To Remodel Or To Buy? That Is The Question

By VIVIAN BROWN

Making a choice between remodeling a house and buying a larger one is a prime-time decision, advises one man who says an addition he built five years ago has priced him out of the real estate market in his area.

This is the time of year, he cautions, when enthusiasms are likely to run high and one may be carried away by agreeing to house pluses. You may start out needing an extra bedroom and bath and end up tacking to the plan a built-in swimming pool, work shop, sauna, sewing room, dog kennel.

He was promoted into a photography-projection room by his son, now at college, and he must wait until a "photography nut" wants that kind of house, he says.

HE IS IN the same position as a friend who had built dog kennels. The friend had to wait two years until he found dog people who were willing to pay the price for a house with an $8,000 kennel addition.

In agreeing to the projection room he is afraid he permitted himself to be influenced by the thought of making his house look more important than the look alikes in his development row. But people attracted to his neighborhood simply cannot afford to pay $15,000 more for his house.

The extra bedroom and bath would have been saleable, but how many people need a fully equipped photography room?

THE REMODELING vs. new house decision must be made carefully, agreed two other people who have had similar experiences. An extra bedroom and bath is the limit in many neighborhoods.

If one is in a good area and wants to stay, the next step is to consider how much money can safely be put into an addition. A fair-size extension to a house may not be as costly as one might think if one equates it with current housing prices, but even a fair-sized addition may be too much of a plus for some neighborhoods.

DECIDE HOW much space is needed, consult an architect, show his drawing to a builder for an estimate, consult the local bank to see how much the home improvement loan would cost. Figure the painting and decorating along with all the other costs to get a useful round figure as to how much would be in your house at the end.

Banks can advise whether you are making a good investment in your area by adding a particular addition to a house (or buying or building one.) Real estate appraisers can give you the fair market price of the house now and then.

Next look at some houses before you make the ultimate decision to remodel or move. The larger house in its better neighborhood should be a good investment. It may be an emotional wrench and a chore for the family to move. But once accomplished, things soon get back to normal, especially if you have made a step up the ladder to a better house and neighborhood.

THE NEW BIGGER house should make everyone happy after the initial trauma has passed.

If one is living in a neighborhood with homes in a wide range of prices, one can look at the remodeling project in a different light. Just about anything you do in the way of improvements will increase the value of your property and be saleable. But you must make sure the addition has wide appeal.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I am a beginner in woodworking. So far I have just been practicing on scrap wood. I'd like to put up some shelving in a cabinet. What kind of supports should I use to hold up the shelves? The shelves will be pieces of one- by-10 pine.

A. — There is no one answer to that question, simply because there are several factors you did not mention. Most important are the length of the shelves and what will be put on them. Also to be taken into consideration is whether you are building the cabinet yourself or merely adding shelves to it. The simplest of all shelf joints is where the shelf is inserted between sides of the cabinet and then nailed or screwed into place through the vertical sides. But this is done only when the shelves will be called on to support light objects and the shelves are not too long; roughly, no longer than 32 inches.

Two pieces of wood glued and screwed into the inside of the vertical sides will serve as a shelf support and hold more weight than the butt joints previously described. This cleat-type of support can also be utilized with metal angle irons instead of wood.

If you are building the cabinet from scratch and have a router or other power tool to handle the job, making grooves in the sides and then fitting the shelves into them produces a neat and efficient result. These grooves can also be made with a saw and chisel, but it takes longer, is more tedious and requires a certain amount of skill.

There are various kinds of ready-made brackets and supports that can be used, some strictly functional, some both functional and decorative, although the latter type appears unnecessary on the inside of a cabinet that has a door.

Q. — The resilient floor tiles in our kitchen are about 10 years old and have faded from sunlight. They are still solidly attached to the floor. Can I put new tiles over the old and how can I prevent them from fading?

A. — Any floor constantly exposed to the sunlight will fade over a period of years. Tiles especially formulated to resist fading should be chosen for a room where sunshine streams in most of the day. Yes, you can put new tiles over old, but they will stay in place only as long as the old ones do.

Q. — I want to put in one of those air conditioners that are installed directly in the wall. Can you tell me how to install it?

A. — I can, but it would take half of this page. The dealer where you buy the air conditioner has written instructions for the project. But before you select the machine, be sure you give your dealer every possible bit of information, including where it will be installed, whether you have insulation, the number of windows in the room, etc.

(For either of Andy Lang's booklets, "Paint Your House Inside and Out" or "Installing Resilient Tiles," send 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, Post Office Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.)

PUT SOME FUN IN YOUR LAWN

BEWARE OF DOG!

ONE OF THE best ways to give your lawn a touch of distinction in its neighborhood is to add a few imaginative ornaments. The ones being shown you here by actress Carol Wells, no mean ornament herself, are guaranteed to give any yard new life. They have all been made with the help of Steve Ellingson patterns. For that same assistance for yourself, send $2 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Lawn Ornament Patterns Assortment C-14. Then all you have to do is trace the full-size pattern onto regular plywood (scrap pieces are all you need), saw it out with a coping saw, and paint over tracings that show you exactly which color goes where. With that, your lawn ornament is complete. But these little figures can do more than simply decorate your lawn. They can be used on mail boxes, as weathervanes, on gates, barns or sheds, or wherever else your fancy might indicate. Wherever you place them, you have come up with an assortment of eye-catchers and conversation-starters. And furthermore, you have catered to your own ego by producing something of which you can honestly say: "I made it myself." After you have finished with the ornaments, you might want to tackle a Dutch Windmill for the garden. For that project, send another $2 to the same address, and ask for Pattern 397.

ON THE STEREO SCENE —

Remember The Shirelles? The Kingsmen? They're Back On A Rock And Roll Re-do

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

The rhythm that was popularized in the 1950s by Elvis Presley, Bill Haley, Fats Domino and Joey Dee — among others — now seems old-fashioned when compared with the sounds of a Mick Jagger or any of the rock stars who rely on crashing amplified outpourings.

EVEN SO, rock and roll is not about to die of old age. In recent months, several record companies have gone to their vaults to reclaim the tunes which were so popular during the relaxed Eisenhower years.

The latest is one of the best, Dick Clark's "20 Years of Rock n' Roll" (Buddah BDs 5133-2), a two-LP album.

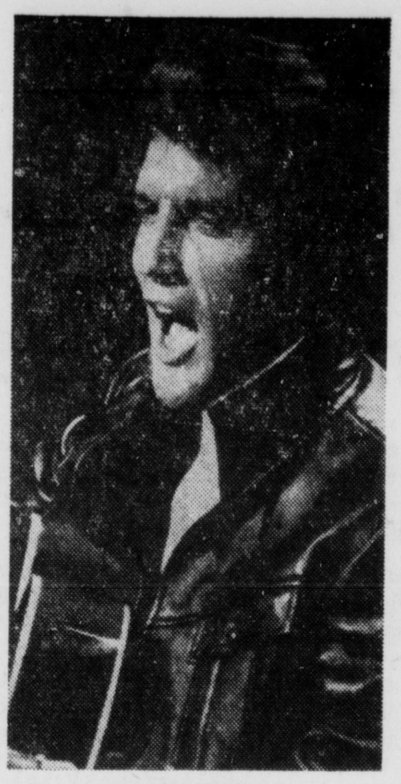
Clark has presided over "American Bandstand" on the broadcast bands for two decades and almost everybody who was anybody appeared on his show.

Jubilee, Mercury, Sun, Decca, Laurie, Roulette, Atlantic, MGM, Warner Brothers and other record companies, some of them long extinct, contributed their hits to this collection to give it the full dimension it requires.

AMONG THE numbers are "Sh-Boom" by the Crew Cuts, "Rock Around the Clock" by Bill Haley, "Peppermint Twist" by Joey Dee, "Woolly Bully" by Sam the Sham and the Pharaohs, "Do You Believe in Magic" by Lovin' Spoonful and "Crying in the Chapel" by the Orioles.

Late comers include Al Green's "So You're Leaving," "Candles in the Rain" by Melanie, and "Super Fly" by Curtis Mayfield.

Remember the Shangri-Las, the Shirelles, Brenda Lee, Frankie Avalon, the Everly Brothers, and the Kingsmen? Their hit songs also are featured.



ELVIS PRESLEY
He's still the king

UNFORTUNATELY, Presley is not represented, possibly because of contractual red tape. This omission is unimportant, however, since Elvis has made numerous recordings for RCA Victor that are available at most record stores.

While it is impossible to predict the outcome of an engagement involving personalities of separated generations — such as a fight between Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis or an assessment of Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron — it is safe to say that Presley would have been a great star had he started his career in the 1970s instead of the middle 1950s.

During the last week of June, Presley made four appearances in a two-day period — matinees and night shows — at the cavernous Nassau Coliseum just beyond the limits of New York City and packed the massive auditorium in each appearance.

PRESLEY WAS showing the inevitable encroachments of time upon man. He was somewhat heavier than the lithe man who returned to live appearances after a nine-year absence in 1969. The swiveling hips no longer gyrated and the dynamic leg movements were almost reduced to wobbles. Yet Presley electrified the audiences with his personal magnetism and extracted squeals from girls who were not yet born when he came out of Memphis with "Blue Suede Shoes."

Elvis is still the King. Long live the King!

Curt Gowdy Loves His Fishing

By VERNON SCOTT

Curt Gowdy has emerged as television's top sportscaster, appearing on both NBC and ABC. And when he can steal a few days from his busy schedule he devotes his time to his own favorite sport, fishing.

A personable man with a relaxes outlook on life, Gowdy and his wife, Jerre, have been married 24 years. He is probably the only weekly television personality who makes his home in Wellesley Hills, Mass., a handy 25 minutes from the Boston airport.

Because he spends almost as much time in jets as he does at home, flying to cities across the United States, a nearby airport is a necessity.

GOWDY, A FORMER six-letter man at the University of Wyoming, lives in a large English Tudor home of red brick set on five acres which includes a swimming pool. He first went to Boston to broadcast the Red Sox games in 1951 and liked the area so well he decided to stay.

They both love New England, so they purchased a 500-acre farm near Franconia, N.H., more than a year ago.

The ancient house is built of native fieldstone and looks like an old English hunting lodge. There are seven bedrooms to accomodate the Gowdy offspring and their friends.

THEY ARE THE parents of Cheryl, 22; Curt Jr., 20, and Trevor, 16.

It's a two and a half hour drive from Boston to their country home, a trip Jerre and Curt make as often as possible during the summer.

In summer Curt enjoys fishing in nearby lakes and streams. But if he gets the itch to fish in winter he and Jerre fly down to their condominium home in Key Biscayne, Fla.

CURT WORKS almost every weekend of his life broadcasting baseball, basketball, football and special sporting events, so he must schedule trips to New England or Florida during the week.

The Gowdy home in Massachusetts is furnished in gracious antiques and Tiffany lamps. The New Hampshire house is more rustic and has a breathtaking view of the mountains.

One room in the Gowdy home is a radio studio. Curt broadcasts his network show from the house, saving him the drive to Boston. He also owns three radio stations in Laurence, Mass., Laramie, Wyo., and Portsmouth, N.H.

HE IS ALSO international field tester for the Berkeley Co., which is a labor of love. The firm manufacturers Curt Gowdy fishing rods.

Gowdy is an authority on ecology and a national director of Trout Unlimited. His biggest thrill did not come in sports at all, but when a state park in Cheyenne, Wyo., was named in his honor in March, 1972.

When he's not broadcasting or fishing — which is seldom — Curt enjoys a game of tennis. But patching up the New Hampshire farmhouse has been a major preoccupation in the past year.

THINGS ARE A bit easier for the couple in Wellesley Hills where there is always help in the house. Jerre needs as much as she can get with 17 rooms to look after and a garden which Curt enjoys planting in the spring.

The future looms bright for the Gowdys who are thinking about installing a ski resort in New Hampshire — and a fish camp for the summer.

Star Trek Creator Had No Idea Of What Future Held

Little did Gene Roddenberry realize what he was starting when he began work, almost a decade ago, on a science fiction television series called "Star Trek," being produced by Filmation Associates for this fall's Saturday daytime schedule.

"I had no idea at the time that 'Star Trek" would one day be so popular," Roddenberry says. "We know of 3,000 active fan clubs, and there are probably more."

IN A NEWLY published book, "The World of 'Star Trek'," author David Gerrold explores why "Star Trek" is the definitive science fiction series.

"Just as it is impossible to write a science fiction story about robots without being aware of Issac Asimov's massive body of work in the area, it will be impossible to do stories about interstellar explorers without recognition of the ground covered by 'Star Trek'," Gerrold writes.

"In developing 'Star Trek' as he did, Gene Roddenberry accomplished a feat of no small magnitude. Whatever else one may say about 'Star Trek' and how it accomplished its goals, one cannot deny that it established a new genre for television — a genre as distinct and rigid as the Western, the cop show, the private-eye, the doctor series and the situation comedy. Gene Roddenberry developed the 'Star Trek' format.

"'STAR TREK' wasn't the first place the concept of men exploring the galaxy appeared — but then again, Shakespeare wasn't the first writer to deal with Troilus and Cressida. Shakespeare just did it a little better. And so did Roddenberry.

"The difference is that when Shakespeare was through with 'Troilus and Cressida' it was recognized as the last word on the subject and no one else attempted it. Roddenberry's 'Star Trek' however, will stand not as a landmark — only as a challenge.

"The series will be recongized as the best statement of form only until someone betters it. And it will be bettered. Some day. Television demands that it continue to top itself."

Gerrold was one of the first writers contacted by "Star Trek" story editor Dorothy C. Fontana to write for NBC-TV's new "Star Trek." Gerrold's "The Touble with Tribbles" is one of the most honored of the live-action shows, having been nominated for both the Hugo Award and the Georges Melies Award for Outstanding Cinematic Achievement in Science Fiction, Television.

THE STORY focused on Tribbles: furry little animals whose only purpose was to reproduce. In the sequel, written for the animated "Star Trek," Gerrold deals with "safe" Tribbles. They don't reproduce, they only grow larger. And larger, And larger.

Whatever The Job, Don't Sluff It Off

"Whether you're doing a comedy or dramatic series or just a one-time shot, don't sluff it off as just another series or just another performance," says Dom DeLuise, star of NBC-TV's "Lotsa Luck," new fall comedy series. "I believe a performer should take the attitude that if it's worth doing, it's worth doing well."

THE DEAF— BORN ACTORS

"A deaf person is a born actor," says Linda Bove, a young actress who has been deaf since birth.

Miss Bove, who plays Melissa in a newly-created role in "Search for Tomorrow," daytime serial seen Monday through Friday, on the CBS Television Network, explains that, in general, "we use our hands and body to communicate, just as a hearing actor would have to do in a stage portrayal."

TUNING IN ON THE TV

By JACK GAVER

Elgin Baylor, retired star of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association, will be an analyst for NBA games broadcast by CBS starting in October.

A new Saturday morning program for children on NBC, "Sigmund and the Sea Monsters," a live-action show, will have Johnny Whitaker and Billy Barty as stars.

Still another dramatic version of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," a story that has served stage, screen, radio and Video several times, will be seen as a two-hour NBC special. Successful Broadway playwright Sidney Michaels will be the adapter.

ABC plans for the new season a two-hour dramatic work titled "F. Scott Fitzgerald and 'The Last of the Belles.' " It is a biographical look at the late novelist combined with one of his short stories. Richard Chamberlain will portray the author, and Broadway's Blythe Danner will play his wife, the equally flamboyant Zelda.

Paris Still Mourns Its Fallen Film Star Gerard Philippe

By TED STANGER

PARIS (UPI) — Movie fans still mourn Gerard Philippe, the boyish-faced idol of French stage and screen, who died of leukemia in 1959.

Stunned by Philippe's sudden death at age 36, his most ardent admirers started what is now a Gerard Philippe cult.

His films are constantly being revived in the Latin Quarter of the French capital, the Mecca for French "cinephiles" movie addicts. A recent showing of "Le Diable au Corps" (Devil in the Body) in which Philippe played his archetypal role of the youthful seducer, drew long lines of fans.

FARTHER DOWN the quarter's main street, the Boulevard Saint Michel, on the same evening, the latest film of modern star Alain Delon played to a half-filled house.

Permanent homage is enshrined in the Gerard Philippe theater, which stages plays around the year. Few others — one is Sarah Bernhardt — can claim the equal distinction of having a Paris theater-name sake.

For his still loyal fans Philippe remains the object of a posthumous cult like that for Humphrey Bogart, minus the tough-guy cynicism of the American.

PHILIPPE WAS anything but the tough guy, in acting or in real life. A tall man with a shock of unruly brown hair, he had large blue eyes and features that bespoke abiding youth.

His image was that of the young romantic and when the script called for seduction, he used what one film critic called "a disarming sincerity" rather than a Bogartian world-weary disdain.

"Gerard was loved and remains loved," offered Henri Pichette, a poet friend of the actor. Pichette's theory is that Philippe is adored for the very reason that, unlike other actors, he sought to avoid public adulation.

PHILIPPE LIVED quietly with his wife Anne and provided no fodder for the scandal sheets. In France, where "discretion" is a way of life, Philippe's own modest ways brought, it seems, all the more admiration.

The question of Philippe's greatness among 20th Century French actors is rarely disputed. Other names — Pierre Fresnay, Raimu, Louis Jouvet, Michel Simon, Jean-Louis Barrault, Pierre Brasseur — often come up, but hardly with the same regularity.

Another attraction may be that Philippe never "went Hollywood." In a country that now finds it fashionable to imitate American faded blue jeans, hamburgers and "Le Drugstore," Philippe's old-fashioned Gallic steadfastness may have a nostalgic charm.

AT THE VERY pinnacle of his popularity, when producers were vying with drawn checkbooks to sign him, Philippe forsook the screen for the legitimate stage to act in the 17th Century classics for a paltry $6,000 a month.

It was in his role as the lead of Corneille's play "Le Cid," a classic drama long-relegated to high school literature classes, that Philippe raised theater-going eyebrows and entered the galaxy of all-time classic Thespians.

He proved that he was a good actor as well as a famous one.

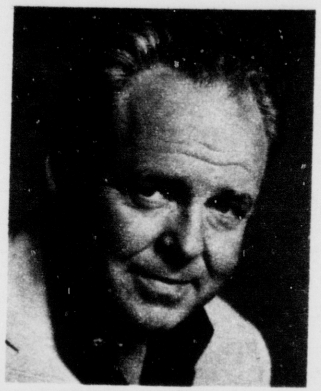
Do You Know What Makes Marriages Happy or Unhappy?

Cool and Latin: A Refreshing Salad Treat from Spain

Does a Boy Face Unfair Odds In the Nation's Classrooms?

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

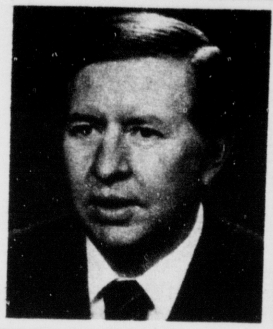


FOR CARROLL O'CONNOR

I read in a magazine that you are totally opposite to your role in "All in the Family." Is this true?—Harold Presley, Stockton, Calif.

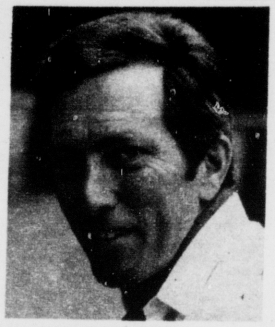
● Archie and I differ when it comes to civil rights, politics and the treatment of members of one's family and friends. But we are also alike in some ways. Archie doesn't like swearing around women, and that is a value I hold and pass on to my son. Archie has a short temper, and so do I. Archie doesn't like promiscuity, and although I consider myself a liberal, I too won't tolerate promiscuity under my roof.

FOR DOUGLAS EDWARDS, newscaster



I heard you tell an anecdote involving the late Adlai Stevenson and a latter-day Mrs. Malaprop. Could you repeat it?—K. C. Johnson, Utica, N.Y.

● The lady came up to Mr. Stevenson after one of his addresses and said, "Your speech was absolutely superfluous." He smiled and said, "Perhaps I should publish it posthumously." The woman said, "Oh, yes, the sooner the better."



FOR ANDY WILLIAMS

When you started in show business, you were one of the Williams Brothers team. Whatever happened to your brothers?—J. N., Ann Arbor, Mich.

FOR CYBILL SHEPHERD,

actress and former winner of the "Model of the Year" award

What were you thinking during that nude scene in "The Last Picture Show"?—Mary Roblez, Paterson, N.J.

● Actually it was a semi-nude scene, in which I stood on a diving board and tossed my bra into the pool. I did the scene only because it was natural for Jacy, the spoiled, rich-kid heroine, to do such a thing. I do remember thinking (a testament to my proper upbringing), a split second before I disrobed: "If God is going to strike me dead, let it be quick!"

FOR TAYLOR CALDWELL, author

You give the impression that you don't think the Women's Liberation Movement has much of a future. True?—Mrs. John Morrison, Atlantic City, N.J.

● I am sure it doesn't have a future, because American women have never had it so good. Most are shrewd enough to realize this and are not interested in changing that situation.

FOR SANDY DUNCAN

Now that your show is canceled, do you have any plans to quit show business?—Barbara Lacey, Pittsburgh, Pa.

● I was sorry it was canceled, but I believe things happen for the best. And who knows? I might be doing something more interesting a year from now. I don't plan to quit show business—maybe I will when I'm 50. Then I'd like to get a place in Carmel, Calif., and settle down there.

FOR SEN. JAMES B. PEARSON (R-Kans.)

I read in some reports that the family farm is alive and kicking, and in others that big business has taken over. Who's right?—N. O. Bettinger, Des Moines, Iowa

● There's no question that the family farm is still the dominant unit in American agriculture. Nevertheless, there are trouble signs. For example, 30 percent of our fresh vegetables, 25 percent of our potatoes, 30 percent of our citrus fruits and 60 percent of our sugarcane are produced by large conglomerates.

FOR JAMES MACARTHUR of "Hawaii Five-O"

Is it true you are in the dress business in Hawaii?—D. O., San Diego, Calif.

● Not exactly, but my wife Melody [actress Melody Patterson] has a boutique. I help her out sometimes by fixing things up, painting, putting down the floor. I'm sort of a general all-around handyman.

FOR CASS ELLIOT

Is a successful marriage particularly difficult for a performer?—G. Wood, San Mateo, Calif.

● If a woman is more successful than her husband, then problems are going to come up no matter how bright or intellectual the couple is. In my first marriage, people paid more attention to me than to my husband, now a drummer with James Taylor's group. I found that it was only so long that a man could tolerate being called "Mr. Elliot."

FOR MERLE OBERON

I've always been in love with you—from my seat in the movie theater, of course. Can you tell me what your favorite movie was, and who was your favorite costar? — A. Andrews, Albany, N.Y.

● "Wuthering Heights" was my favorite movie, since it was almost flawless. The truth, the authenticity of it! A lot of the credit goes to Sam Goldwyn, who found all the people and put them together. My favorite costar, I suppose, is Larry Olivier, an actor who was a friend and with whom my relations were always the best. I also loved working with Leslie Howard, and I had an exciting acting experience with Marlon Brando, playing Josephine to his Napoleon in "Desiree." Around me, at least, Brando was very amiable and helpful.

Candid Confessions of a Talk-Show "Guest"

"If the show is live, I always seem to look much heavier than I do when it is taped. I also find that on CBS I look fatter than I do on NBC (or is it vice versa?). A rule of thumb is that television puts on about 20 pounds."

"Television has its pluses," says Amy Vanderbilt. "Perhaps one plus is that it reminds me to keep forever on my best behavior."

Television is easy for me now and very relaxed, but it wasn't always so. Even today, every once in a while something happens that shakes me up, although people tell me it doesn't show.

I've been on the "Mike Douglas Show" many times. In fact I was on his program in Chicago before he was nationally known. Just recently on his show, he reminded me of the faux pas I committed there just after my book was first published in 1952. (The book, by the way, which has been completely revised this past year, has a new title—"Amy Vanderbilt's Etiquette.") I was used to television by then, but I was certainly not as comfortable on it as I am now.

TV people frequently think of etiquette first in relation to table manners, and Mike was no exception. The table before me was set by the property men with a large array of cutlery. They had used the illustrations in my book as a guide. "Now," asked Mike, "if you sit down to a table set like this, from which side do you take up the silver—the side nearer the plate, or the side farther from the plate?" Without batting an eye, I said, "You take the silver from the inside." There was instant silence in the studio and Mike looked at me startled. "You can't mean that," he said. At this point I came to and corrected myself. You take it, of course, from the outside in.

Today I don't worry about such little slips. As Lowell Thomas told me years ago when I used to worry about fluffs on radio, people like it when an expert stumbles a little. He told me he often purposely made a slip in order to sound more "human."

I've appeared on radio and television in many corners of the world. In Osaka, Japan, they had a little fun at my expense and at the expense of Americans and Europeans. We were guests on the inaugural flight of Japan Air Lines via Paris, Moscow and Siberia to Tokyo. During the course of our visit to Japan, we appeared as a group – I was the only American woman correspondent – on Osaka television.

It was an Ed Sullivan-type show, with a little Japanese shoemaker busily demonstrating the making of getas, wooden-soled clogs. We were seated at the side of the stage and the studio audience watched us intently. In a pause in the demonstration, it was announced to the audience – in Japanese, of course – that we would be given getas as souvenirs of our trip. Each in turn was ceremoniously presented with a beautifully wrapped box. We were urged to open our gifts and to try on the getas. But when we opened the boxes, the getas were Japanese-sized—which meant, of course, about half the size of an American or European foot. This broke up the studio audience, and presumably the televiewers watching us. Then they explained—in case we didn't realize it—that it was a joke. Out came additional boxes, this time with getas that fit.

Perhaps you saw me recently on the "Mike Douglas Show," which is taped in Philadelphia and syndicated nationally. Again, Mike was curious about table manners and teamed me with Rocky Graziano (television people think it makes interesting programming to team me with somebody unlikely, for what they consider "shock value"). Rocky and I have been on shows together before, and he is very easy and pleasant to work with. The makeup man on that show, George, doubles as property man. After he made me up, he asked me to go backstage to inspect the table he had set for my part of the show with Rocky and another boxer. Certainly there was nothing elegant about the table setting, and I realized that George was rather limited in his backstage supplies. There was very undistinguished plated silver, and big pile of dishes, glasses, cups and plates. I asked him to take half of them off, but most importantly to straighten the round, fringed tablecloth, so it would hang evenly. Everybody assured me this would be done.

Later, onstage and in front of the cameras, I glanced at the table. The cloth was completely lopsided. Nothing could be done about it then, of course. Fortunately, everybody realized that I didn't mean the table to look as it did. No one complained.

I have a very good sense of time, and up to now have never worn a watch. I was on Fred Griffith's "Morning Exchange" on WEWS-TV in Cleveland the other morning for ¾ of an hour. As the show was drawing to a close, he leaned over, took my wrist and held it in the air. Turning to the audience, he said, "I suspect that she could buy any watch for herself that she wanted to have, but she chooses to wear a Mickey Mouse!" Then, turning to me, he said, "How come?" I explained that it was a gift of Edward Downe, Jr., chairman of the board of Downe Communications. He had been a recent dinner guest at my house and brought me the watch as a funny present. "I expect you to wear it," he said. And I've worn it ever since, in spite of my husband's jealousy. He had been trying to give me a watch for years and had finally become discouraged.

One terrible trial I have had on television is that, if the show is live, I always seem to look much heavier than I do when it is taped. I also find that on CBS I look fatter than I do on NBC (or is it vice versa?). A rule of thumb is that television puts on about 20 pounds. Of course, a still camera can do the same thing. (In a recent ad I did, I was photographed from below and I seem to have three chins.) Actually, I am a size 12-14 these days, after years of hard work trying to fit the requirements of the camera. If I got down to about a size 8, I might look like a size 12 on camera, so I'm afraid it is a losing battle for me. And no one who knows me and my big bones can imagine me a size 8 either!

But no one minds my being quite personal about this problem that should be my own private one. I was posing in Central Park for one of the last issues of "Life," and a hyperactive hippie came bounding out of the park. "Hey, Amy," he said, "you've lost a lot of weight!" I hadn't, of course. It was just that I looked thinner off television.

But television has its pluses. For one thing, I am immediately recognized everywhere I go. One day, passing Lexington Avenue near Bloomingdale's, I was hailed from a postal truck, "Hey, Miss Vanderbilt," the driver called, "I saw you last night!" The other day, riding on a crosstown bus that was momentarily stopped in front of a small shoe store, I saw the clerk and two women customers staring at me out of the window. I looked around to see if there could be anyone else on the bus that interested them, looked back and found them all pointing to me. The shop door was closed, and the bus window was, too, but the clerk mouthed: AREN'T-YOU-AMY-VANDERBILT? I nodded my head and smiled.

Perhaps the plus to this is that it reminds me to keep forever on my best behavior. This goes for travel abroad, too. Americans are everywhere. I have been recognized in a cathedral in Toledo, Spain, a hotel desk in Bergen, Norway, and of course on every cruise ship I've ever been on—usually within a few minutes after boarding. TV does it. No disguising myself with dark glasses. Somebody always spots me. No hidding behind my husband's name.

It's all right, too, unless I'm on my way to the hairdresser's after a weekend in a convertible. You might be surprised at how indignant some people can get if their celebrities don't live up to expectations at all times. FW

hair color lotion

Eighth in a series:

She's Betty King Barker, industrial designer who can list among her credits 4 careers, 3 grandchildren, 2 sons, and 1 husband. She also manages to find time for tennis, golf and looking after her good looks. To keep her silvery hair bright and beautiful, she uses Silk & Silver, Clairol's long lasting color lotion in Silvery Pearl* #14.

"So easy," says Mrs. Barker, "I just shampoo it in every few weeks—it colors away the yellow, adds lots of body and wonderfully rich deep color." And it has no peroxide.

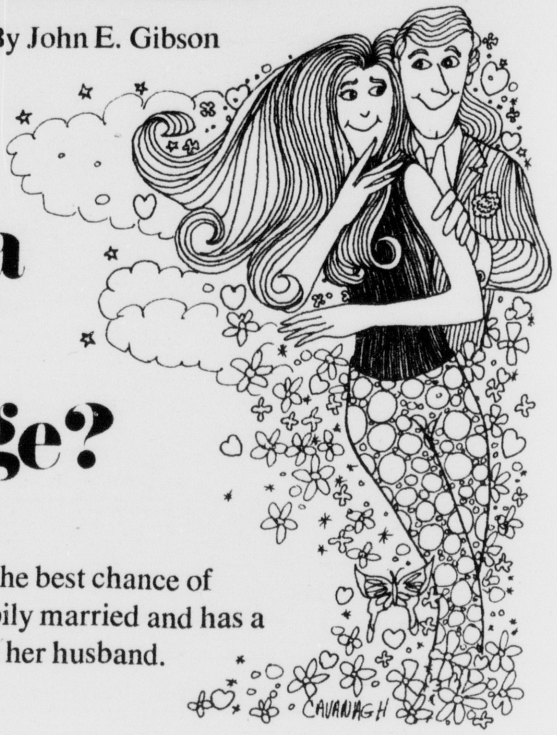
What Makes a "Happy" Marriage?



True or False: A woman has the best chance of keeping her figure if she is happily married and has a good physical relationship with her husband. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Though a husband is likely to think that it was he who picked out his wife, it's much more likely that his wife picked him out.

2. The woman who's always bragging about what a wonderful husband she has, usually hasn't.

3. If you can manage to avoid a crisis during the first year of marriage, there aren't likely to be any later.

4. A woman has the best chance of keeping her figure if she is happily married and has a good physical relationship with her husband.

5. A husband's feeling about his wife is influenced by her physical appearance to a far greater extent than vice versa.

6. Most husbands and wives agree on the things that are most likely to jeopardize a happy marriage.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to research findings cited in a University of Colorado study that show "more scientific support for the idea that girls marry someone like their father than that boys marry someone like their mother." This, as the investigator observes, would seem to indicate that women do most of the picking rather than men.

2. True. As one leading authority has observed: The woman who, without being asked, holds forth on the manifold virtues of her husband is usually trying to convince herself of something she knows is not the case. The odds are better than even that her husband is no bargain—but this is something she does not like to admit, especially to herself.

3. False. University of Michigan studies show that marriages are most vulnerable "during the first two years and again during the middle years, when the spouses are in their late 40's and 50's." The findings indicate that a great many crises occur at this time: The husband reaches a point in his career when it is clear whether or not he'll make it to the top. The children leave home, perhaps not turning out as the parents had hoped. It's further noted that physiological changes in both sexes compound these stresses, causing marriage partners to get on each others nerves and become overly emotional about things that would not ordinarily bother them.

4. True. Studies of thousands of case histories have shown that gaining excess poundage is frequently a result of food being used as a substitute for a satisfying husband-and-wife relationship. And when, as a consequence, the wife's figure deteriorates and she becomes less attractive, the relationship is likely to suffer further.

5. True. As one psychologist observes in summing up the findings of studies on the subject: "While women give more weight to the psychological and social characteristics of a potential mate and a relatively low weight to physical appearance, men attribute more weight to beauty."

6. False. A survey sponsored by the National Institutes of Mental Health shows that husbands and wives differ markedly in the nature of their complaints—with the wives averaging almost twice as many as the husbands. The study showed that: "Wives complained four times as often about money problems and about drinking, three times as much about verbal abuse, and significantly exceeded their husbands' complaints in various other categories. Husbands' complaints exceeded those of their mates only on two counts. They were more apt to mention in-law trouble ('If her mother would just keep her nose out of our business,' etc.); and they brought up physical incompatibility more often." fw

Released at last! From the physician whose average weight loss is 65 pounds per patient...the fat-melting program that

Overcomes the Body Chemical that keeps you fat!

And that therefore lets your body burn fat two to three times as fast as it's doing today! So that any amount of weight you want melts right off you . . . while you glory in what can only be called "The Eatingest Diet in the World"!

Do You Want Indisputable Proof? Then Read What The Doctor Did For The Boston Police Department! When He Carved AN AVERAGE OF 65 POUNDS APIECE Off 400 Policemen—While They Ate MORE Than Ever Before!

Perhaps you have read about this incredible new massive-weight-loss accomplishment in your daily newspaper . . . or seen some of the before-and-after photographs of the police officers who participated in it on your TV screen! In any case, let us briefly summarize its results for you here:

A few years ago, this eminent physician was called in by the Boston Police Department and given an almost impossible task: "Give our officers a diet they can stick to . . . that won't torture them, tire them out, or wear them down...and that will get them down to their ideal weight, FAST, and keep them there—FOR GOOD!"

Any other doctor would have thrown up his hands in despair! For how do you get someone to lose up to a hundred pounds in a few short months, and still not give him one hungry moment! How do you get him to peel off fat so fast that last week's clothes sag and still order him to eat MORE than the day he first came to you!

And how do you make automatic fat-burning feel so good that that person will STAY 20 . . . 40 . . . 60 . . . 80 . . . even 100 pounds thinner FOR THE REST OF HIS OR HER LIFE—and NOT because you stick around to keep him on the diet, but because that diet satisfies him so completely that he has ABSOLUTELY NO NEED to ever gain back an ounce!

Impossible By Ordinary Means—Yes! But THIS Doctor Had Discovered A HIDDEN KEY To Massive Weight-Loss! A Hidden Chemical That Locked Fat Right Into Your Body! AND THAT COULD BE OVERCOME AS SIMPLY AS THIS —

And, of course, all these members of the Boston Police Department were chronic Diet Failures! All had tried to lose weight before and failed—even with starvation diets! Or else they had managed to torture off a few miserable pounds by sheer agonizing will power . . . and then swelled right up again to even heavier weights than they had been before!

AND NONE OF THIS MATTERED IN THE SLIGHTEST TO THIS DOCTOR! For THIS doctor was no longer interested in torture, or will power, or starvation, or built-in failure! This doctor had gone far beyond mere calorie-counting, or food-deprivation! He had gone deeper than all of them, to the very heart of the body-mechanism that makes fat people stay fat!

EVERYTHING THAT THESE "CHRONIC FATTIES" HAD BEEN SAYING (and that friends, and even their doctors had laughed) WAS TRUE! It was TRUE that these fat people had something wrong with their body that KEPT them fat! It was TRUE that they could NOT lose weight on starvation diets (even, in some cases in this doctor's files, on 300-calorie diets), BECAUSE SOMETHING THAT WAS BORN INTO THEIR BODY KEPT BLOCKING THOSE DIETS EVERY TIME!

And that "something" was this —

A natural chemical (called an "antibody") THAT KEPT THEIR SYSTEM FROM BURNING FOODS THE SAME WAY THEIR "NORMAL" THIN FRIENDS' BODIES DID! So (as they kept on saying), while everything their friends ate turned to energy, "EVERYTHING" THEY ATE TURNED RIGHT INTO FAT!

But, Once This Hidden Chemical Was Discovered, You Could Then "EAT IT RIGHT OUT OF YOUR BODY" Like This:

So of course ordinary diets wouldn't work for these chronic failures—as they just don't work for you! Of course they were going to stay fat—as you are going to stay fat—UNTIL THEY OVERCOME THE FAT-BUILDING PROPERTIES OF THAT ANTIBODY . . . FOR GOOD!

And how do you do this? So simply and easily that you may gasp in astonishment! In these two ways:

1) You switch to a scientific combination of foods—lots of them—that naturally overcome this fat-building antibody by starving it, at the exact same time that they pour energy-giving nutrition into the rest of your body!

(Let us make this perfectly clear: In order to starve fat, and the antibody which keeps multiplying it, at exactly the same time that you stuff the rest of your body, YOU MAY ACTUALLY HAVE TO EAT MORE . . . AND MORE . . . AND MORE THAN YOU ARE EATING TODAY! You eat till you groan—some of the officers on this "Diet" were actually sent back to the headquarters table to finish their meals! You eat deliciously! You eat a huge variety of foods! You may actually have your thin friends envy you—while the pounds are peeling away!)

And —

2) If you wish, you may also go to your family doctor, and have him give you an inexpensive, harmless little "supplement" that burns up this antibody—and the fat it causes—TWO OR THREE TIMES AS FAST!!! This supplement is for people who really mean business about losing weight—in massive quantities, fast! Any doctor can give it to you! It is perfectly safe! And it's like adding gasoline to a slow-burning fire! The fat virtually FLOWS out of your body!

And How Well—How Quickly—Does It Work? HERE ARE FACTS AND FIGURES THAT YOU MAY HAVE TROUBLE BELIEVING!

First of all, some 400 policemen were put on this Massive Weight Loss Program! In not one instance was there a single failure! All of them—every one of them—lost weight! And the average weightloss was 65 pounds per patient!

But this is just the beginning! With those officers who had only recently gained weight (and therefore did not have their fat locked-in solid to their body for ten or twenty years), weight-loss occurred so fast that their families gasped in astonishment! In fact, in case after case, 38 . . . 40 . . . and even 50 ugly pounds vanished into thin air in a matter of weeks!

With other officers, of course, who had been painfully overweight for decades, the process was slightly slower. But as the "Eat-Like-a-King" weeks turned into months, weight loss after weight loss after weight loss was reported of 78 pounds . . . 84 pounds . . . 92 pounds . . . 101 pounds . . . 114 pounds . . . even 130 easy-off pounds! Until that person himself said, "I don't want to lose anymore! I'm PERFECT the way I am now"!

No exercise of any kind needed! This doctor doesn't believe it's necessary! And besides, many of the people who lost the most weight were desk workers, who never even walked to work!

No more sliver-snacks! No nibbling on carrots or cucumbers or celery or olives when you need hunger-relief between meals! Instead, THIS WAY, you eat eat BIG, healthy IN-BETWEEN-MEALS-MEALS if you want them!

No more Diet Weakness! Because you're NOT starving yourself now! And because now your fat is being turned into sheer, pulsating ENERGY!

And, of course, no more holiday-guilt! Because then, as every day, you have a ball! And you still lose

And no more diet-nerves! Because there's no more diet-deprivation! And no more diet-sag to your neck and face! Because you're building muscle . . . you're building strength . . . you're building vigor into the vital parts of your body—at the same exact time that you're starving ONLY the hidden fat! And—most important of all —

As A Special Added Bonus — LOSE AGE AT THE SAME TIME THAT YOU LOSE WEIGHT!

This is the overwhelming (and at least partially unexpected) fact! That the hundreds of people who went on this diet in the Boston Police Department—as well as thousands of Dr. Berman's patients outside—seemed to shed years and years from their bodies and faces, every single day they enjoyed this Diet!

Why? Because this Program attacks the basic cause of aging, as well as the basic cause of overweight! And the same new chemical mechanism that unlocks fat from your waist, hips, buttocks and thighs ALSO UNLOCKS IT FROM YOUR ARTERIES AS WELL!

This is the reason that youth seemed to pour back into these suddenly slim bodies! And this is the reason that not one heart attack occurred to a single person taking this Program!

Tucks away unnoticed in pocket or bag weighs only 2½ ounces.

Sonic scientists have gone and done it—produced a minor miracle. It may not be as important as sending a man to the moon, but if mosquitoes think you're the tastiest lunch counter on the block—if you want to be free to enjoy the soft summer nights outdoors without scratching, itching, and constant slapping at mosquitoes, this might be the most important thing in your life this summer.

Girl Mosquitoes Hate it.
This tiny electronic device, smaller than a pack of Camels, puts an invisible sound shield around you that mosquitoes won't enter! You can forget messy sprays, creams, liquids. You see, scientists have discovered that there is a certain high frequency sound that girl mosquitoes hate (the girl mosquitoes are the ones that bite—the boy mosquitoes have only one purpose).

This electronic sonic marvel produces a very high-pitched sound. The girl mosquitoes hear it, not you, and they go someplace else on the double!

The sound shield protects you and you alone. Somebody else a few feet away may be slapping and scratching and they won't even know why mosquitoes are not bothering you. You can tuck it in your shirt pocket, loop it on a chain around your neck, carry it by its smart black cord around your wrist, or loop it on your belt. It's as if you were encased in an impenetrable screen that mosquitoes just can't get through.

If you want to enjoy yourself outdoors this summer, get the Electronic Mosquito Repeller now. Precision made instrument, attractive plastic case. It has an on-off switch, battery not included, and is guaranteed by American Consumer to give you a happy time outdoors or your money back. Try it at our risk for 14 days. Are Our Teachers Unfair to Boys?

"Boys try eight times more than girls to answer questions in school, but female teachers call on girls ten times more than boys."

Bob Witt

"When we talk about the 'failure of our schools,' what we usually mean is 'the failure of boys in our schools.' "

Your son may have more trouble learning to read than your daughter. He may hate school more, have less interest in learning and make lower grades. And it may be the result of an unconscious girl-oriented educational system in the United States.

Women's Lib activists have long had complaints of their own about sex discrimination in our lower schools. Elementary readers, they point out, are more likely to have a boy for a main character than a girl. Also, the traditional sex roles (man as breadwinner, woman as homemaker) are often reinforced in children's games and stories.

However, there is an equally serious —if less vocal—group of critics who claim that it is really the boys who are the chief victims of today's teaching methods. And they are amassing an impressive amount of evidence in support of their theory that if boys received more attention, if there were more boy-oriented studies and activities in school, boys would be much happier in school and do significantly better!

One of the most knowledgeable and respected of these critics is a professor of education and psychology at North Texas State University, Dr. R. C. Bradley. Dr. Bradley points out that when we talk about the "failure of our schools," what we usually mean is "the failure of boys in our schools." It is the boy who is not learning how to read. It is the boy who is dropping out—mentally, if not physically. Says Dr. Bradley: "If we spent 15 minutes a day in school on projects that are boy-oriented, we might change the whole motivational curve, in a positive way. By that I mean, in favor of boys. Girls are making it anyway."

Education specialists generally agree that boys and girls have the same motivation to learn in kindergarten. But as the elementary and high school years go by, girls gain motivation and then lose it gradually, whereas boys steadily lose motivation, then gain it. Boys and girls have about the same motivation again their senior year in high school.

The reason for this curve is not a mystery. Nor can it be explained away completely by such oft-quoted clichés as "girls mature faster than boys." There are some very clear reasons, says

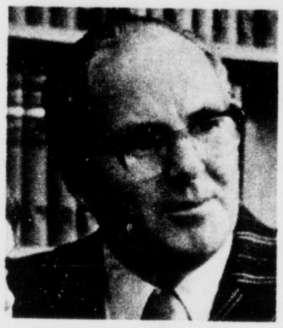
Are Teachers Unfair To Boys?

Continued



Dr. R. C. Bradley

Dr. Bradley, why girls are paying attention in grade school while boys are losing interest. And they can be found in studies that have been conducted under actual classroom conditions.

One such study, conducted by the University of Missouri, shows that boys try eight times more than girls to answer questions in school, but female teachers call on girls ten times more than boys. Another study, by researchers at the University of California at Berkeley, indicates that a teacher waits only 2.2 seconds for a response after a boy has been asked a question, but the same teacher will wait 7.7 seconds for a girl to respond.

"At all levels, when grades are given, girls are typically given higher grades," Dr. Bradley says. But they don't always earn them. "I believe I have enough research to say we must reexamine how the boy is being taught and treated in school," says the professor.

How does Dr. Bradley suggest we can improve the education of boys, without doing it at the girls' expense? The answer, he says, may be to relate to each pupil as a person, providing reading materials and asking questions of interest to each pupil in order to stimulate independent thinking and curiosity for further study.

Dr. Bradley draws from his own experience as a teacher to give an example of how to stimulate curiosity in a child and also to communicate to the child that the teacher really cares. "Let's say I have a class that's reading newspapers for a project in current events. I bend over Billy's desk and ask him, 'What is news?' He, of course, doesn't really know. 'Well, one way to remember news,' I tell him, 'is N stands for North, E stands for East, W stands for West, and S stands for South. These are the directions where interesting information can be found.'

"The child says, 'Gosh, he cares about me.' Actually, all I've done is taken the time to make the material more interesting."

When a boy is not learning to read as he should, diagnostic tests are often given, he is labeled a special reading case, and then is given more of what he didn't want in the first place—reading.

"Mothers are asked to listen to their children read at home during the evening hours. Perhaps asking fathers to listen to their boys read would make more sense. If a boy finds his father is interested in listening to him read, the male student may cease to view reading as 'sissy stuff' at the elementary school level."

Dr. Bradley also criticizes the practice of teaching reading as an isolated subject and limiting it to one tediously long reading lesson a day instead of two shorter, and probably more interesting sessions.

The theories Dr. Bradley has developed concerning reading problems of boys and the suggestions he has made have been tested in his own research in the Carrollton-Farmer's Branch Independent School District, in suburban Dallas. Dr. Bradley's research during the 1970-71 school year at Farmer's Branch Elementary School was aimed at increasing the pupils' powers of thinking, but he utilized the opportunity to concentrate on the reading problems of boys. Dr. Bradley spent no more time with the boys than he did with the girls, he says, but the time he spent with the boys was more than they were accustomed to. And it had significant results.

By spending only five minutes a day for 90 days with the boys, concentrating on subjects of interest to them and giving them an opportunity to respond to his questions, "We influenced boys to respond better on tests than did the girls," he says.

With results such as this, Bradley feels confident that more personal attention to boys and more boy-oriented activities in school could change the whole educational future for boys in the United States. fw

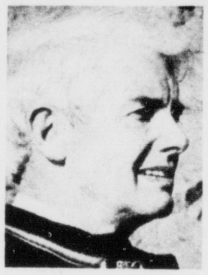
HEFTY HOWARD BROOKS
Are fat people being persecuted?

The fat fight back: Hefty Howard Brooks has amassed college degrees and is of sound health, but is on welfare because he can't get any kind of job. Why? Because, says a group formed to plump for those who are overweight, today's weight-conscious people think there's something wrong with you if you're fat. And Howard is fat. The National Organization to Aid Fat Americans, headquartered in Westbury, N.Y., points out that the obese suffer job discrimination and social stigma without just cause. They even have a hard time with little things—it's tough for chubbies to find reasonably priced clothes that fit, for instance. But the group notes that Rembrandt, Rubens and Renoir enjoyed painting charming fat women, and in Latin America the plump are considered most lovable.



David Brower

End of the big city as mecca? Conservationist David Brower claims: "Actually, wanting to go to the big city has just about ended. And small-town people should stay where they are. We're already beginning to run out of the resources that have enabled conglomerates like New York City to be built. Those in small towns should hang on, and find things to do to help the environment—the things the cities didn't do. People must become more self-sufficient to become sounder, and it's in smaller cities and towns that they can." Brower is president of Friends of the Earth and editor of "Only a Little Planet" (McGraw-Hill, $12.50).

ROSALIND RUSSELL
She'd rather be called a prude

QUOTE: Rosalind Russell says, "X-rated nude movies are stupid, ridiculous! If they weren't so damaging they'd be ludicrous. Sex can be either bathroom style or magic. There's nothing in between. I don't attend such movies. Not out of prudishness—I don't consider myself a cube—but I'd rather tolerate being considered a prude than patronize such movies. And violence is equally damaging. Perhaps the tail end of the Victorian Age, in which I was reared, wasn't the best for certain sex information and education, but certainly these movies are not the answer. It's so sad, so destructive, to think that this is the way it should be, the way it has to be. It's pitiful that no one—the government, church, school, parents—wants to take the responsibility for sex education. So they allow some character out to make a fast buck tell our children about sex." UNQUOTE.

A PAINTING BY HARVEY W. JOHNSON

Zane Grey risked his life many times, just for the hell of it. But out of that came the most unforgettable westerns ever written.

Zane Grey never could resist the lure of danger or the challenge of an untracked wilderness. He walked across the oven-hot flats of Death Valley. He rode, hell-bent-for-leather, with a troop of rugged Texas Rangers. He endured bitter cold and risked life and limb to hunt cougars and mountain lions with Indian scouts.

No wonder his stories are so real you can almost smell the smoke of a blazing six-shooter, or reach out and touch the hard-bellied, broken-nosed, bullet-scarred men who tamed the frontier and brought law and order to the wild west.

If this is the world you would like to explore, we'll send you—for only $1—three of the greatest books that Zane Grey ever wrote:

Riders of the Purple Sage.

Probably the most popular Western ever written. Against a background of fiery action, a mysterious rider and the girl he loves gamble their lives in the winning of the West.

Arizona Ames.

The no-holds-barred epic of a hard-riding cowpuncher whose blazing six-shooter spread terror among the toughest badmen.

Wild Horse Mesa.

These handsome, hardbound books are clothed in sunset red, desert tan and cavalry blue, and stamped in genuine gold. They're the first of what could be a library of Western classics you'll be proud to own.

And to celebrate Zane Grey's 100th Anniversary, we'll send you all three books (regularly $11.67) for only $1.

We think you'll be impressed. And that you'll want to own others in the series as they become available.

They will include: Wildfire, The Vanishing American, Fighting Caravans, The Hash Knife Outfit, Maverick Queen, Wilderness Trek, The Thundering Herd, Dude Ranger, and many more.

Because we print in large quantities, and because we sell directly to the public, we can offer our subscribers beautifully bound Zane Grey books for only a fraction of what you'd expect to pay—only $3.89 each plus shipping.

All 3 books, $1.

Little Leaguers Seek New Park

The prospect of having no place to play ball unless it allows girls to join its team has prompted the American League of the Mill Valley Little League to seek a ball field in Tamalpais Valley.

"Pressure from the Mill Valley City Council has had something to do with it," admitted Bruce Williams, league president.

The council has ruled that the little league organization can't play at Boyle Park next year unless it relaxes its boys-only rule.

"The American League does draw most of its players from Tamalpais Valley and other unincorporated areas and we have always been interested in getting a ball field at Eastwood Park," Williams said.

So the issue of whether organizations that discriminate on the basis of sex should be allowed to use public facilities now lands in the lap of the Tamalpais Community Services District.

The district board will hold a public hearing on the little league proposal at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 14 in district offices, 305 Bell Lane and directors are expected to decide on the proposal at the session.

"The sex issue has not been discussed among directors," said board president Richard A. Drever Jr. "We have been considering whether a field should be one element of the master plan for Eastwood Park."

Attempts by 10-year-old Jenny Fulle of Mill Valley to strike out the 34-year-old all-male rule of the national Little League Organization has sparked the battle of the sexes in Southern Marin.

Her supporters say the blue-eyed Jenny can bat and field as well as any boy, but the little league claims that injuries would be likely if girls are allowed to play with their male contemporaries. And the league contends it could lose its charter if it breaks the national boys-only provision.

"There has been very little opposition during the two previous meetings on the (league's) proposal," said Drever. "The few people who did speak up are against having a ball field at the park at all."

The diamond would cover about an acre of the five-acre park and would be built and maintained by the little league with donated materials and labor.

"If it is approved, we're ready to go to work," Williams said. "We'll try to have the field ready for next season."

Freeze Law Is Broken Unknowingly In Marin

By PATRICIA PERRY

Many Marin doctors, lawyers, accountants and other individuals or firms which provide a service or sell anything are breaking the law without even realizing it.

An Internal Revenue Service spokesman told the Independent-Journal Friday that anyone "supplying a commodity or service" is required to put p a notice of his fees or prices which were in effect from June 1 through June 8.

The requirement is part of the administration's Phase III price freeze, designed to alert the public that such fees or prices are frozen at early June levels, at least until Phase IV goes into effect Aug. 12.

The regulation, which went into effect June 24, has been largely ignored since a random check of Marin doctors, lawyers, retail stores and business disclosed that most did not know they were supposed to have such a notice displayed in their office or place of business.

The IRS spokesman admitted that it's taking some time for word of the government regulation to get around. "To date there have been no prosecutions," he said. We have been able in every case to get voluntary compliance."

The IRS itself doesn't know whether the freeze price sign will still be required when Phase IV goes into effect Aug. 12. since they're still waiting word from Washington on what the new regulation will cover.

When asked if local lawyers are posting signs about their fees, Herbert Hawkins, secretary of the Marin County Bar Association, replied: "You've got to be kidding."

The president of the Marin Medical Society, Dr. Elmer A. Weedon Jr., said he has a freeze sign on his office wall,

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service, employing a rarely used "jeopardy assessment," Friday slapped a $22.9 million tax lien on the assets of C. Arnholt Smith, a friend and important fund raiser to President Nixon.

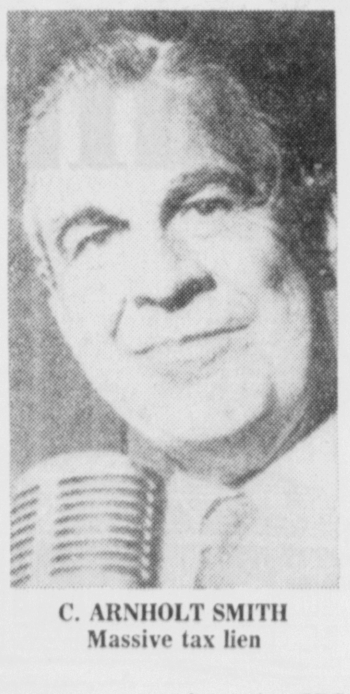
IRS agents moved against the multimillionaire financier's empire, already the subject of a federal fraud suit, in at least nine California counties.

He was accused of owing the government more than $19 million in unpaid taxes for 1969 and $3.8 million in penalties and interest.

It was believed to be the biggest tax lien for an individual for a single year in the nation's history.

The IRS laid claim to all Smith's assets—which include the San Diego Padres baseball team, which he is trying to sell—up to that amount, by both personal tax liens and simultaneously by "jeopardy assessment."

An IRS spokesman said the assessment is a "harsh action" that is rarely used, and employed only under special circumstances, when the IRS fears it may not get the money otherwise.



C. ARNHOLT SMITH

"There's no notice, you just pay up," the spokesman said. "We don't use it too often."

He said the IRS uses the procedure only when there is evidence the texpayer is going to hide, flee the country, conceal his assets or place them beyond the reach of the U.S. government, or "is or appears to be" in danger of insolvency. The IRS would not say which grounds applied to Smith.

Smith has been a friend and confidante of Nixon's since Nixon's days in Congress. He reportedly raised $1 million for Nixon's re-election campaign, personally contributing $250,000.

The Securities and Exchange Commission filed a civil suit in May against Smith and others, accusing them of fraud to appropriate the assets of Westgate-California Co., and U.S. National Bank, keystones of his empire, both headquartered in San Diego.

The U.S. comptroller of the currency in the same month ordered the bank to regain custody of millions of dollars loaned to Westgate and related Smith enterprises. In an agreement with the comptroller, Smith agreed to give up his place in the bank's management and indemnify the bank for any loss on its loans.

The action Friday gives the IRS first priority on Smith's assets. The IRS liens were filed in Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego, San Bernardino, Riverside, Imperial, King, Kern and Tulare counties.

Optimism Increasing For Skylab Mission

HOUSTON (UPI) — With optimisim increasing that they can orbit seven more weeks, Skylab 2's astronauts began their second week in space today by discarding a jammed instrument designed to measure a faint glow of light far from earth.

The crisis caused by dual control rocket failure in the pilots Apollo ferry ship was over, but project officials were taking no chances. Around-the-clock preparations of a five-seat rescue ship were proceeding in case the Apollo encountered more trouble.

As it now stands, NASA said, it appears the Apollo could bring Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma back home.

Before beginning a heavy schedule of research today, the astronauts ejected the photographic instrument from a small airlock in the side of the space station. It was jettisoned because it could not be pulled back into Skylab due to a mechanical failure.

The instrument was designed to scan the sky to measure strange light known as the Gegenschein. One explanation for this sky glow is that it is the

Douglas Calls Bombing Halt

Defense Department Continuing Strikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas today reinstated a lower court order to immediately stop U. S. bombing of Cambodia. The government appealed and the Defense Department said it was not going to interrupt the air strikes.

The United States has been flying about 40 B52 strikes and over 150 tactical bomber missions over Cambodia every day. A Pentagon spokesman said he did not know if any missions had been flown since Justice Douglas handed down his decision, but subsequent action by the Justice Department would prevent it from having any effect.

"We are advised that the Justice Department is in the process of seeking from another Supreme Court justice a new stay of the district court order which ordered the bombing stopped," said Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim.

"Pending appropriate legal action on this matter, we will abide by the congressional mandate to end the bombing on 15 August 1973."

Douglas acted from his vacation home in Goose Prairie, Wash., and called the Supreme Court in Washington with his decision. He said he felt his move was similar to a stay of execution in a capital punishment case.

Douglas in effect granted a request to restore a lower court's order to stop the air strikes July 27. That order was handed down by U.S. District Judge Orrin G. Judd in Brooklyn, N.Y., but the government won a swift stay of that ruling in the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appeals court in New York has scheduled an Aug. 8 hearing on the merits of the case, which was brought by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and four Air Force personnel.

President Nixon told Congress Friday that he would abide by previous compromise legislation providing for an Aug. 15 deadline on the bombing.

Douglas filed his order by telephone with the clerk of the Supreme Court three days after another member of the nation's highest tribunal, Justice Thurgood Marshall, refused the same request.

A court rule permits a plaintiff to approach another justice in a suit when one justice issues an adverse ruling. Rep. Holtzman and the others who brought the suit hiked to Douglas' vacation home after Marshall had turned them down.

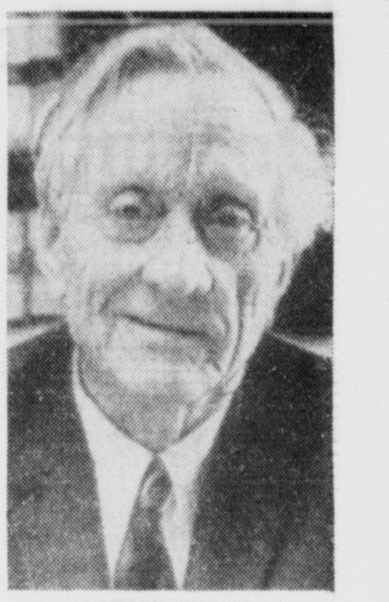
Douglas said the basic question in the case — and one which he was not seeking to decide at the moment — is whether the Congress within the meaning of the Constitution "has 'delcared war' on Cambodia."

"It has become popular to think the President has that power to declare war," he said. "But there is not a word in the Constitution that grants that power to him. It runs only to Congress."

"This case in its stark realities involves the grim consequences of a capital case," said Douglas. The difference, he added, was that no one knows who may be killed.

"They may be Cambodian farmers whose only 'sin' is a desire for socialized medicine to alleviate the suffering of their families and neighbors," he said, or it could be "the American pilot or navigator who drops a ton of bombs on a Cambodian village. The upshot is that we know that someone is about to die."

The five page opinion, dictated to court employees by the Justice after a hearing Friday in Yakima, Wash., said "when a stay in a capital case is before us, we do not rule on guilt or innocence. But if there is doubt whether due process has been followed in the procedure the stay is granted because death is irrevocable."



JUSTICE DOUGLAS

Douglas said he was not determining the constitutionality of the Cambodian bombing at this point but he noted that he had expressed his doubts on the merits of the constitutionality of the war in Vietnam in earlier opinions.

Daniel L. Friedman of the U.S. Solicitor's office appeared immediately at the Supreme Court and said he had filed "a motion for a stay." He declined to comment further when asked to whom the motion was directed and there appeared to be doubt about the legal mechanics of what would happen next.

The Justice Department opposed the early cessation of aerial support for the Cambodian government on grounds it would be "extremely disruptive" to the war against Communist insurgents.

Douglas agreed to hear the ACLU appeal after another Supreme Court justice, Thurgood Marshall, ruled Wednesday that he did not have authority to order a bombing halt.

His wife, Cathy, told newsmen that Douglas would review papers filed by both sides before ruling.

State: Bedayan Was Sane Before, After Killings

By GEORGE NEVIN

The prosecution sought Friday to prove that Brent William Bedayan was sane both before and after the slayings of a Mill Valley family by presenting witnesses who described the former lifeguard as a calm and alert individual.

Inspector Robert Sisk of the Mill Valley police, under questioning by Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales, said Bedayan appeared to understand "everything being said to him" when he was questioned by Sisk shortly after his arrest.

The 22-year-old Mill Valley man is accused of the shotgun killings of Melvin J., Ruth E. and Daniel R. Schallock of Mill Valley. He has pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity.

Bedayan's attorney, Frank J. Cox, has conceded Bedayan gunned down the Schallocks but has raised doubts as to his mental state at the time.

In what was clearly intended to challenge Cox's contention that Bedayan was irrational and incapable of murder in the legal sense, Bales led the inspector to say Bedayan did not appear agitated when arrested.

"He talked in a normal voice, a voice not broken or drawn. There was nothing strange about his language or his appearance," said Sisk.

He was "alert, calm and understood everything that I explained to him" about his right to remain silent, Sisk testified.

Moreover, he said, Bedayan chose not to discuss with police his activities the day of the murder and recognized that a copy of a search warrant shown him was not signed by a judge.

Yet another witness, the man who sold Bedayan the shotgun suspected of having been used to kill the Schallocks, spoke of Bedayan's "pleasant congenial demeanor" and said he "didn't appear strange.

"There wasn't the slightest clue that anything was wrong," said Earl Buchanan, owner of Buchanan Sporting Goods in Berkeley where Bedayan reportedly bought a powerful shotgun five days before the killings.

"He seemed to know exactly what he wanted, just like any hunting enthusiast who had saved his money," said Buchanan.

The gun, a Browning semi-automatic model, was sold with a plug inside the magazine which would prevent more than three live shells from being placed in it at a time.

But the gun dealer, who took the gun apart in the courtroom, said the plug had been removed, making it possible to load it with five shells which could be discharged in four seconds.

He described the Browning as the most powerful semi-automatic shotgun carried by dealers.

Buchanan said Bedayan "carred on an intelligent conversation all the way through."

Torcom and Marcea Bedayan, Brent's parents, were among a small number of spectators in the superior courtroom of Judge Henry J. Broderick. The trial will resume Monday.

Cambodian Pullout Plans Readied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With President Nixon expressing "grave personal reservations," the administration has begun putting into effect its agreement with Congress to end all U.S. combat activity in Indochina by Aug. 15.

The Pentagon issued orders Friday ending the bombing of Cambodia at midnight Aug. 14 and banning any further combat operations in Indochina after that time.

The President and Congress agreed on the Aug. 15 deadline last June, in a compromise which averted a threatened stoppage by Congress of funds to run the entire government. Congress wrote the provision into law, and the President did not veto it.

But in letters to House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield Friday, Nixon warned that the "incentive to negotiate a settlement in Cambodia has been undermined, and Aug. 15 will accelerate this process."

Referring to Cambodia, Nixon said: "This abandonment of a friend will have a profound impact in other countries, such as Thailand, which have relied on the constancy and determination of the United States and I want the Congress to be fully aware of the consequences of its action."

The end of U.S. combat comes almost twelve years after Army Spec. 4 James T. Davis became the first American casualty in the Indochina fighting Dec. 22, 1961.

The American toll in Cambodia during the six months of bombing since the January cease-fire has been six airmen dead and four missing. The United States has had no contact with the rebel forces in Cambodia and does not know if any of the missing are prisoners.

A Pentagon spokesman said high-altitude unarmed reconnaissance flights would continue but should those planes be fired on, there would be no retaliation. During the 1968-72 break in the bombing of North Vietnam, the United States used such attacks on reconnaissance planes as a rationale for retaliatory strikes.

There had been speculation Nixon would ask Congress for new authority to continue the bombing. But the President wrote Friday: "The Congress has expressed its will in the form of law, and the administration will obey the law.

"I cannot do so, however, without stating my grave personal reservations concerning the dangerous potential consequences of this measure," he said.

He warned Hanoi not to undertake "fresh aggression" and said, "The American people would respond to such aggression with appropriate action."

Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, briefed leaders of both houses Friday on just what operations in Laos and Cambodia were covered by the Pentagon's orders.

The Pentagon gave congressmen a statement saying orders halt "any and all of the following activities: bombing, strafing, armed air reconnaissance, helicopter gunship operations, forward air control operations (the guiding of combat planes to their targets by light spotter aircraft), artillery fire control or the employment of combat advisers with indigenous forces."

A Pentagon spokesman said flights carrying military aid would continue, but no flights would be made into a besieged area where there would be a strong possibility the planes would be fired on.

Nixon Loses Two Rulings On Impounding Of Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Separate federal judges Friday handed President Nixon two defeats concerning his impoundment of mental health and child nutrition funds—and one victory on Nixon's cutback of the antipoverty program.

These were the rulings:

—U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ordered the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to release more than $52 million appropriated by Congress to set up and staff community mental health centers. He ruled that President Nixon's impoundment, or refusal to spend, those funds was unconstitutional.

—U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, in a similar ruling, ordered the Agriculture Department to make available $34 million in presidentially impounded funds for child nutrition.

—But U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery approved Nixon administration plans to transfer to other agencies 11 antipoverty programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), which President Nixon is in the process of dismantling. Ruling against employes who challenged the legality of the transfer,. Flannery called it "fully supportable on a rational basis" to achieve greater efficiency.

The two impoundment rulings were the 9th and 10th times in the past two months that federal judges around the country have overruled Prsident Nixon's impoundment on economy grounds of funds appropriated by Congress.

Judge Gesell rejected administration arguments that the HEW impoundment was within the President's "political" discretion.

"It is time this litany was displaced by a modicum of common sense," Gesell said. "When Congress directs that money be spent and the President, as chief executive, declines to permit the spending, the resulting conflict is not political. We are a government of law, not men, and the law must be determined and upheld."

Congress Passes Late Flurry Of Measures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has adjourned until Sept. 5 after pushing through a package of major and minor legislation in a last day rush Friday.

Among legislation given final approval and sent to the White House:

—A three-year, $20 billion federal aid to highways measure which for the first time opens up money in highway trust funds for use in building urban mass transit.

—A four-year omnibus farm bill including crop supports designed to increase food production and liberalized rules for food stamps for the needy.

—A $2.8 billion Transportation Department appropriation.

Congress also gave final approval to an increase in the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2.20 an hour—but refused to send it to the White House. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., received unanimous consent to hold the bill until Aug. 25 before forwarding the legislation to Nixon.

The maneuver prevents Nixon from invoking a pocket veto while Congress is out of town. In such a case, Congress would lose its opportunity to consider overriding a veto.

Mansfield said he received "significant, very significant indications from the House Republican leadership...and the White House, although not the President" that the minimum wage bill would be vetoed.

"If he vetoes the bill, and I hope sincerely he will not, this will afford him an opportunity to clearly state his reasons (in a veto message)," Mansfield said.

Democrats concede that there are not enough votes in the House to override the veto and probably not enough votes in the Senate.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional farm leaders have won passage of a compromise omnibus farm bill that includes crop support terms designed to increase food production, and liberalized food stamp rules for the needy.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who sent word President Nixon would sign the measure, has already announced he will use authority included in the four-year bill to support major 1974 crops without requiring the idling of any acreage.

The massive measure includes a new "target price" support plan for grains and cotton which some administration experts predict will lead to expanded production while cutting subsidies on those crops from $2.8 billion this year to around $800 million in 1974, first year of the new programs.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate passed a bill Friday that would award $25,000 to Dorsie Willis, believed to be the sole survivor of an all-black infantry unit unjustly discharged in 1906.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., said he did not think the compensation was enough. He hoped the House would restore the $40,000 figure in his original bill, plus past veterans and pension benefits to which Willis would have been entitled.

Willis, 87, of Minneapolis, received his honorable discharge Feb. 11 at a Minneapolis ceremony, after spending 66 years shining shoes in a barbershop.

He was dishonorably discharged along with 166 other members of the 25th infantry regiment, following a shooting incident in the border town of Brownsville, Tex., in August, 1906.

Townspeople claimed five to 20 soldiers in the regiment were involved, but investigations failed to identify any of the guilty.

All the troops were then assembled and the commander ordered the guilty to step forward. When no one did, President Theodore Roosevelt discharged the entire unit for its "conspiracy of silence."

Later evidence cleared all the troops.

Rebels Open New Push On Phnom Penh

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Cambodian troops battled a large force of advancing Communist rebels just three and a half miles from Phnom Penh today, and a government spokesman in Saigon indicated South Vietnam may intervene in Cambodia after the Aug. 15 U.S. bomb halt.

U.S. warplanes were unable to bomb rebel positions threatening Phnom Penh due to the proximity of government troops who were surrounded by the Communists at the towns of Dey Eth and Koki.

The encircled troops managed to link up late Friday, military sources said, but they remained behind guerrilla lines battling for their lives.

An estimated 20,000 Communist troops began a new offensive on Phnom Penh Thursday.

The high command said the military situation southwest and northwest of the capital had stabilized but that intense fighting was under way three and a half miles southeast of Phnom Penh on Highway 1, a vital lifeline to the capital cut by the rebels two days ago.

"The stopping of the bombing will have a direct effect on the security of Cambodia," Truc said, "and Cambodia's security has a direct influence on the RVN's (Republic of South Vietnam's)."

Nixon in a letter to congressional leaders Friday reaffirmed that the bombing would end on schedule, but warned it could have "dangerous potential consequences" in Asia.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Test End Asked

OTTAWA (UPI) — Commonwealth leaders relaxed in a mountain resort today after adopting a declaration urging the cessation of all nuclear testing, the first time the Commonwealth has ever taken a stand on the actions of nonCommonwealth countries.

The declaration, passed at the urging of New Zealand Prime Minister Norman Kirk, avoided any direct reference to the recent French nuclear tests in the Pacific. It affirmed the Commonwealth's support for the 10-year old partial test ban treaty, which has not been signed by France or China, and urged a cessation of all nuclear tests.

Offers To Quit

MANILA (UPI) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today he had no intention of becoming president for life but would step aside for any person "who can present a better program."

Marcos spoke in a nationwide radio and television broadcast after receiving official results of last week's referendum giving him a 91 per cent mandate to continue his martial law regime for an indefinite period.

Truce Team

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong said today Iran was officially proposed as Canada's replacement on the international truce team, but has not yet been approved.

A Viet Cong spokesman said Iran had been suggested by "the other side" for the fourth place on the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) and that the Communists had set at least one condition.

"The first condition is whether Iran will accept the act of the International Conference on Vietnam signed by 11 governments," said Sr. Col. Vo Dong Giang, deputy chief of the Viet Cong delegation to the Joint Military Commission.

Running Mate

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron was a virtual shoo-in as his party met to choose a presidential candidate today, and posters all over Buenos Aires proclaimed his third wife, Isabel, as the "peoples' choice" for vice president.

All that remained in doubt today was the party's choice for vice president. There were reports Peron might forge a political coalition, name his wife as the candidate or possibly a military man.

With Peron certain to win, political observers said his choice for the second spot and "presidential heir" would be crucial.

Chilean Strikes

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Salvador Allende, his cabinet's resignation offer on his desk, declared a state of emergency today to confront a series of strikes that have crippled the nation's transportation system.

Allende's 15-man cabinet offered to resign Friday night to give him a free hand at settling the strikes by about 50,000 owners of taxis, buses and trucks.

A government spokesman said there was no indication from the socialist president whether he would accept the resignation of his cabinet, which was sworn in July 5. There have been more than 80 cabinet ministers in frequent government realignments since Allende took office 31 months ago.

Arson Suspected

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (UPI) — A killer fire that swept through a swank resort complex Thursday and left at least 46 persons dead was probably the work of youthful arsonists, the town's chief constable said Friday.

Constable Frank Weedon said his department is looking for three boys, all about 15 years old, for questioning. Witnesses said three youths ran away from the building just as the blaze started.

So far, police said, they have recovered 46 bodies from the charred remains of the plastic-and-steel Summerland Leisure cand-steel Summerland Leisure Center. They said they have a list of 52 names of persons not seen since the fire, and Weedon said he presumes that all died in the blaze.

Police said they have identified only six of the bodies found in the building and they are using pathologist's photos to get more identified.

Younger said Standard Oil Co. of California and the Chevron Shipping Co. signed the agreement Friday.

Hearing Set In Drug Case For Man Twice Arrested

A Mill Valley man arrested on drug charges, who was released because of an invalid search warrant and then rearrested, may be freed once more following a hearing in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Judge Gary W. Thomas Friday set the hearing in the court of Judge Robert A. Smallman and ordered the Marin District Attorney's Office to show cause why the charge should not be dismissed against Raymond Anthony Hossbach, 25.

Hossbach originally was charged with possessing PCP — an illegal depressant — when arrested in a drug raid on a Ross house July 18.

Although Judge Smallman ruled Thursday that the warrant used in the raid was invalid and freed Hossbach, he was rearrested by Ross police on suspicion of the same offense.

A spokesman for the district attorney's office said state law allows individuals to be rearrested even after a warrant is quashed if it is believed the judge erred.

Hossbach has yet to plead to the PCP charge. The substance, is commonly used as a livestock tranquilizer, often sold in THC, the active ingredient in marijuana.

The district attorney's office claims Hossbach walked into the Ross house with 10 pounds of the newly manufactured substance in a cardboard box while police were searching the residence.

A search warrant obtained on information supplied by a telephone installer who said he spotted kilos of marijuana in the house was ruled invalid by Judge Smallman, who said the informant's reliability was not established and the affidavit used to obtain the warrant was not specific.

Meanwhile, two other persons arrested with Hossbach in the raid were set to go to trial on numerous drug charges the week of Sept. 17 in Marin Superior Court.

William Richard Paris, 29, of Ross, and Virginia MacGregor, 19, of Sausalito, were indicted last week by the Marin County Grand Jury. The same jury refused to indict Hossbach.

Paris faces two counts of possessing phencyclidine, a chemical used to manufacture amephetamine, and with possessing a blackjack.

Along with Miss MacGregor, he also is charged with possessing LSD, and possessing amphetamine, pentobarbitol and marijuana for sale.

Both remain in Marin County Jail — Miss MacGregor on $25,000 bail and Paris on $50,000 bail.

Marks Seeks Repeal Of Sales Tax Boost

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republican Sen. Milton Marks has proposed legislation to permanently repeal the recent one-cent sales tax increase in California.

"There is no reason to continue gouging the public with an unwarranted sales tax hike when the anticipated surplus in the state treasury at the end of the 1973-74 fiscal year will exceed $1 billion," the San Francisco lawmaker said Friday.

Marks said a rival suggestion to reduce the sales tax by a half-cent next year "is not enough." That proposal was advanced by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, and endorsed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Marks said the Bagley measure would leave a state budget surplus of at least $526 million at the end of the next fiscal year. "Such a surplus is ridiculous and unnecessary," he said.

Also downgrading the Bagley measure Friday was Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, who called it "just a mechanical change." Moretti said Democrats will continue to press for an override of the governor's veto of their bill which would have delayed the July 1 one penny increase until Jan. 1.

Marks' proposal calls for repealing the one-cent boost on Oct. 1 when the next fiscal quarter begins. He said it would leave a budget surplus of at least $206 million at the end of the fiscal year.

The two surplus figures were calculated to include a 20 per cent rebate on this year's state income taxes as proposed in Reagan's tax limitation initiative, Marks said in a statement.

Limit Sought In State For Campaign Spending

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. and two groups have launched a drive to place an initiative limiting statewide election campaign spending and lobbyist gifts on the June 1974 primary ballot.

Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, along with Common Cause, a national citizens group, and the People's Lobby, a volunteer political action organization, are heading the effort to obtain 325,504 voter signatures to qualify the measure for the ballot.

The proposal would sharply limit spending in races for governor and statewide offices; restrict spending in ballot measure campaigns; require full disclosure of campaign contributions received by candidates for all statewide and legislative offices, prohibit campaign contributions by lobbyists and require public officials to periodically disclose assets and outside income, Brown said.

Marinwood Skunk Found To Be Rabid

A skunk killed Wednesday in Marinwood was found Friday to have been rabid, bringing to 20 the number of rabid animals discovered in the county this year.

Dr. Carolyn Albrecht, county health officer, said the skunk was shot by sheriff's deputies at 618 Miller Creek Road after residents reported seeing the animal running in circles, falling down and clawing at the window of a home.

Dr. Albrecht said the skunk made no contact with humans, but may have bitten a dog in the neighborhood. The dog was re-vaccinated against rabies and will be quarantined for a month.

Rabies is not unknown to the Marinwood-Terra Linda area, according to the health officer, who said there have been several documented cases since 1964, including a rabid bat and skunk, found in 1972.

She reminded parents to warn youngsters to stay away from all wild animals. "We still get reports of children picking up bats — both dead and alive," she said.

Two Leap Off Bridge In Unrelated Cases

A San Francisco woman and an unidentified man jumped to their deaths from the Golden Gate Bridge Friday in apparently unrelated incidents.

The California Highway Patrol said Loretta Jen, 26, jumped from the east side of the bridge near the south tower at 1:50 p.m. Officers said a passing motorist saw a woman in a long black coat go over the rail and notified a bridge employee. Her body was recovered by the Coast Guard near Alcatraz Island.

Just two hours later an unidentified man jumped from the east walkway near midspan. Witnesses told the patrol the man was running along the walkway when he suddenly, leaped over the railing.

His body was also recovered by the Coast Guard.

No notes were found.

Optimism Increasing For Skylab Mission

reflection of sunlight off a cloud of dust suspended about one million miles from earth, opposite the sun.

Bean reported he and his crewmen were better organized and were learning how to move faster aboard the orbiting space station. But, he said, "The one thing that we have not found here is just extra time."

Their schedule today included a second earth resources photographic sweep across the Western U. S., detailed medical tests and the release of a spider named Arabella in a cage to see how it spins a web in weightlessness.

The three spacemen were awakened by an alarm signal from the troubled Apollo during the night, but a quick check of spacecraft instruments showed nothing wrong.

"We've given the vehicle a good going over and everything looks good to us," ground communicator Robert L. Crippen told the astronauts. He promised controllers would keep a sharp eye on the ship.

Skylab director William C. Schneider said flight simulations in a computer-controlled Apollo trainer showed that Bean, Garriott and Lousma have three backup ways to return to Earth if necessary in the Apollo.

"We are feeling quite a bit better," Schneider said late Friday. "Our simulations have been surprisingly good and we find that we have a very versatile vehicle."

Before going to bed, Bean asked for a detailed discussion of all the alternative piloting procedures being developed on the ground for use if the astronauts were forced by a space station emergency to fly their Apollo back ahead of schedule.

"I'd like to understand best what all the options are exactly from a technique point of view, which would we use first and if that didn't work too well, what would be used next so I can understand the total number and which is best," Bean said.

The cause of the two failures in the Apollo's control rocket system has not been determined, however, and there is still some concern that more trouble of a like nature could strike the command ship.

It is for that reason that the rescue ship was ordered prepared at Cape Kennedy. The Florida launch team is working two 12-hour shifts, seven days a week, readying another Apollo and Saturn 1B rocket for launch as early as Sept. 10. If a rescue is needed, two extra seats will be installed and the ship will be flown to Skylab by two astronauts.

Schneider said the question of how and when Bean, Garriott and Lousma will return to Earth has not yet been decided. There are three alternatives:

—They could fly back in the rescue ship which would be launched Sept. 10.

—They could return in the rescue ship on their normal Sept. 25 splashdown day.

—Or they could fly their own Apollo back Sept. 25, making the rescue launch unnecessary.

Petaluma Man Receives Army Honor Award

Aubrey E. Lord of Petaluma, a civilian employee with the Presidio of San Francisco's fire department, has been awarded a Department of Army decoration for "exceptional civilian service."

Lord received the award for bravery in November, 1972, when he attempted a rescue in the ocean off Baker Beach on Presidio property.

He swam 100 yards in rough water to save what he though was a drowning woman. After finding the woman dead, he made a 45-minute swim back with the body.

Lord also received another award for bravery in 1958 when he pulled an electrician from a hot high voltage wire.

but suspected it was a hangover from an earlier phase and completely out of date.

Accountants are also required to show the sign in their offices, but a secretary at Leader Jarvis and Keigwin Accountancy Corporation in San Rafael, said she couldn't see one there.

However, there is one man in Marin county who knows all about the freeze price signs.

Harry Mott, owner of Ram Graphics at 63 Paul Drive, San Rafael, has the signs posted in all three of his establishments, and is even printing and selling them.

"We found out about the sign requirement when the shops in Town and Country Village in Palo Alto investigated by the IRS. And news filtered through to our shop in the Strawberry Town and Country Village," said Mott.

He hastily printed signs, and has already sold hundreds to supermarkets, banks, and insurance companies.

"I hear the IRS can fine you $5,000 for not having them," he said.

DRAMA REVIEW

Lightweights Spoil 'Lear'

By GERALD M. GENESE

Columnist Charles Mc Cabe once stated, "San Francisco is too heavy for the lightweights and too light for the heavyweights." The Marin Shakespeare Festival's production of Shakespeare's "King Lear", was a heavyweight selection for a lightweight company making their debut Friday at the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco.

"King Lear" - by William Shakespeare. Directed by Douglas Seale, Produced by Cyril Magnin. Set by Andrew DeShong. Costumes by Warren Travis. Lights by Maurice Beesley. Cast: Earl of Kent; James Minotto; Earl of Gloucester, James Winker; Edmund, Dan Caldwell; Lear, Ray Reinhardt; Goneril, Alice Rorvik; Cordelia, Cynthia David; Regan, Laurie Walters; Duke of Burgundy, Philip Gerson; King of France, Larry Hecht; Edgar, Rick Casorla; Oswald, Victor Pappas; Fool, Dan Kern; Duke of Albany, Ralph Steadman; Duke of Cornwall, Paul Ventura.

"Lear", according to director Douglas Seale" is about the demoralizing effect of power in the hands of unscrupulous men and women. It is about greed, materialism, inhumanity and selfishness, all of which spring from the pride that allows men to believe power is a virtue in itself and justifies any means to attain its ends."

Unfortunately only a few members of the production's large cast were capable of conveying the scope of Mr. Seale's conception.

Ray Reinhardt as King Lear brings to the role a mature talent the part begs for. When he is absent from the stage the play sags. One hopes he will reappear soon and when he does, it is a relief.

The only other cast member who is equal to Reinhardt's performance is Dan Kern as the Fool. He is the classic jester, witty and irreverent to the point of insubordination. His comments on Lear's actions and fate are devastating. When the two are on stage the audience relaxes feeling it is in good hands.

Alice Rorvik as Goneril and Laurie Walters as Regan do a nice job as Lear's daughters who plot to dethrone him.

The rest of the talent is a bit thin and the overall production suffers from this. The character the Earl of Gloucester is so poorly conceived that one can feel very little sympathy for him when his eyes are being plucked out by the Duke of Cornwall and Regan.

Director Seale has chosen to include a bit of gratuitous nudity. When Gloucester is having his eyes plucked out by the Duke of Cornwall, Regan throws back her cape to expose her breasts. Upon completing his dastardly task, Cornwall turns to Regan and wipes his bloodied hands on her breasts. A few members of the audience booed; some laughed.

Other crucial points in the production leave one confused. In the final scene when the stage is littered with bodies it is not at all clear how Regan and Goneril die. Regan plummets from a platform into the arms of a fellow actor, and Goneril-is's death is obscured by other cast members.

Charles Lamb in 1836 stated that "Lear is essentially impossible to be represented on stage." Although that is an extreme statement, it is fairly close to the truth in this case. It was ill advised of the company to undertake a play the depth and scope of Lear. There is talent in the company, but many of the actors are not yet mature enough to handle "King Lear."

A $102,000 federal grant has been awarded to the Northern California Regional Instructional Television Consortium at Sonoma State Collete.

The consortium is a network of state, local and private colleges formed to explore ways of using television to serve off-campus students.

Stuart Cooney, program director, said the group plans to produce television programs on environment, health, teacher training and criminal justice in the next year.

The group already has $51,000 in grants from continuing education divisions of various state colleges and universities.

San Anselmo Schools Get Budget

San Anselmo School District trustees have adopted a $2.5 million budget for 1973-74 which is expected to reduce the local property tax rate by nine cents.

Supt. Frank R. Elliott said only three persons were in the audience at the Thursday meeting and sat silent as the board discussed and adopted the spending plan.

The district's 1972-73 tax rate was $3.62 per $100 assessed valuation, but Elliott said it is expected to drop to $3.529.

The spending plan is slightly larger than the preliminary budget approved last month because of increased revenues, according to Elliott who said reserves also were increased slightly.

The San Anselmo School District board also:

HIRING — Approved employing Eric Murphy as temporary teacher at Red Hill School for $9,168 for the coming year and asked Elliott to recruit a full-time psychologist.

PROMOTIONS — Approved naming Robert Balzan as lead teacher at Isabel Cook School with a 5 per cent increase in his regular teacher's pay to $14,641 a year. Named Rulon Cook vice principal of Red Hill and Hidden Valley schools, with a 13 per cent salary increase to $18,599.

CLOSED SESSION — Held a brief closed session to discuss a personnel disciplinary matter but took no action.

TRANSFERS — Approved seven transfers into the district homes and set policy on billing the students' home districts.

PLAYGROUND — Authorized Elliott to spend up to $6,072 to install sprinklers, grass and a track — if funds permit — at Red Hill School.

LEASING — Heard a report that the City of San Anselmo has not responded to a district offer to lease part of Isabel Cook School for city public works, park and recreation offices at $250 per year per room.

MEETINGS — Voted to cancel the scheduled meetings for Aug. 9 and Aug. 23, agreed to hold a special meeting Sept. 6 and their next regular meeting Sept. 13.

ADJOURNED — To 8 p.m. Sept. 6 in the Red Hill School library.

Woman Denies Drug Charges

One of two women arrested by Sausalito police on suspicion of drug violations denied charges Friday in Marin Municipal court, while the other is scheduled to enter a plea Monday.

A preliminary hearing for Carolyn Rae Marsh, 33, of Sausalito, was set for Aug. 14 after she pleaded innocent to possessing heroin, marijuana, marijuana for sale, narcotics paraphernalia and a hypodermic needle and cultivating marijuana.

Michele Elizabeth Parker, 28, of no known address, will plead Monday to charges of possessing narcotics or dangerous drugs. The pair was arrested when Sausalito police raided Miss Marsh's apartment at 212 Richardson Street.

Five Facing Charges Of Death Plot

I-J Special Report

NEW YORK — Five Coast Guardsmen, including a Rohnert Park resident, were indicted Friday on charges of conspiring to murder a Coast Guard intelligence agent who was investigating drug trafficking.

According to Thomas Edwards, assistant U.S. attorney, three of the men met with an undercover FBI agent, posing as a hired killer, in New York on July 24. They gave him $100 as a down payment for the murder of special agent Dennis Morgan and were subsequently arrested, Edwards said.

The plot against Morgan was uncovered when an enlisted man overheard the other men conspiring, police reported.

Nude Bathers Will Fight Charges

Attorneys for eight persons who reportedly were nude when arrested on West Marin beaches vowed Friday to fight their cases on constitutional grounds.

Attorney Paul Kayfetz of Bolinas and David Mayer of San Francisco, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union filed objections challenging the arrests with Judge Gary W. Thomas of Marin Municipal Court, who set a hearing for Thursday.

The lawyers contend that the county's anti-nudity law does not apply to their clients since nudity is already regulated by state law.

Three Oakland residents charged with nudity failed to appear in court Friday and Judge Thomas issued bench warrants for their arrest and set bail at $250 each.

The three are Marc James Cousineau, 18, Ronald Edward Maddox, 23, and Catherine Cecelia Reed, 18. They and Stephen Francis White, 22, and Susan Mehrings White, 23, also of Oakland, were arrested at Muir Beach July 21.

The Whites and Walter Voigt, 33, of Strawberry, will be represented by attorney Mayer, while five other persons arrested July 24 on Bolinas Beach will be represented by Kayfetz.

The five are Roland Jacopetti, 37, Elizabeth Kreusler Ehmann, 39, Nancy Joan Denmark, 26, and Theodore Harvey Saladin, 36, all of Bolinas, and Peter Holmes Davidson, 30, of Colorado. (Saladin's name originally was incorrectly reported as Sadalin by the Marin Sheriff's Department.)

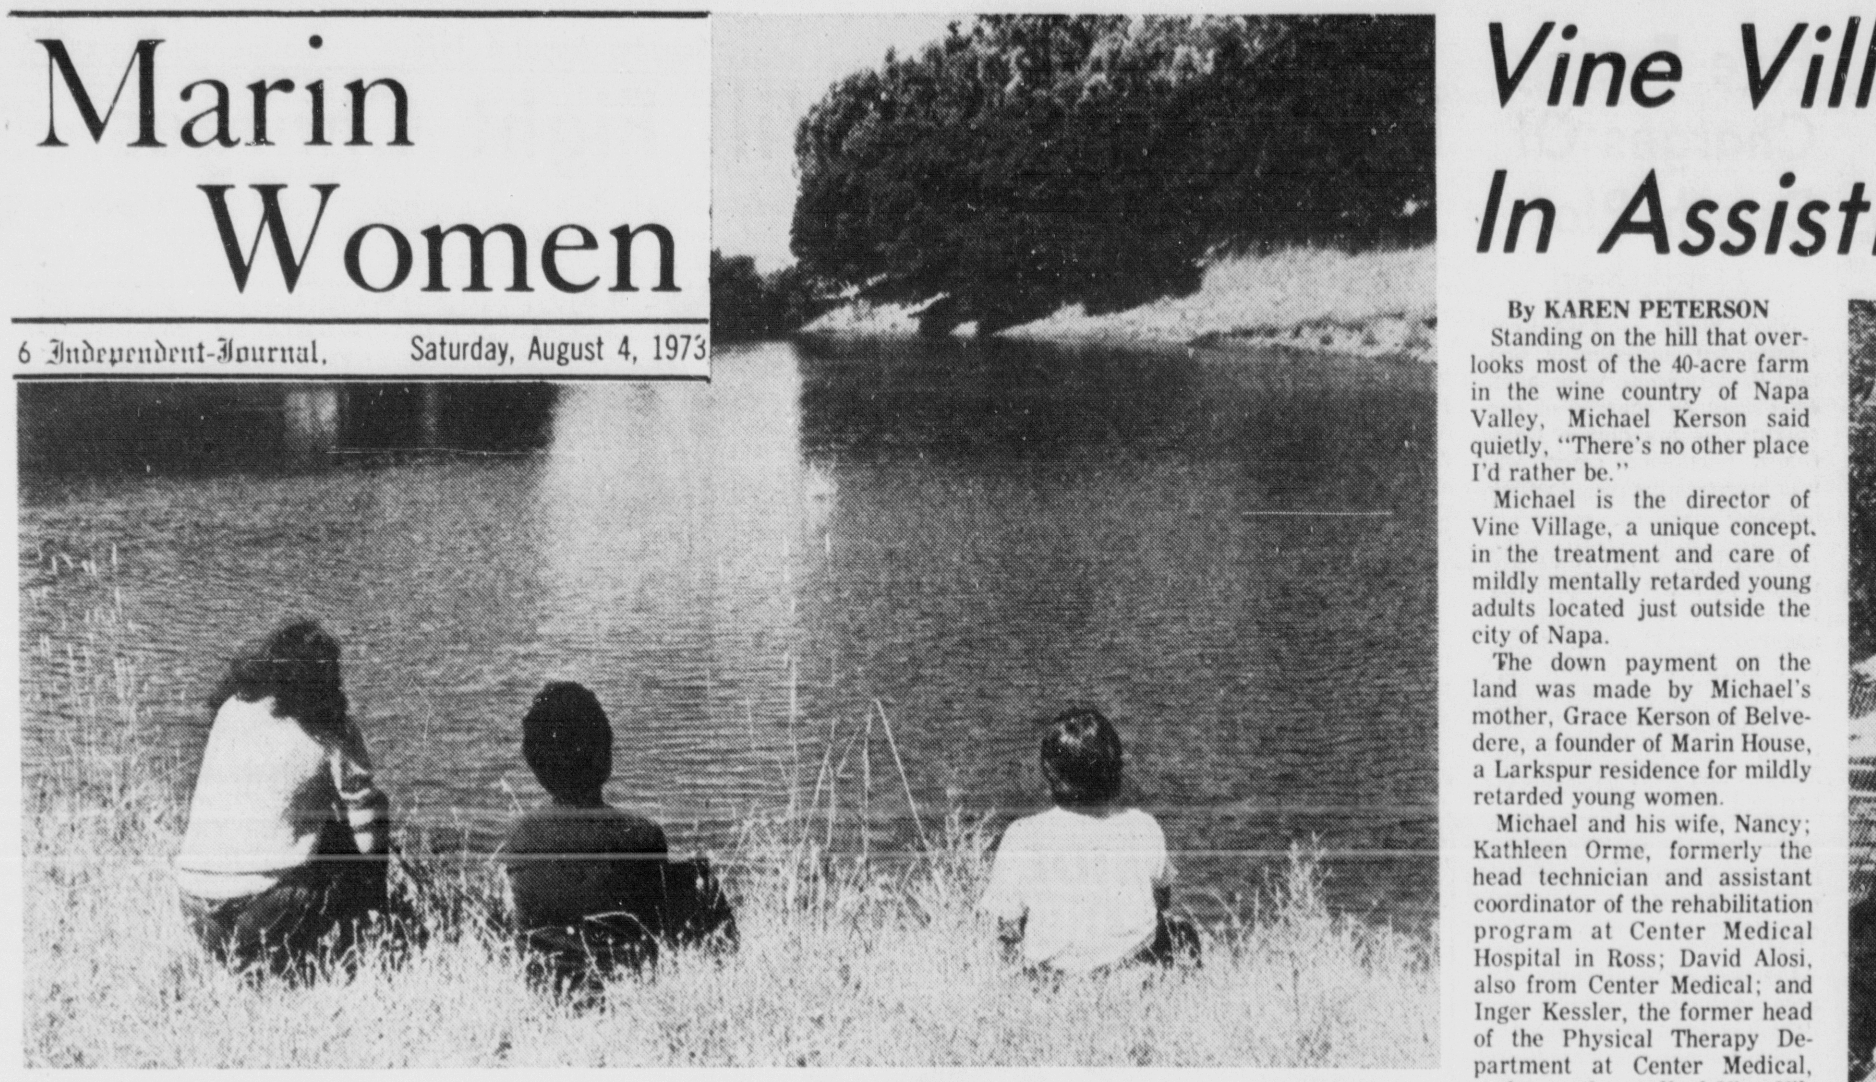
Marin Women



THREE OF THE Villagers at Vine Village in Napa County sit by a lake on the 40-acre plus farm that is serving as an innovative alternative for mildly mentally retarded young adults. Vine Village, through vocational programs, teaching aides and basic responsibilities of normal living, hopes to prepare these once hospitalized young people for independent living.

Vine Village: New Concept In Assisting The Retarded

By KAREN PETERSON

Standing on the hill that overlooks most of the 40-acre farm in the wine country of Napa Valley, Michael Kerson said quietly, "There's no other place I'd rather be."

Michael is the director of Vine Village, a unique concept, in the treatment and care of mildly mentally retarded young adults located just outside the city of Napa.

The down payment on the land was made by Michael's mother, Grace Kerson of Belvedere, a founder of Marin House, a Larkspur residence for mildly retarded young women.

Living in the three buildings on the lake-dotted farm, the staff, which will maintain a one - three ratio with the villagers, alternate at being "house mothers" to the girls already in residence. The village will support from between 12 to 18 young men and women and each villager will be responsible for chores and household maintenance.

THE GOAL of Vine Village is to provide the young villagers with an environment where they can "live and grow in dignity, with increasing independence, and work at activities suited to their individual interests and abilities," said Michael.

The program is for independent living, said Inger, "and here they have the option to be independent."

"It's a whole new way of life for the Villagers," explained Michael, "It has to happen with the state closing down the hospitals. No one has taught them how to live. You can't kick them out and expect them to live on their own."

With the new state policy of phasing out the large institutions and returning the patients to the community, the staff of Vine Village believe they are developing a more productive and humane environment for the young people, and they hope to aid other such programs with their experience.

(Their program will be featured as a national model in the annual publication of the President's Committee on Retarded.)

After training at the village, the staff hopes their villagers will be ready to live, if they want, in town with other former villagers.

"We will slowly ween them away from the farm," said Michael.

"SOME MAY be permanent residents," added Nancy, "but the basic goal is to give them more independence; to help them reach their capacity for independent living."

While they expect many to leave for employment and independent living, no one will be severed from Vine Village involuntarily, and the staff will continue to maintain contact and some supervision with the "graduates" to make sure they are making a successful adjustment.

Vine Village is creating an agrarian program for the villagers which the staff believes will provide them with the best opportunity for employment.

The slower-paced, fairly unmechanized life of agriculture is ideal for the villagers, they believe, and for that reason programs at the village will soon include grape growing, catfish farming, animal husbandry, gardening and orchard care.

The farm has 15 acres suitable for grape culture and they hope to begin planting soon. The villagers and others living in the surrounding communities will be trained in cultivating and harvesting grapes commercially. In addition, the staff plans to teach the bottling of vinegars, which could develop into a source of employment.

The two lakes on the property are also suitable for catfish culture, they explained, and already the villagers are tending a large organic garden and taking care of and feeding the hens and dairy goats.

THIS WORK — training program will also include dollmaking, a skill already known to Michael and Nancy, who have designed both cloth and wooden toys commercially for the past two years.

The workshop is a craft shop, said Inger, and the vineyards are vocational. "They deserve to do creative things just like anyone else.

"It's an alternative for those who can't keep up," she added, "They can work at their own speed without competition."

The workshop will be located in one of the two barns now being renovated. It will also serve as a recreational hall for others in the community and for weekend dances.

The staff also hopes to start a day care program for young adults in the community.

The girls living at Vine Village come from different backgrounds, including Napa and Sonoma State Hospitals, Clausen House in Oakland and some have lived at home.

"We're proud of the cross-section," said Kathleen, "It's important for exposure, and they're treated like adults. They're on their own."

"We've had large response about the village," said Micahel. "There's a great deal of need for what we're doing and I hope more people will do this."

THE VILLAGERS accepted at Vine Village are judged on need, said Michael, and already waiting lists for both houses have been filled.

The monthly charge for 24-hour care is minimal, said Inger.

When the Vine Village proposal was first brought before the board of supervisors, it was defeated in a 3-2 vote.

"The neighbors protested, said Michael, "They didn't know what we were going to do here. There was a lack of information, and we didn't expect the opposition. The neighbors thought there would be 100 unsupervised people running around here."

THE STAFF then sent letters of introduction to those opposed to the village.

"We're meeting the neighbors now, at the real community level," said Michael. "They're incredibly nice and warm. Their fears were based on paranoia, a fear of the unknown."

The revised Vine Village program was passed for six women residents. Approval will be sought next year for the two additional houses on the farm.

"Once people see Vine Village," said Michael, "they will realize that it is an asset to the community. We're taking the load off of them."

THE PHILOSOPHY of Vine Village is to "attain and maintain human dignity." And the staff at the village is preparing the young residents, soon to number up to 18, for work when they "graduate" from the farm. Agriculture plays a large part in their vocational training, and projects will include grape vineyards and catfish farming as well as animal husbandry.

Researcher Resting In Tiburon

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. E. G. Williamson of London, who has both medical and electronics background, visited at the Tiburon home of Mrs. Charles Bigelow last week, taking a rest from her search for a "cool light."

"Guy" Williamson, acting for W. H. Capewell Clincs based in London, is in California interviewing electronics scientists to find a light strong enough to project through human tissue and onto a screen, but cold enough not to burn the tissue.

The cool light would be used to automate the spectographic exam which now helps diagnose disease from dead tissue, she said, changing it into a photographic system projecting a picture through living tissue onto a screen.

Guy Williamson and Martha Bigelow have been friends for six years, and have exchanged visits during their international travels.

DR. AND Mrs. Alvin Haag returned to their home in Novato after a month in Ireland just as their daughter, Mrs. J. Paul Silvestri Jr., her husband and son and daughter departed for two weeks Canadian vacation to Victoria, Vancouver Island, Calgary, Banff and Jasper.

Back home now on Belvedere Lagoon, Shirley Silvestri remarked that they most enjoyed the scenery on Vancouver Island.

EDNA BARY is spending about six weeks in Marin visiting her sister, Helen S. Wilson at her Larkspur home. Mrs. Bary, who has lived in Guadalajara, Mexico, for 10 years, arrived in Santa Barbara in May from her home in Mexico. There she visited with her son, Dr. David A. Bary, who is chairman of the foreign languages department at the University of California at Santa Barbara, and his wife and two children. During her stay there she celebrated her 90th birthday at a dinner party.

Since Mrs. Bary arrived in Marin she has been visiting with long-time friends in the Bay Area, as she formerly lived in Berkeley. Last Saturday Mrs. Bary and Mrs. Wilson walked Muir Woods "from end to end" and Mrs. Bary only regretted that part of it was fenced off from visitors' further exploration. Last Tuesday a Berkeley friend took the two women to visit Point Reyes National Seashore, and Thursday they dined at the Blue Rock Inn with a friend from Palo Alto, with whom Mrs. Bary taught school in Utah when they were young.

THE CALGARY Stampede in Canada and the Jackson Hole country in Wyoming were the highlights of a two-week vacation for Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Evans of Novato. Friends from the Smith River joined the Evanses in Novato and they flew together to Calgary, where the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were celebrating their 100th anniversary during the Stampede events.

NURSERY SCHOOL teachers Margaret Pragoff and Barbara del Amo of Corte Madera have just returned from nine "unbelievable" days in Arizona, where they were guests of Joseph Stacey, editor of "Arizona Highways" magazine.

Stacey is writing an article for the September issue about the Ladybug Pre-School in Kentfield, operated by Mmes. Pragoff and delAmo. The school reached the editor's attention when he was sent a copy of a story that appeared in the Independent-Journal about the school's graduation, which climaxed a year of ecology study by the pre-schoolers.

Highlight of the trip to Arizona for the two was a day spent watching Kachina dances performed on a rock mesa 7,000 feet high on the Hopi reservation in northern Arizona. Few non-Indians are allowed to view the religious dances, which have a hypnotic effect, according to Mrs. Pragoff. Special arrangements for the Marin women to attend were made by the editor and the Hopi chief.

The women also toured Scottsdale and attended the opening of a Navajo show there.

MAKING THEIR first trip to California, Mrs. Victor Boncassio of Waterbury, Conn., and her 15-year-old daughter Vickie will arrive Sunday to spend 10 days in Marin. They will be visiting Mrs. Boncassio's brothers and their families, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Campopiano and Mr. and Mrs. William Campopiano, all of Novato, and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Campopiano of Corte Madera.

A PICNIC party was given at Corte Madera Town Park Thursday night as a bon voyage for Bill Nagel by his parents, Ida Lee and her husband, Lt. Col. Walter E. Nagel of Corte Madera. Friends of Bill and his family gathered to say farewell prior to his leaving for an extended tour in Europe today. He will spend the first month touring with his sister Anita, who is living in Brussels.

A graduate of Redwood High School, Bill most recently has been employed in Sun Valley, Idaho with Scot-USA ski bootwear.

Lieutenant Colonel Nagel and his son Jim have returned from participating in the Cheyenne Frontier Days in Wyoming where he worked for KRAE radio in Cheyenne. During the festivities, the senior Nagel drove in the sulky races and jim rode a bucking pony in competition for the first time. They also found themselves videotaped for television in Japan by a Japanese crew covering the events.

THREE SPECIAL guests of Marin Panhellenic for the Wednesday fashion luncheon at the Marin Art and Garden Center will be the 1973 Panhellenic Award of Merit winners. Laurel Begovich of Terra Linda High School, Gerda Endemann of Redwood High School and Melinda Lencini of San Rafael High School.

Also taking a table for their sorority alumnae that day will be Mrs. Raymond Zanzot and Mrs. Betty Pelletier, both of Greenbrae. They will arrange the Alpha Gamma Delta alumnae that day when the Greek letter groups of Marin Panhellenic are among luncheon sponsors and models.

MRS CHARLES L. Howell, formerly of San Rafael and now a Houston, Tex., resident, attended the wedding of her granddaughter, Barbara Elizabeth Tracy, and David Lee Kirland in Houston earlier this month. Mrs. Howell is now living with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tracy (Virginia Howell) of Houston.

SCOTT McKINLEY of Lafayette, Colo., and Susan Bailey Harwood of Fairview Park, Ohio, were married recently at St. Aidan's Church in Boulder, Colo. Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. McKinley of Stockton, formerly of San Anselmo. He was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School and attended the College of Marin prior to his graduation from Colorado State University. The couple are living in Boulder, and Scott is assistant manager of Boulder Valley Farm in Lafayette, Colo.

THE LAST WORD

New Proposals Bear Watching In Volunteer-Oriented Marin

By BETTY FROST

Volunteering is a way of life in Marin.

The Marin Volunteer Bureau has 1,500 organizations registered. This does not include churches, some hospitals or schools, the institutions which traditionally receive greatest contributions in the form of service from the community.

According to Margery Sell, assistant director of the Marin Volunteer Bureau, 600 would-be volunteers are interviewed each year. The interests of the individual are matched with the needs of an organization. At its best, this is the beginning of a satisfying relation for the volunteer and a helpful one for a worthy cause.

Such service is a part of the Judeo-Christian ethic, and follows the American pioneer practice where neighbors helped one another build a barn or construct a sod house in the prairie.

The variety of organizations depending upon volunteers in the county is intriguing. The traditional large organizations such as Marin General Hospital Volunteers and Sunny Hills, where hundreds of women work in guilds or branches to offer continuing support to these institutions, are at one end of the scale. At the other end of the scale are those who offer service on a one-to-one basis. These services include visiting the sick, tutoring a child who needs extra help with his studies and reading to the blind.

CATEGORIES IN the organization directory put out by the Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce go from arts to youth, and encompass music, community theater, neighborhood improvement clubs, sports for adults and children, conservation, dancing, family service groups, international exchange programs, the elderly, animals and local history.

Included in the 135 organizations listed for Mill Valley alone, are lodges, fraternal organizations and people who share common business or professional interests. Each of these organizations adds to its membership program the support of a worthwhile endeavor.

Private clubs, too, offer services, whether it is a youth training program in tennis, golf or boating or the community service to which women's clubs in Marin are dedicated.

Marin families are quick to respond to a need. A recent request for housing for foreign students wishing to spend the summer in private homes was oversubscribed in Marin. Some visitors, originally scheduled to stay in other communities, which were not so open-hearted, will be housed in this county.

The phenomenon of American volunteerism is receiving national attention, too.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., in an article, "A Time for the City" in the Saturday Evening Post May-June 1973 issue, makes volunteering an important part of his theory of recreating a neighborhood atmosphere in urban centers. Furthermore, he believes the federal government should encourage the kind of volunteering that is already an integral part of Marin's communal life. He suggests that Americans should get some tax credit for time devoted to public service, just as tax credit is offered for cash contributions to charitable foundations and other non-profit organizations concerned with good works.

MRS. R. PETER Straus of New York, named "A Woman of the Year" by the "Ladies Home Journal" in this year's contest, believes volunteers should be hired, fired, trained, supervised, promoted and given references if they decide to seek paid employment.

The New Yorker, who founded the nationwide volunteer-staffed community hot line, Call for Action, also thinks volunteers should have some benefits. She favors medical insurance for the volunteer, and tax deductions for both time and money expended in voluntary service. She also thinks volunteers should be able to deduct baby sitting expenses.

Dishwashers

When buying a dishwasher look for these features: racks designed for ease and flexibility in loading; booster units for raising water temperature; more than one wash cycle; different water distribution patterns, using various configurations of spray arms and impellers.

Engagement Of Bonnie Chiaroni Told

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chiaroni announce the engagement of their daughter Bonnie to Paul Edward Rimola, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rimola. All are residents of San Rfael.

Bonnie is the sister of Geralyn, Lawrence and Cynthia Chiaroni and the granddaughter of Mrs. Max Graham of Petaluma and Albert Chiaroni of Sonoma. She was graduated from Terra Linda High School and attended College of Marin. The future bride is employed by Greyhound Lines West in San Francisco.

The future bridegroom's sisters are Lynn and Donna Rimola. He is a graduate of Terra Linda High School and attended California State Polytechnic University. Paul is employed by Cala Foods in Tiburon.

An Oct. 21 wedding is planned.

Hitchhiker Shows Some Real Originality With His Sign

RAP:

At a freeway entrance the other day I saw three hitchhikers. One carried a sign saying "Los Angeles," the second waved a placard, "Anywhere you go!," but the third was truly inspired. His sign, in beautiful scrolls proclaimed simply, "Mother!"

I didn't linger to see which one got the first ride, but I can guess.—KATHY

NOTE FROM SUE: And then there was the thumber who got results with his sign announcing, "We give Green Stamps!" . . .Wonder if he really did?

DEAR RAP:

Here's a switch. I wanted to get to Chicago on the cheap, so I figured I'd get more rides if my hair was short.

Well, I was out there thumbing, with my face and the top of my head getting sunburned from lack of sideburns and hair, when a cop car stopped. He didn't bother the hairy guys, but I got a real going over.

He thought I was AWOL from a nearby Army camp. Seems a solider had broken a bottle over another trainee's head, and split. Having short hair, I was automatically suspected. Two hours and a lot of talking later, I was released.

Maybe, these days, it's safer for a man to wear his hair long. He's not so conspicuous.—CAN'T WIN

NOTE TO READERS:

Happy ending: C.W. made it to Chicago. His letter was posted from there.—HELEN

DEAR SUE:

I'm studying to be an R.N., and I work with a guy I'm madly in love with, but I can't face him. When I get in the elevator with him, I draw as far away as possible and he does all the talking, if any is done. It's all I can do to say "Hi."

I've had little crushes before, but nothing like this. I'd jump at the chance to marry him. If there was a choice, I'd die for him. Every once in a while I almost get the nerve to blurt out how much I love him, but after I say his name, then I get chicken and pretend I've forgotten what I wanted to say.

DEAR C:

You're hung-up, girl! Look, using phrases like "marry him" or "die for him" is ridiculous at this point. You haven't even had a real conversation with the guy.

Cool down and try for friendship first. Don't ruin your chances with a wrong start that would scare most men right out of the elevator (between floors yet).—SUE

DEAR HELEN:

I've been kidding (in earnest) my new wife about getting fat. She is! She got even by cooking diet foods and serving cottage cheese and no desserts. She said if she has to suffer for me, I'll suffer too. Please knock some sense into her head, Helen, like a mother should.—PORK CHOPS, POTATO AND PIE MAN

DEAR PCPPM:

Oh come on, suffer a little — and eat your pie, etc. for lunch. If you aren't willing to help your wife lose those added pounds (which came, no doubt, from overfeeding you), then you shouldn't have griped. Once she sheds them, you two can work out sensible meal plans that will keep you both happy and in trim.—HELEN

Got a problem? Or a discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel—or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Short Sleeve Length No Problem

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

Years ago we wore bracelet-length sleeves, then suddenly they were out of style because the sleeve of a long dress would show under the shorter suit or coat-length sleeve. Now, in the newest fashions, I see the shorter length sleeve again. Won't this cause the same problems?

MRS. R.E.H.

DEAR MRS. R.E.H.,

Yes, it does create the same problem. Only today, the fashion picture is different. It's new to have the layered look and this is achieved by wearing a sweater or body shirts under coat or jackets. The neckline is exposed and built in with the high sweater look and the sleeves extend with a sweater-knit ribbing.

This look was introduced a few seasons ago and was influenced by the Chinese coolie coat. It takes several years for a fashion to develop and as you must know, fashion does repeat itself, not to the exact same details, but the same feeling is interpreted in another way. As you will note in the sketches, these jackets look well with skirts as well as pants.

DEAR EUNICE,

I am making a blazer jacket from a designer pattern. No matter what I do, the shoulder seam twists to the back. Was there an error in the pattern?

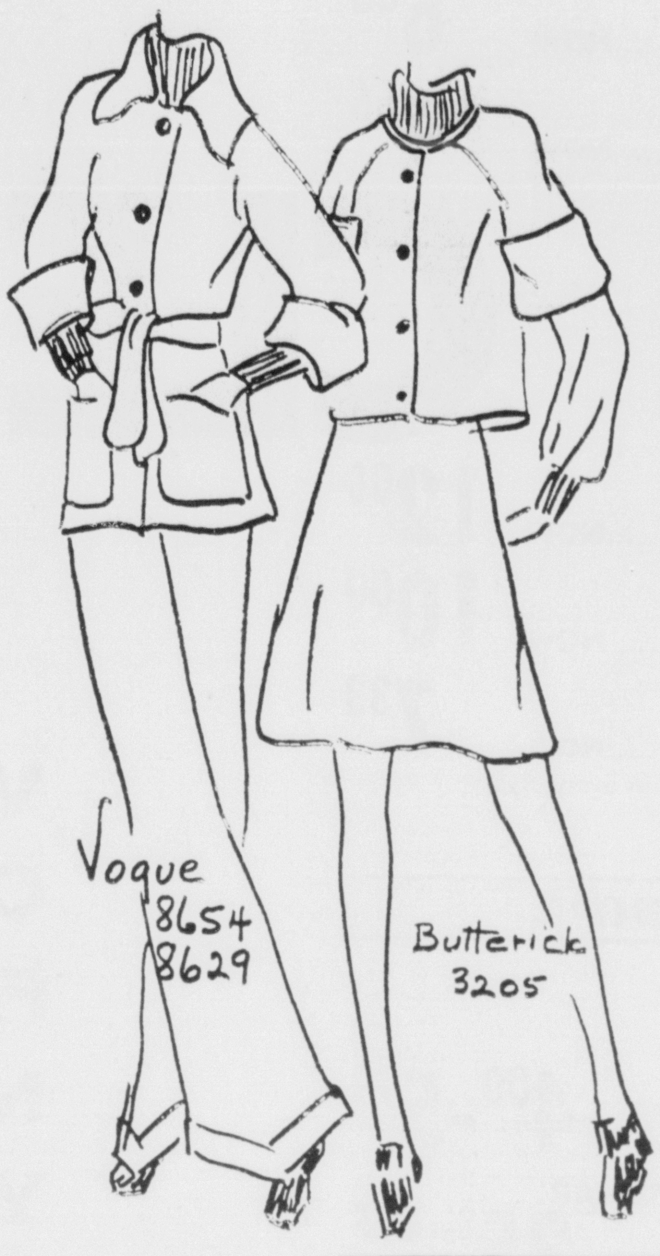
NANCY W.

DEAR NANCY,

If you are referring to the same pattern I have in mind, the designer definitely intended the shoulder seam to angle off toward the back. One way to be certain, when you are in doubt, is to check the marks on your pattern. The shoulder will always be marked. If the seam is not exactly on the shoulder, you will find extra marks for the shoulder. We must all be very careful to check out any markings on the pattern itself. It can help make the construction much simpler.

At the same time, always mark the shoulder of the sleeves themselves. These marks must correspond to the shoulder marks of your garment.

The very same is true of the underarm seam. If your sleeve is a two-piece sleeve, the seam will not correspond with the underarm seam of the garment. Instead, you will find a mark at the center of the underarm section of the sleeve indicating the underarm. This must be matched to the underarm seam or mark on your garment.



DEAR EUNICE,

My daughter and I are busy making her wardrobe for her first year away from home at college. There are so many new fake suedes and leathers available that we are thoroughly confused. Some say they can be dry cleaned. Others say they should be washed, and still others say not to wash or to dry clean, but to sponge off with a damp cloth. I thought anything that is made of polyester is washable. How in the world will she know what to do with these clothes when she is away from home?

MRS. C.H.

DEAR MRS. C.H.,

Sorry, but this is not only true of fake leathers, but most fabrics today. Be sure you know what the instructions are when you leave the fabric shop. It's a good idea to have the clerk actually mark it on the sales ticket. As soon as you get home, I would suggest you print the instructions on a piece of marking tape and tack it permanently into a pocket or seam of the garment.

It's so simple to remember what to do at the time, but we all forget when confronted with many types of fabrics. These new fakes are fantastic, but must be treated with respect.

The same precautions must be taken for all fabrics today. If they are going to be washed, be sure and wash them first. This takes away any chance of shrinking. At the same time, be sure to shrink the zippers and any trim you will be using.

For your free Fabric Conversion Chart send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

SPORTS ANALYSIS

Marin Golf Courses Catering To Youth

By RON LENT

Youth must be served.

Fairway followers in Marin County will tell you that the local courses are exceedingly helpful in planting the seeds of golfing desire into a field of growing youth. All major Marin courses, private or otherwise, are seeking to foster the game among the under-18 set.

They include: (private) Marin Country Club and Meadow Club in Fairfax; (semi-private) Peacock Gap in San Rafael, Indian Valley and San Geronimo Golf Clubs; and (public) Mill Valley Golf Course.

Of these courses, it is said that San Geronimo has the most extensive summer juniors program in Marin. Assistant pro Tony Savala says that "We had a clinic going every day last week (July 23-27)."

About 60 took part in the free public clinics running three hours daily directed primarily by pro Wayne Wallick and Savala.

Savala said "The kids were very enthusiastic and eager to learn. They said afterwards that they wanted more, so we decided to hold a clinic every week (through August). They've been asking some good questions: like how to get lift into the ball.

"Because of their interest, we're going to have the clinics again next summer and maybe have a juniors' tourney at the end of a one-week clinic."

A juniors' tourney at San Geronimo would prove a welcome addition there, because, said Savala, "We don't have any here now. We try to get juniors to play in tournaments out of town. It uplifts their game by playing in these competitive situations. And they are our golfers of the future."

Example: Indian Valley club pro Jeff McAndrew presents a week-long clinic in June after school lets out. "I try to show the basics and get up their interest. Once they're interested, they advance very fast. And, at that point, I just guide them along — give them pointers."

McAndrew also gives junior lessons to Novato Unified School District students below the high school level. This project takes place in August and September and has about 20 students. "The classes are smaller, but it makes for better control and more personal instruction," said McAndrew.

Example: Personal instruction is also the theme at Meadow Club where assistant pro Larry Babica says that the clinics have 15 boys and 12 girls. The six-week clinic ran from the middle of June to the end of July. Boys came Wednesdays, girls on Fridays.

Babica claims that it is hard to get girls started, but "once they get into it, they have a lot of enthusiasm."

The assistant pro adds that Meadow Club has a problem peculiar to its locale, namely: "We're isolated and out in the hills. We're a little tougher for people to get to."

Example: Marin Country Club assistant pro Paul Fakundiny states that "We have our (one-day) clinics twice a month during summer. We also have some kids representing us in the Bay Cities League." Ten Bay Area courses have junior teams in this 10-week competition playing Saturdays during summers.

Fakundiny notes that his club has an active juniors program in summer but not in winter. "Winter is too hard due to the weather factor, and also because the kids are in school. It's tough to get them together then."

Example: Mill Valley Golf Course assistant pro Tom Wishon admits "We didn't have much going in the past, so we reorganized our junior club for our boys (13-16 years old). We have 15 boys (who paid $3 to join) who are most enthusiastic. They want tournaments, so we'll have a junior club championship later this month. We might even put on a clinic beforehand.

"It should be easier to expand now, because of the good interest level. We should keep it up in the fall, if the weather is good. We know the kids will be around."

Indeed. The youngsters will be around. If the good weather continues in the months ahead, young golfers will look toward the local fairways for play or instruction.

A's Blue Gives Singer Accolades

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Vida Blue kept the Oakland A's from losing ground in the American League West race but the sweat he wiped from his brow afterwards wasn't just from exhaustion.

"Singer pitched a heckuva ballgame and I feel very good and very lucky to come out on top of this one," Blue said.

The 24-year-old Blue had just outlasted California's Bill Singer in a 2-1, 11-inning decision Friday night in which he gained his first victory over the Angels this season in three starts.

Both pitchers were working on no-hitters until Bob Oliver opened the fifth inning with a single against Blue and Gene Tenace spoiled Singer's bid with a double to start the eighth.

Singer finished the game giving up just three hits and striking out 13 to take over second place in the major league strikeout race with 173. Teammate Nolan Ryan leads with 250.

Blue was not disconcerted about taking a backseat to Singer in the statistics, however.

"I'm always happy when I win," Blue said. "It's the big 'W' by your name in tomorrow's paper and that's what counts. I'm really looking forward to my next start."

Raiders To Use 3 QBs Against Pats

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders open their National Football League exhibition schedule here Sunday night against the New England Patriots, who pulled an upset the last time the Raiders visited.

Two years ago, the Raiders and Patriots opened the regular National Football League season here and the Pats won 20-6 behind rookie quarterback Jim Plunkett in the first official NFL game at Schaefer Stadium.

Oakland coach John Madden may use three quarterbacks Sunday night, Daryle Lamonica, Ken Stabler and Don Milan. He's indicated that Milan, with two years of taxi squad experience, will see the most duty.

"You can't help but be a little nervous. I've wanted the chance to play the last few years and now it's here," says Milan, 24.

The biggest 1973 addition to the Raiders, defensive end Bubba Smith, is expected to be held out of the preseason opener. He was acquired from the Baltimore Colts just two weeks ago and Madden is in no hurry to use him.

No. 1 draft pick Ray Guy, the long-range punter from Southern Mississippi, is among the rookies who will be playing for Oakland. The Patriots' rookies include running back Sam Cunningham and guard John Hannah.

Former Stanford star Plunkett completed 12 of 19 passes for 104 yards last weekend when the Patriots opened with a 20-7 loss to the San Francisco 49ers at Canton, Ohio. The Pats started Tom Reynolds and Reggie Rucker at wide receiver in that game, and will have rookie Darryl Stingley of Purdue available to help Sunday night.

The Raiders' starters are expected to be all veterans, but there are some new faces in the starting lineup. Bob Moore will be at tight end instead of Ray Chester, who went to Baltimore in the trade for Smith.

Gus Otto, a starting outside linebacker for the Raiders at this time last year, has announced his retirement. Gerald Irons now holds the job.

Owens Scores 24 To Lead Cage Win

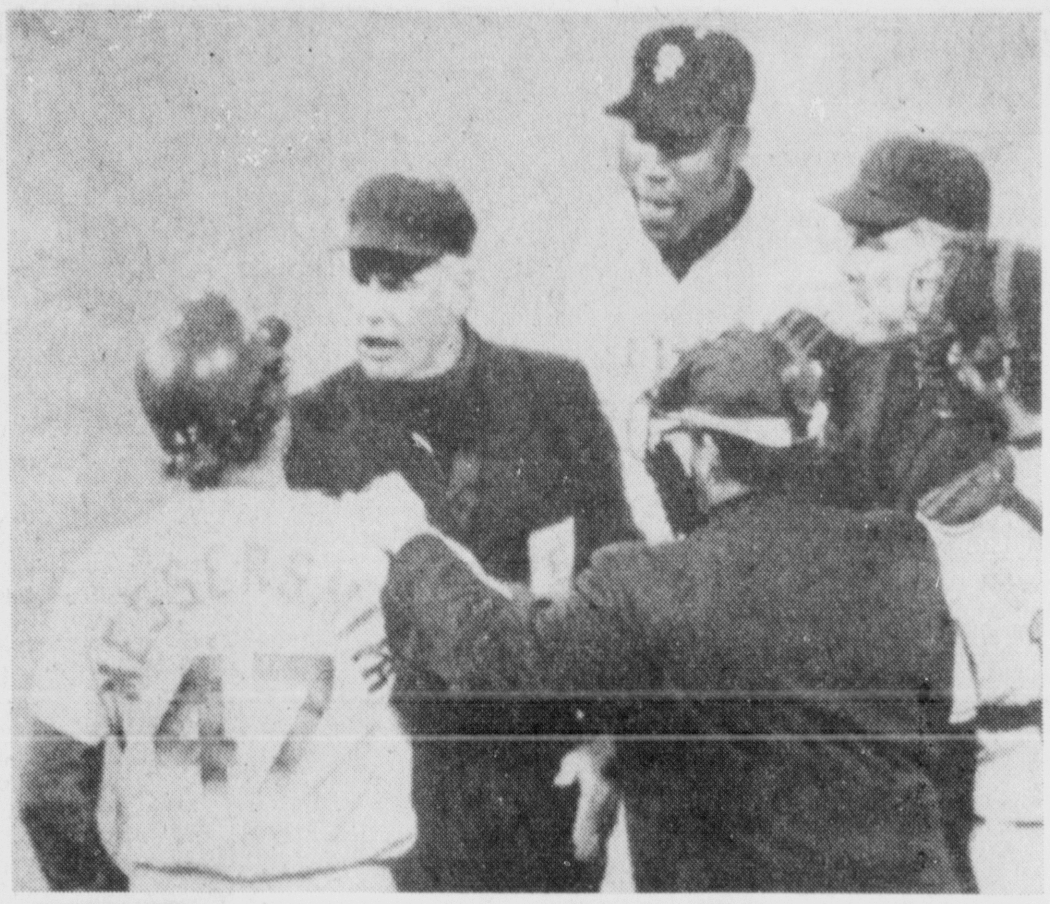
In other games, Bulldogs defeated the Crusaders 47-38 and Pirates edged the Cardinals 48-47.



RHUBARB — Umpire Shag Crawford stood between Los Angeles Dodgers' pitcher Andy Messersmith (47) and San Francisco Giants' first baseman Willie McCovey during an argument Friday night at Candlestick Park. Messersmith was batting in the ninth inning when San Francisco relief pitcher Elias Sosa nearly hit the Dodgers' right-hander with a pitch. During the rhubarb that ensued, McCovey and Messersmith exchanged words and nearly came to blows. Umpires Andy Olsen (hand on Messersmith) and John Kibler also stepped between Messersmith and McCovey. The Dodgers defeated the Giants, 3-0. (UPI Telephoto)

MANAGER FOX SAYS:

Messersmith Dominated Game Against The Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Andy Messersmith used to watch the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants play on television.

"But you have to be in one of the games before you know what the rivalry is all about," the Dodger right-hander said after beating the Giants 3-0 with a three-hitter Friday night.

"It's different when we play the Giants than it is with any other team in the league," he continued. "We're not the best of friends."

Messersmith found himself in the middle of a dispute that almost erupted into a fight in the ninth inning. It came after Elias Sosa brushed him back with an inside pitch.

Messersmith took a couple steps toward the mound but was restrained. He shouted something in the direction of Willie McCovey and the big Giants first baseman had to be held back as he went after Messersmith.

"You'll have to ask Sosa if he

By VICTOR A. SCHLICH
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The stadium in Athens buzzed with excitement in 1896 as Harvard student James B.Connolly strode forward to receive his medal as Olympic champion — the first winner in more than 1,500 years. This was a historic moment for Connolly and for international sports.

The ceremony also marked a happy end to a long struggle for a small, wiry man seated next to the King and Queen of Greece in the royal box. Baron Pierre de Coubertin had worked years to revive the Olympics as an international sports event.

His efforts since have been remembered on postage stamps by several nations, among them Haiti, which included his portrait in its stamps commemorating the 1960 Olympic Games.

Baron de Coubertin developed a keen interest in history while a student at St. Cyr, the French West Point. There, he developed a theory that France's defeat in the Franco-Prussian War was due largely to the lack of any national sense of vigor.

He believed this lack stemmed from the absence of competitive sports in French schools and universities. It was a strange thought for someone not at all athletically inclined himself.

He discussed his theory with anyone who would listen and began studying the educational systems of other nations for clues. He found that competitive sports played an important role in U.S. and British schools.

While the diminutive Parisian was doing his research German archaeologists uncovered the remains of the ancient Greek city of Olympia. The last Olympic Games had been held there some 15 centuries earlier.

Pierre de Coubertin visited the ancient city and soon began thinking about reviving the Olympics. But instead of a strictly Greek event, he saw them as a worldwide sports event.

At a meeting of the Amateur Sports Union in Paris, Count de Coubertin pleaded, "Let us export oarsmen, runners, and fencers. Here is the free trade of the future. On the day when it shall take place, the cause of peace will have received new and powerful support."

His listeners were apathetic and unimpressed, yet Count de Coubertin did not surrender easily. He persisted and renewed his proposal at a meeting in 1894 of an international athletic congress. Now, the reception was enthusiastic and plans were made for the modern Olympics.

At first it was decided to hold the games in the stadium at the ancient city of Olympia, but it had been so ravaged by the years that reconstruction was not possible. So the site was shifted to Athens.

To Count de Coubertin, the games were more than an opportunity to establish athletic records. He saw in them a chance for people from all parts of the world to meet, to get to know each other on the field of friendly sports combat.

When the King of Greece turned to congratulate Count de Coubertin after Connolly received the first olive crown, tears streamed down the cheeks of the little Frenchman who had given birth to a giant idea.

RECORD FALLS

DeMont In A Swim Win

I-J Special Report

His first helped to keep the Marin Aquatic Club in the top six, but no team scores were available. "We're still doing very well," Marin coach Don Swartz said today.

DeMont, who went after the world record in the 1,500-meter free race today, set a meet record for the 200-free with a 1:56.04. The previous mark was 1:56.4.

DeMont also took a third place in the 400-meter individual medley in 4:42.83, and anchored the men's 800-meter free relay which finished 14th.

Robin Backhaus of San Rafael, another 1972 Olympian, did not win an event Friday, but contributed mightily to the Marin cause. He took a third behind DeMont in the 200 free in 1:57.12 and came in fifth in the 200-meter butterfly with a 2:08.65.

Marin got a good effort in the men's 100-meter breaststroke from Keith Strange, who finished fifth. His time of 1:10.76 was one-tenth of a second faster than his previous best time he set in the preliminaries.

In that same event, Jeff Miller and Dan Stewart swam their best ever times with a 1:13.6 and 1:15.6 respectively.

Art Morrill shattered his previous best time in the 400 individual medley by two seconds with a 4:51.2, good for 10th place behind Steve Furniss of the Huntington Beach Aquatic Club.

The men's 800 free relay, with Backhaus, Strange, Morrill and DeMont, finished 14th with a time of 8:23.3. The women's 800 free relay took 18th place in 9:22.5, with Jo Hislop, Susan Kay, Cyndi Salvisberg and Maura Campion.

The tournament concluded today, and "if we can survive the relays, we can finish in the top six," according to Swartz. "We've had two good days, and if we can finish out with a third, we'll go home happy."

Meanwhile, Jorge Delgado of Pasadena, broke the South American, Ecuadorian and meet 200-meter butterfly records Friday night, the second day of the swim meet.

The 19-year-old native of Guayaguil, Ecuador, had a time of 2:04.38, his best. It was the fastest in the world this season.

His previous best was 2:04.6, which earned him a fourth place in the 1972 Munich Olympics.

World record holder Cathy Carr of Albuquerque, N.M., had to go all-out to take a narrow decision over Amy Bettencourt of Santa Clara in the womens' 100-meter breaststroke. Her time of 1:17.38 was considerably slower than her world record of 1:13.58 set in the 1972 Olympics.

MOOREHEAD WINS

A Surprise In Mill Valley Net

Peter Moorehead proved to be the biggest surprise of the 15th annual Marin Junior Hardcourt Tennis Championships Friday by winning the Boys 16 singles crown with a 6-1, 7-6 victory over Mark Cullers of Sacramento.

Unseeded in the five day tournament sponsored by the Mill Valley Tennis Club, Moorehead of San Mateo started his unforseen assault on the seedings with an upset over fourth-seeded Chris Kerley. He followed that up with wins over sixth-seeded Tom Boyd and top-seeded Doug Carlisle. So much for the seedings.

In the Boys singles competition, just one top-seeded player won a title. Chip Hooper of Sunnyvale won the Boys 16 championship with a 6-1, 7-6 victory over seventh-seeded John Rosenberg of Saratoga.

In Boys 12, third-seeded Greg Sherman of San Jose beat Dennis Sandkulla of San Bruno, 6-2, 6-4, to win the title.

Second-seeded Carlos Aguilar of Atherton took the Boys 18 championship with a tough 6-3, 1-6, 6-4 victory over third-seeded Dave Lucky of Alameda.

The Girls singles division was a little more predictable, with three of the four titles going to top-seeded players.

The only one that did not was in Girls 18 where third-seeded Joan Pennello of Sacramento beat unseeded Sally Thompson of Los Altos, 7-6, 6-0.

In Girls 12, Kelley Hook of Tiburon scored a 6-2, 6-2 victory over unseeded Rhonda Holt of San Quentin to win the championship.

In Girls 14, top-seeded Jean

Net Loop Has 8 Stars Committed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Proudly announcing it had signed Billie Jean King and John Newcombe and saying that it had eight other unnamed but top players committed, the World Team Tennis League held its 16-team draft Friday amid some confusion.

Billie Jean, at an estimated $100,000 a year for five years with Philadelphia, Newcombe, at $75,000 for five with Houston, were not in the first round selection since they had already agreed to the terms offered by the cities where they wished to play.

The other eight, according to Steve Arnold, player recruitment director for the 16-team league, had come to terms with the league but went into the draft pool and the teams selecting them would take over the contracts.

With each franchise seeking a team which would play 44 "games" of a men's singles, a women's singles, and a mixed doubles, the first round was a strange mixture of names and sexes.

Conspicuous by their absence in the first call-over were Stan Smith, Ilie Nastase, Wimbledon champion Jan Kodes and Arthur Ashe.

Miami, given first pick by lot, went for 18-year-old Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., America's darling of the court two years ago but who has yet to win a major title.

Rod Laver and Ken Rosewall, both nearing the end of astonishing careers, were grabbed by San Diego and Pittsburgh, respectively. While the men are members of the Association of Tennis Professionals, whose executive board is opposed to the new league, they could conceivably pick up an additional $100,000 by playing team tennis.

Dennis Murphy, president of the league who helped found the American Basketball Association and the World Hockey League, stressed his new organization, which has not sought sanction from the International Lawn Tennis Federation nor with Lamar Hunt of World Championship Tennis, is not seeking a fight with anyone, least of all Hunt.

"Our schedule, from May to June, won't conflict with WCT or Wimbledon," said Murphy.

Of the 14 named in the first round, five were women, nine were men. Miss Evert headed the list with Kerry Melville going to Boston, Rosie Casals to Detroit, Margaret Court to Golden Gate (Oakland-San Francisco) and Linda Tuero to Minnesota. In addition to Laver, Rosewall and Connors, the men were John Alexander to Los Angeles, Roy Emerson to New York, Bjorn Borg to Cleveland, Marty Riessen to Chicago, Tom Okker to Toronto and Tony Roche to Denver.

Smith was not chosen until the third round by Minnesota, Nastase went to San Diego in the fourth round, Kodes to San Diego on the fifth and Ashe to New York on the fifth.

San Rafael's Sharon Walsh was selected by Boston on the fourth round.

Later rounds dredged up some real oldtimers: Bobby Riggs to Chicago on the ninth go-round, Pancho Gonzalez to Cleveland on the sixth and Pancho Segura to Golden Gate on the tenth.

There was even a husband-wife combination drawn as a single selection on the fourth round. Clark and Carole Graebner have committed themselves to play for Cleveland. Clark will play regularly, with Carole available for emergency duty should one of the Cleveland girls be unable to play. The contract is in the $50,000 range for two years.

49er Kickers Share Duties Vs. Browns

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — Tom Wittum, trying to move ahead of both punter Jim McCann and place kicker Bruce Gossett, will alternate with McCann Monday night in the San Francisco 49er exhibition battle at Cleveland against the Browns.

Wittum, a taxi squader last season, averaged 45.5 on four punts and kicked field goals of 12 and 17 yards in the 20-7 win over New England and has been booting well in practice.

McCann averaged only 39.3 last year but his kicks are high and his left-footed boots arrive with a reverse twist that seems to produce more than the average number of fumbles. Receivers averaged only 3.5 yards per runback.

Hepner of San Francisco scored a 6-3, 6-1 win over fourth-seeded Stacey Naugle of Saratoga for her crown.

Top-seeded Mareen (Peanut) Louis of San Francisco added another title to her burgeoning scrapbook with a comeback, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, victory over unseeded Jill Toney of Diablo.

The San Rafael duo of Frank Casella and Bobby Greene upset the third-seeded team of John Miranda and Brian Barlay, 6-2, 6-4 to win the Boys 14 doubles crown.

Lisa Beritzhoff of Mill Valley teamed with Toney to beat the Piedmont tandem of Peggy Kincaid and Debbie Douglas for the Girls 16 doubles title.

second place after holding the division lead for more than a month, to keep pace with the winning Kansas City Royals.

Oakland Manager Dick Williams made no apologies, however, for his starter, who was aided by an unearned run scored by his teammates in the second inning on a walk, an error by third baseman Al Gallagher and a fielder's choice.

"That's as good a game as I've seen Vida Blue pitch," Williams said. "He was just great. His combinations were perfect."

Blue, 10-7, allowed five hits and struck out six before giving way to Rollie Fingers in the 11th.

Singer said, "it's a shame how they got their runs but I feel that I'm back in the groove now and should win a lot more games."

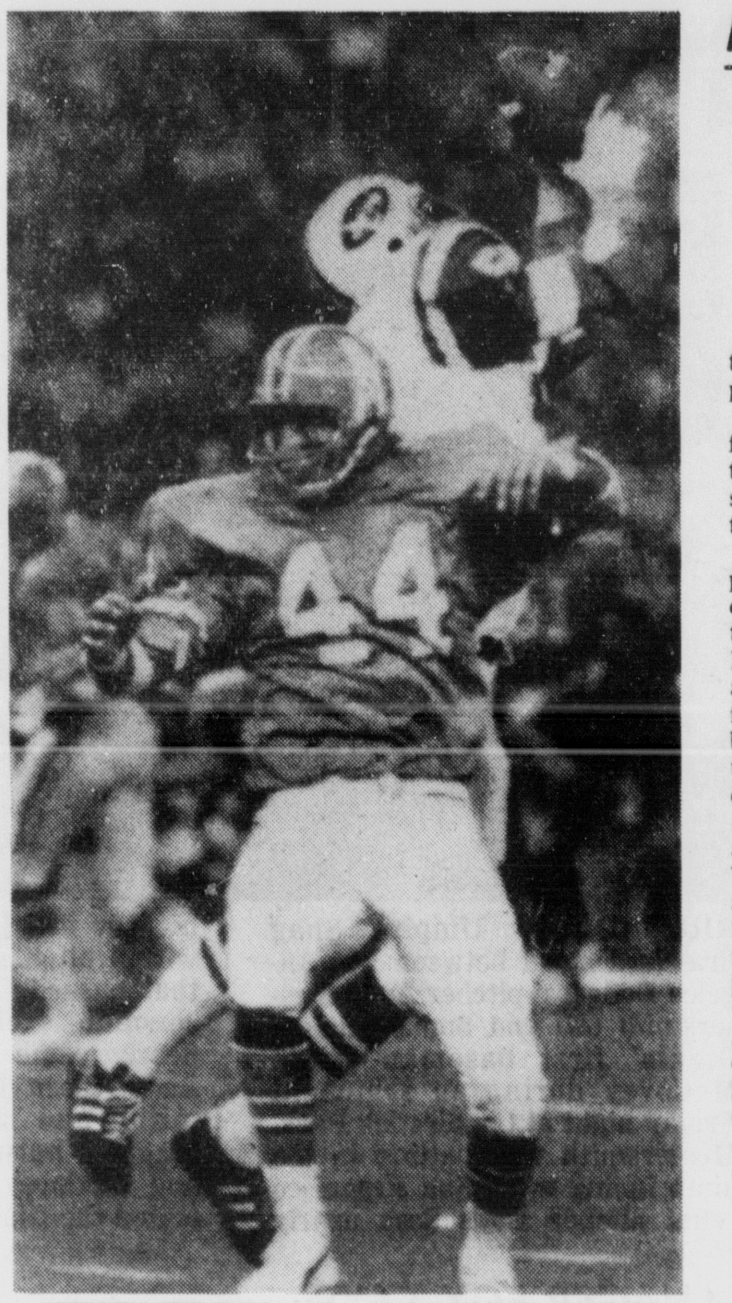
Sharon Defeated

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI) — San Rafael's Sharon Walsh bowed Friday 6-3, 6-2 to Los Angeles' Laurie Tenney in the $25,000 Atlantic City Tennis Classic here.



WHERE'S THE BALL — New York Jets' linebacker Ralph Baker intercepted Houston Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini's pass during the first quarter Friday night in Houston. Oilers' intended receiver Fred Willis (44) was looking for the pass when Baker made the theft during the National Football League pre-season opener for both clubs. New York won, 16-13.

was throwing at me," Messersmith said. Sosa said the pitch got away from him.

Messersmith, now 11-6, now has pitched two three-hitters within a week against the Giants.

"I think it helps to pitch against a team a few times. I'm learning about the hitters. People can tell you about them but you have to see them yourself. The key to beating the Giants is keeping Bobby Bonds off the bases. We did that pretty well."

Steve Garvey paced the Dodger attack on Tom Bradley, 9-10, with three hits, including a triple.

Manager Charlie Fox of the Giants was impressed with Messersmith, a pitcher he tried to get from California before the Dodgers did.

"Messersmith dominated the game. He had three pitches and got them all over the plate."

The Giants made two roster changes in an attempt to get some batting punch. They called up Steve Ontiveros and Bruce Miller from their Phoenix farm team.

Ontiveros was hitting .357 and Miller .312. Both are infielders although Ontiveros can play the outfield. To make room, they sent pitcher Charlie Williams and infielder Domi Blanco to Phoenix.

Concord Wins Little League Baseball Title

Concord National scored a run in the ninth inning on a passed ball Friday night to beat West Vallejo-Mare Island, 3-2, and win the sectional championship of the Little League All-Star Tournament at Rancho Field in Novato.

Concord scored single runs in the third and fifth innings, but West Vallejo came back to tie the game in the bottom of each of those frames.

Eric Messick led off the ninth with a walk for Concord, and after being moved to third, he scored the winning run on a passed ball.

Nick Storr went the distance for Concord to pick up the win. He allowed just three hits, struck out seven and walked none.

Softball Results

Horse Shoe and McArthurs Tavern tied 9-9, William Timmer edged Youngbloods 8-7, and MMWD beat Big Four Rents 5-4 in San Rafael Recreation Department adult softball league play Friday night at Albert Field.

Cowboys' Stowe Shows What He Has Learned

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Stowe, a backup man to Warfield at Miami last season, was traded to Dallas in the off-season. Friday night he made the Cowboys look like geniuses.

He caught two touchdown passes as Dallas opened its exhibition season with a 24-7 trouncing of the Los Angeles Rams. Charley Waters also had a 54-yard interception return for a touchdown and the Cowboy defense completely throttled veteran John Hadl in his debut as a Ram quarterback.

In the only other pre-season action Friday night, the New York Jets edged Houston 16-13 and Detroit upset Washington 17-14. In action tonight, Baltimore is at Pittsburgh, Buffalo plays Philadelphia at Jacksonville, Fla., Cincinnati is at Miami, New Orleans at Kansas City, the New York Giants at San Diego and Chicago takes on Green Bay at Milwaukee.

After a scoreless first period, a crowd of over 75,000 fans watched Roger Staubach throw a 16-yard pass to Stowe for the first score. Toni Fritsch's 20-yard field goal gave Dallas a 10-0 halftime lead and the Cowboys iced the game in the third period when Waters made his TD run and Jack Concannon hit Stowe with a 12-yard TD pass.

James Harris, in relief of Hadl, who was booed soundly, threw 13 yards to Harold Jackson in the last period for the only Rams' score.

The Lions scored a pair of touchdowns in the second quarter and added a fourth quarter field goal by Errol Mann to beat Washington and spoil Duane Thomas' return to pro football.

Greg Landry threw nine yards to Larry Walton for one score and after the Redskins tied the game on a two-yard pass from Bill Kilmer to Jerry Smith, Mel Farr burst 47 yards for a TD and Mann kicked a 10-yard field goal. Rookie Moses Denson ran six yards in the last period for Washington's only TD.

Thomas, who had not played since the January, 1972 Super Bowl when he led Dallas to victory, gained 36 yards on 11 carries and helped set up the Redskin score.

"He looked like the Duane Thomas of old," said Redskins' Coach George Allen. "He's learned our offense but he still has a lot to learn. He's disappointed with his performance and I'd appreciate it if you guys (press) wouldn't try to talk to him. We've got a chance to save a guy and a performer and if you don't want to interfere, stay away from him."

Running back Larry Brown, the National Football Conference Player of the year last season, did not play for Washington because of a virus infection.

Bobby Howfield's third field goal of the game, a 23-yarder with 1:35 left to play, lifted the Jets over Houston. With the Oilers leading 3-0, Al Woodall came off the bench in the second period to spark a 91-yard drive capped by Mike Adamle's six-yard TD run that gave New York the lead.

Howfield boosted it to 10-3 at the half with a 44-yard field goal but a 35-yard TD pass from Dan Pastorini to Clifford McNeil and Skip Butler's 39-yard field goal gave Houston a 13-10 lead. Howfield tied it with a 31-yarder before winning it in the last period.

In action around the camps Friday, Minnnsota signed defensive back Jackie Wallace, their No. 2 draft choice from Arizona and dealt linebacker Greg Slough to the Rams. Minnesota and St. Louis meet in a controlled scrimmage tonight.

Rentzel Set Back In Court

Combined AP & UPI

LOS ANGELES — A Federal court judge Friday denied a request by Lance Rentzel, the suspended Los Angeles Rams' receiver, to have his suspension lifted.

Rentzel filed a similar action in Superior Court, however, and a decision will be handed down Monday.

Rentzel missed the Rams' exhibition season opener against Dallas Friday night because of the suspension, which was handed down July 20 by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle. The suspension stemmed from Rentzel's conviction for possession of marijuana in May. That case is currently being appealed.

Rentzel, along with the NFL Players' Association, filed the Federal court action Thursday, charging that his suspension would cause him irreparable harm.

U.S. District Judge Charles H. Carr denied the request, saying, "There is no indication that irreparable damage will occur." Rentzel dropped the request.

Tennis

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Tom Gorman of Seattle Friday defeated Chile's Jaime Fillol 17-15, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 in the American Zone Davis Cup finals, giving the United States a 1-0 lead in the competition.

Basketball

CINCINNATI — George Wilson, former player of the National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves, Friday filed a $1.4 million suit in U.S. District Court charging that he was cut from the team because of a racial quota system.

Baseball

Golf

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Rookie Laura Baugh Friday fired a three-under-par 69 and earned a share of the first round lead in the $35,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Classic along with Judy Rankin, Murle Breer and Donna Young.

HARRISON, N.Y. — Tom Weiskopf fashioned an eight-under-par 64 and took a three-stroke lead after the first round Friday of the rain-delayed $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Emil Zatopek wins 5,000 meters in 1952 Olympics.

Zatopek Takes 3 Olympic Victories

HELSINKI, Finland — The greatest runner circles the track in Helsinki. The Flying Finn, Paavo Nurmi, with torch in hand, is part of the opening day ceremonies for the 1952 Olympic Games.

Nurmi dominated distance running in the 1920's and was a great Olympic champion.

The Finns have always loved great distance runners and there is a talented group of them here at these games.

In the first final of the track and field events, Zatopek outclasses an excellent field in winning the 10,000 meters in Olympic record time.

Most of these same runners also enter the 5,000 meter run. A crowd of 70,000 watches as one of the great footraces in Olympic history begins to unfold.

Four of the world's best runners leave the rest of the field behind and stay bunched up for almost the entire race with none of them able to establish a commanding lead.

There are 400 meters to go and Zatopek goes into a sprint and passes the frontrunners. Emil is running in his characteristic style of flailing arms and contorted facial expressions.

Chris Chataway of Great Britain stays right with him. Now the Englishman moves in front.

They come around the final turn, and they're nearly even as Zatopek makes another move. Emil comes off the turn in the Chataway, in an attempt to come back once again, trips and falls on the track. Left unchallenged, Zatopek charges down the home stretch and hits the tape for another Olympic record.

Zatopek goes on to win the marathon for still another Olympic record and his third gold medal.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Stocks Battered On Many Sides

NEW YORK (UPI) — Watergate, rising interest rates, and profit-taking dealt stocks a blow this week on the New York Stock Exchange, and sent investors back to the sidelines following a two-week buying spree.

The Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 27.84 to 908.87, following the two-week, 50-point gain. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a broader market barometer, skidded 3.03 to 106.49. The NYSE index fell 1.57 to 56.79.

Declining issues topped advances, 1,394 to 406, among 1,985 issues traded.

Profit-taking was the most ready explanation for much of the week's decline. The flood of earnings and increased dividends that had been supporting the rally had slowed to a trickle, and what little buying interest remained was limited largely to the institutional favorites — the glamors and blue chips.

But Watergate—the market's chief psychological worry for months—stormed into the headlines Tuesday following word a resolution to impeach President Nixon had been introduced in the House of Representatives. On that day, the market dropped about 5 points in the last half-hour of trading — minutes after news of the resolution hit the Street—and foreshadowed much worse things to come for stocks on Wednesday.

With the word "impeach-

ment" in the news the market reacted Thursday with a 14.22-point slide, and nearly 1,200 declines, confirming doubts that the Watergate issue had been thoroughly "discounted" by investors.

Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. commented, "Wall Street realizes there will be an economic slowdown, more trouble for the dollar, probably worse inflation. But Watergate remains the great unknown, the source of continued disquiet."

Lurking in the background, too, were rising interest rates. There have been a dozen boosts this year in the prime lending rate. On Friday, three of the nation's banks boosted their rates to 9 per cent. Other lending institutions are likely to follow the move within days, according to observers.

But, as a number of analysts pointed out, Wall Street had fully expected an eventual 9 to 9 ¼ per cent plateau. A rate beyond that level, according to economic consultant Robert Johnson, might do damage to stock prices and investor confidence. The recent surge in other money rates was more worrisome. Utility issues, particularly sensitive to rates on borrowed funds simply because utilities are such big borrowers, have been hard-hit for some time, and the Dow Jones utility average hit new 1973 lows several times this week.

There was surprisingly little despair at week's end, though. Most analysts seemed willing to look on the bright side of the week. Lucien Hooper of W.E. Hutton said a technical pullback was overdue after "the market advanced too quickly two weeks ago."

Others said a slowing of activity was typical at this time of year. Saul Smerling of Standard & Poor's saw the sluggish trading as a blessing of a sort: "Now, as Wall Street has seen some of its fears confirmed, volume has dried up, and selling hasn't been too severe."

International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. was the volume leader, off 1 ⅝ at 32 ⅜ on 719,300 shares. American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was second, losing 1 ½ to 49 ⅞ on 540,000 shares, followed by Texaco (ex-dividend) which dropped ⅞ to 31 ⅞ on 519,000 shares. Curtiss-Wright, holder of North American rights on the Wankel rotary auto engine, gained 4 on the week. General Motors and American Motors issued statements indicating larger commitments to the use of the controversial engine.

Glamors were mixed. Bausch & Lomb rose 4, and Upjohn 3 ⅛, while Xerox, Avon Products, and ARA Services fell 3 ¼ each.

Burroughs was the leading loser, off 11 ⅜. IBM dropped 6 ½. Fairchild Camera advanced 2 ½.

Chemicals weakened. DuPont declined 6 ⅜ and Eastman Kodak 4 ⅛.

General Motors dropped 2 ⅜, Ford 1 ½ and Chrysler 1 ¼, after two weeks of solid gains.

Among lower airlines and aircrafts, Delta lost 4 ⅝, TWA 2 ¾, and United Aircraft 2 ¼.

Steels and rails took smaller losses.

City's Oldest Buildings Should Be Identified

WHICH IS THE oldest building in San Rafael?

I-J historian Dorothy Gardiner thinks it is probably what is known as the Bagley Apartments on the upper side of Mission Avenue between B and Wilkins.

This may also be the very first all-wood home built in San Rafael. It is believed to have been erected in 1852 by Walter Skidmore, pioneer Marin district attorney.

That was 121 years ago. Mission San Rafael was already 35 years old. What we know as Marin had already passed from Spanish to Mexican and finally to American control. Our county government was only two years old. San Rafael was not yet incorporated. Marin did not yet have a newspaper and would not have one for nine more years.

THAT HISTORIC house was between 15 and 20 years old when William T. (for Tell) Coleman, the wealthy vigilante leader, acquired it.

It was his home and headquarters during the period when he and his contemporaries developed San Rafael.

Today's beautiful Dominican area started as Coleman's Magnolia Valley subdivision. The elementary school there was named for him.

On the other side of San Rafael valley he opened Laurel Grove, a park for picnickers which attracted thousands of visitors.

On the floor of the valley, he planted thousands of trees on what previously was barren except for natural grass and brush.

He was a leader in efforts to build a new courthouse in 1872, incorporate San Rafael as a city in 1874, attract the Dominican Sisters to start their convent and college here in the 1880s, promote the building of Hotel Rafael. Some believe he was instrumental in urging Peter Donahue to extend the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad to and through San Rafael.

Coleman founded San Rafael's first water company.

If the walls of the old Bagley apartment building had ears and could only tell us all that went on there, what a story it would be!

NEXT YEAR, San Rafael will observe the 100th anniversary of its incorporation.

Mrs. Gardiner is already researching the history of that signal event. The results of her research will be published in the I-J in connection with the centennial observance.

Logically, she observes that the old Coleman house should be appropriately marked and honored, along with other historic buildings in the county seat city.

The Ru Ann Apartments building on the north side of Fourth Street between B and C may be the oldest building on San Rafael's main thoroughfare. It was built by convict labor, from San Quentin brick, in 1860. It was first the Marin Hotel.

Marin's first newspaper, the Marin County Journal, was printed there 111 years ago. The San Rafael Stage Co. had its offices there. Visiting judges and lawyers stayed there during litigation over Mexican land grants in Marin. It also served as social center for the growing town. Many a fancy dress ball was held there.

On the opposite side of the street between C and D (formerly occupied by Moore's Stationery store), Gordon's Opera House building still stands, although its upper floor has long since been converted to apartments. It was built in 1878. Edwin Booth was among the notables who performed there. It was the locale for political rallies and even school graduations. When Marin's first physician and San Rafael's first mayor, Dr. Alfred Taliaferro, died, his body lay in state there before burial in Mt. Tamalpais Cemetery.

As Mrs. Gardiner has suggested, such buildings need to be recognized, marked and honored.

Monarch Migration

Have you ever wondered how far monarch butterflies fly when they migrate? No one knows for sure. But we have a few clues. A monarch was marked in Ontario in August, 1957, and was recovered in January, 1958, in Mexico, 1,870 miles away.

Experts believe that many monarchs travel more than 2,000 miles in the course of their year of life. They have tougher wings than most butterflies, but even so it's an incredible journey.

Letter To A Young Man — One Who Didn't Get The Job

Dear Young Man:

Today, you asked me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids out of high school can't find work.

But I hired a teen-ager today. Maybe you saw him. He was the one with the polished shoes and a ecktie. What was so special about that? Not experience, neither of you had any. Attitude put him on the payroll. He wanted the job badly enough to shuck the leather jacket, get a haircut, and look in the phone book to find out what this company makes. He took time out to find out my name and he called me "Mr." or "Sir," not "Hey you." He did his best to impress me, that is where he edged you out.

You see, people who hire people aren't "with" a lot of things. We know more about Bing than Ringo, and we have some stone age ideas about who owes whom a living. Maybe that makes us prehistoric, but there is nothing wrong with the checks we sign. If you want one, you'd better tune to our wave length.

I want someone who will go out in the plant, keep his eyes open, and work for me like he would for himself. Of course, I am interested in your problems, but I want you to be interested in my problems, too. If you have a vague idea of what I am trying to say, let it show next time you ask for a job. You'll be head and shoulders over the rest.

You may not believe it, but all around you, employers are looking for young men and women smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way. When they find one, they can't wait to unload some work on him.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Genuine Protector Of Four-Footed Friends

Helen Galantiere has to be one of the great ladies of the world! And hopefully, Patricia Perry's story about her pet foster home in the I-J (July 31) will communicate the depth of Helen's compassion for "small things that have no words," and perhaps result, by some miracle, in widespread support for her animal adoption society.

Many of us are genuinely concerned about the four-footed friends among us. But how few of us do something dynamic and definitive about that concern as Helen has continued to do for years, even before founding the St. Francis Animal Protection Society.

My own contacts with Mrs. Galantiere have been realtively brief. But they've established that she's an incredibly dedicated protective society all by herself. Nothing supercedes that one-pointed involvement. Yet, she never remonstrates with those of us who have to cop out on her calls for help in temporarily housing some deserted little guy she's encountered while driving or whatever. Instead, she'll go on spending her dimes in phone booths, all the while watching over the forlorn creature she's determined to rescue, until someone gives in. Or else home it goes with her, to join the others.

Her gracious understanding about those of us who are only part-time humanitarians doesn't make me feel any less guilty, though, knowing that her own household and life are given over completely to the orphans.

If the Larkspur City Council does bring a "nuisance abatement" (an incredible charge!) against her, surely somewhere there's a more hospitable environment for her humanitarian project — and additional volunteers to help, as well.

'You Cannot Do This To My Country'

I have just written my congressman the following letter:

The sickenining revelations of Watergate and the scandalous use of taxpayers' money for the President's homes in Florida and California bring this one thing to mind, the question the attorney for the Army, Joseph Welch, asked Senator Joseph McCarthy: "Sir, have you no decency left?"

I care far more for my country than I do for my party. Would that more politicians did! And it's all right with me if Vice President Agnew finishes Mr. Nixon's term and a Democrat wins in 1976. The moral climate in the country smells to high heaven and it's time for all citizens, Democrats, Republicans or independents, to cry out, "You cannot do this to our country! You can no longer stand by and watch it being done!"

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Big Thinkers in the Rand Corp. have been gratned granted to think up ways to melt the icebergs after they're delivered from the South Pole.

Environmentalists have been unkind enough to suggest that instead of towing icebergs from the Antarctic, we tow California to the South Pole.

ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — An estimated 600,000 young people showed up at Watkins Glen, N.Y., last week end for a rock concert. That means there were 1,200,000 parents biting their nails and drinking booze to keep from thinking the worst about what was happening to their children.

I speak from personal experience because I donated a daughter to the concert. Actually I didn't give her to the concert. She gave herself. She announced in no uncertain terms that this concert was the most important thing in her life and if she missed it there would be nothing worth living for.

The fact that she had heard the same group, The Grateful Dead, three weeks earlier in RFK Stadium did not enter the picture. She hadn't, she pointed out, heard them at Watkins Glen — and if you didn't hear them at Watkins Glen, then you just couldn't say you had heard them.

AFTER MY DAUGHTER departed in a Volkswagen with five other people, I had a lot of time to think about Watkins Glen — all night to be exact.

Why would 600,000 youths drive hundreds of miles, wallow in the mud, bake in the sun, and do without water and shelter to go to a rock concert that most of them couldn't even hear?

The answer is that all over this great country of ours there are millions of teenagers aimlessly wandering around with nothing to do and no place to go.

Everyone needs a goal in life. And when it was announced there was going to be a concert at Watkins Glen, it gave these rootless young people a place to head for.

In India it would have been the Ganges. In the Middle East it would have been Mecca. In the United States this year it was Watkins Glen.

FOR THE FIRST TIME all summer these 20th-century gypsies had a purpose in their traveling. They all turned and faced New York, some with cars, others with buses, and many with nothing but their thumbs.

With a goal ahead of them, their lethargy left them and their spirits brightened. Now when they called their parents collect, they could say with pride that they were going somewhere.

What started out as a rock concert put on by a couple of smart promoters turned into a religious rite for which no sacrifice was too great to be where it was happening.

All over America bourgeois parents turned on their television sets to watch with trepidation as helicopters hired by the networks filmed the masses of humanity down below. There they were, 600,000 of our children, wall to wall, sitting on the hard ground, zonked out by bearded men screaming into electronic speakers that shattered the eardrums of anyone within 20 miles of the bandstand.

THE BIG QUESTION every parent must have asked himself or herself was: "Where did we go wrong? You spent 18 years of your life seeing they got all their vitamins, making sure they did their homework, teaching them to brush their teeth, providing them with a security you never had. And the final result of it all was down below in some pasture land in New York state where they came to blow their minds."

But, as I have been told many times, it isn't for us to judge what our children do. Our only role in the summer of '73 is to accept their collect telephone calls so they can let us know they're still alive.

And so, as the sun came up over the Washington Monument, I stood in my bathrobe on the balcony facing New York state and the only thought I had was, "It could have been worse. We could have been living in Watkins Glen."

Record Hints Highest Court Will Order Release Of Tapes

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court of the United States has in these turbulent times encountered heavy weather. Both within the law and for individual justices drafted for outside assignments, the authority of the highest tribunal of the third branch of government has been eroded. For the court now to be required by the President to resolve the greatest constitutional crisis in the history of the republic, with all its political implications, is to impose a burden with unforeseeable consequences.

In the weeks ahead, until the court hands down its fateful decision, interest will be concentrated on the nine men who must reach a decision. Rarely in recent history has the court had such a mixed bag of judges representing the choices of four separate presidents, with four men nominated by Nixon and five selected by three previous administrations.

THE POLARITY on the court is reflected in the oldest justice, both in age and term of service, and the youngest and most newly appointed. William O. Douglas was nominated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in March of 1939. In October he will be 75 years old and, while this is not ancient in comparison with veterans in the past who have stayed on the bench into their 80s, his 34 years of service equals that of the late Justice Hugo L. Black, who died in 1971 a week after he resigned from the court at the age of 85.

Douglas has voted, with few exceptions, against any and all restraints on information from government or private sources. This comes out in his repeated dissents, one of the latest being a vigorous dissent from the opinion of a majority of five justices giving states and local communities the right to set their own standards of what is obscene. This, Douglas held, puts "an ominous gloss on freedom of the press." On the basis of his record Douglas would almost certainly vote against "executive privilege" as grounds for withholding presidential tapes and documents.

Douglas and his wife are flying this month to China for a long-delayed visit of three weeks to the People's Republic. Friends are concerned for him in view of his age and the fact that he has a heart pacer, and particularly since not long ago when he passed through an airport X-ray detector, the pacer was thrown off and he had to be rushed to a hospital. His absence from the bench, when the court must reach a decision, would further complicate an already fearfully complex situation.

THE NEWEST member of the court and the youngest is Justice William H. Rehnquist. Forty-nine years old, he cites in his official biography that he was Phi Beta Kappa and first in his class at Stanford University Law School. From school he served as law clerk to the late Justice Robert H. Jackson.

In Phoenix, Ariz., where he practiced law, he was an ardent Goldwater man and a protege of former Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst. He tangled with Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. when he appeared before the senator's constitutional rights subcommittee, saying that, while it would be inappropriate and a waste of the taxpayer's money, it would not violate the senator's rights for the government to put him under surveillance. With rare exceptions Rehnquist has voted with the three other Nixon appointees on the strict constructionist side.

Between these two poles the other seven have shown a wide range of opinion. What the court will finally decide in this constitutional crisis is anyone's guess, in light particularly of the often-unpredictable outcome in cases where observers had thought the result was foreordained.

WHEN THREE NEWSMEN claimed the right of confidentiality to protect their sources, the four Nixon appointees were joined by Justice Byron R. White, the sole appointee of President Kennedy, in denying that right. In writing the opinion for the majority of five, White stressed the requirement that all persons, high or low, give any evidence they might have in any case however trivial its nature. This would seem to commit the majority to ruling against executive privilege and requiring the President to produce tapes and documents requested by Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox and the Watergate investigating committee.

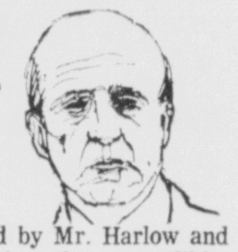
JOSEPH C. HARSCH



Agnew Suddenly Gets Attention; How Would He Be As President?

One day recently Bryce Harlow, newly back at the White House, telephoned Vice President Spiro T. Agnew across the street in the Executive Offices Building and said:

That marked the third big change in the career of Mr. Agnew. The first was when he became governor of the State of Maryland. The second was when he became vice president of the United States in name only. Beginning with Mr. Harlow's telephone call, people around the White House, and in other places as well, have been paying more attention to Mr. Agnew. As one of his staff puts it: "We no longer feel like a wasted asset."

MR. AGNEW STILL operates on a narrow base. He has a staff of nine assistants plus about 20 secretaries and assistants to assistants. He and his staff use a third of the second floor of the EOB. Henry Kissinger has a far larger staff — and more visitors. But more people are asking to see Mr. Agnew these days. He has presided over one cabinet meeting. He regularly attends cabinet and National Security Council meetings.

He is kept informed by Mr. Harlow and by Melvin Laird, the other new White House adviser, of background affairs in the White House.

During his first four years he was used to make hard-line political speeches at campaign times, was allowed to visit 28 countries of lesser importance and Japan, and attended what were known as "dog and pony shows" (ritualized White House occasions). He was not informed in domestic political affairs. His foreign travels were mostly in Asia and the Middle East. The nearest he got to Europe was Greece, Portugal, and Spain. He has never visited China, Russia, the Communist countries of Eastern Europe, or the major allies — Britain, France, Germany — in Western Europe.

His conversation reflects his experience pattern. He talks from first-hand knowledge about such places as Indonesia and Malaysia. His knowledge of Western Europe is second-hand. In domestic matters his references are almost entirely to events which happened when he was governor of Maryland. He has a lot of catching up to do in domestic affairs.

THERE IS NOTHING new about vice presidents being treated around the White House as gate crashers. Hubert Humphrey was miserable under Lyndon Johnson. Mr. Johnson remembered his vice-presidential years as his most uncomfortable. Mr. Agnew's first four years in "purgatory" were at least as bad — some of his staff think worse.

But he has acquired composure through the ordeal. In private he is a quietly congenial person. He can laugh at himself and is aware of his own flaws. His skin has toughened over the last four years, but he is still sensitive. He is free of all pomposity.

He is not assertive. He does listen.

WHAT KIND of a president would he make?

Perhaps one of his strongest qualifications is an honest doubt in his own mind whether he really wants to be a candidate in 1976. Unlike a Johnson or Humphrey, he has not been "bitten by the presidential bug." He might deliberately decide not to run.

Judging a man's qualifications before he enters the White House is difficult. Warren Harding was supposed to be highly qualified. His presidency ended in disaster and tragedy. Harry S Truman was widely perceived to be an opportunistic product of a corrupt political machine with extremely limited ability. He was one of the best presidents.

Mr. Agnew thinks of himself as being politically somewhere near the middle of the American political spectrum, to the left of Mr. Nixon in some respects, to the right in others. My own guess is that he is free of dogmatism and would, if he ever found himself in the White House, be like a Truman in the sense of facing his problems pragmatically as they came along. He would probably decentralize the White House and run the federal government more through cabinet officers as in pre-Kennedy days than through White House super-assistants as in the Kennedy-Johnson-Nixon manner.

LITTLE OL' WINE MAKERS

Retirement project, almost an acre of sundrenched hillside w/ westerly exposures, we furnish three dozen of grape vines, you furnish the energy for planting, pruning, harvesting & eventually the wine making. Of course, the pocketbook of the LITTLE OL' WINE MAKER couldn't be so skimpy to get the oak vats to be stored in the basement where the juice could mature into your very own brand of wine to your special taste. This stately home is rustic in appearance, but quite elegant. The floor to ceiling rock frplc., w/12' high ceiling, gives you a feeling of solidity while the spaciousness of the room would allow for sizeable library. The dining, wining & entertainment room is a couple of steps up from the most practical brand new kitchen, 2 modern baths, 3 bdrms., & 2 unfinished rooms could accommodate the great grandchildren. Once you put this on your list, we help you check it out. $70,000.

BARGAINS GALORE — Los Angeles resident Robert Valencia found many good buys on a shopping spree through the Grand Central Market in downtown Los Angeles, where in spite of Phase III, IV or otherwise, the food market that started in the depression era still draws a carnival of people who look for quantity rather than quality at half the price found elsewhere.

AT UNIQUE MARKET

Southlanders Find Bargains

By MARK JONES

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The world of open markets here has its prince and commoner. The prince is doing nicely thank you, but the commoner is thriving in the renaissance of the bargain hunter.

The prince is the Farmer's Market, a tourist attraction where the well heeled can pay top dollar for strawberries in January.

The wife of an auto executive had a craving for watermelon this winter, and didn't hestiate to pay Farmer's Market $29 to fly one to her at a San Francisco hospital.

"We generally cater to three kinds of shoppers here—the ones who know the best, who want it and the ones who don't have to sacrifice to get it," boasted Farmer's president John Gostobich.

For a Depression-era market which began with 18 farmers selling produce from the tailgates of their trucks, Farmer's Market has come a long way.

But it's strictly an uptown market; downtown is another story.

On Broadway, between busy third and fourth streets in the heart of the civic center, is the gestive and popular—but less famous—Grand Central Market. Under its bright orange awning this half-century old institutin has the city's largest array of foodstuffs and nationalities under one roof.

A writer once described Grand Central as the "Auntie Mame" of markets in Los Angeles. And, in a city of squeaky-clean shopping centers, the name fits.

Perhaps the oldest continuous marketplace in Los Angeles, Grand Central first began selling cheap, volume produce about 1917, drawing buyers right to the front door by way of the city's rumbling streetcars.

Freeways took over in the 1950s but low-income families from south and east Los Angeles still flock here on weekdays and particularly on Saturday. Judges on their noon hour break drop by to shop, along with longhairs buying big for their communes.

"Mainly, though, we still cater to laboring people with large families who want quantity rather than quality, although some of our food is as good quality as any," says former market manager Harold Abbot.

"It's a carnival of people here," he said, adding that the United States Information Agency once filmed the market, then sent the movie overseas to show that the United States is more than a white, middle-class mass and that "all nationalities live together here."

Tons of fruit and vegetables are trucked here from downtown wholesalers each morning while the city sleeps and the effect is an eye-opening perfume.

The unexpected aroma is more like a Mexican or Middle-Eastern bazaar than an American market.

This and perhaps the lowest grocery prices in the city lure some 750,000 shoppers a month, and some 60,000 on a typical frantic Saturday.

Down the market's narrow, crowded, sawdust-covered aisles shoppers find exotic fruits, nuts and breads, oysters from New Orleans halvah candy from Israel, Brazilian coffee, Alaskan crabmeat, edible cactus from Mexico, most of Italy's noodles and cheeses, Iranian dates, real lambs heads and golden papayas the size of little basketballs.

The market's nearly 20,000 square feet of aisle space—the size of a large auditorium—is jammed with five dozen produce stalls, bakery and lunch counters.

At Grand Central, shoppers can find such bargain meats as turkey tails and beef hooves for less than 50 cents a pound. Pork, in small supply throughout the country is abundant here and priced 15 cents a pound less than chain stores.

Lettuce goes two for 35 cents, corn five for a dollar, two cantaloupe for 35 cents and tomatoes — a little higher this year—are 31 cents a pound.

Compared with chain store prices uptown and elsewhere in the country, it seems President Nixon's Phase Four policy was stopped even before it got to Grand Central's front door.

"You learn very quickly how to shop for buys here. And if you're a good shopper—and you know your foods and prices—you can come away with some fine bargains," says Hiram Cedrario, 60, dean of the Grand Central merchants.

Cedrario went to work for his father's bakery-delicatessen counter here in 1923 then opened his own stall in 1938, selling big loaves of French bread for 12 cents. Today they're 62 cents.

"People go uptown to chain stores and maybe get a 'good morning, or good evening' and that's it. Here they get individual attention," he said.

"They like it and they come back." Cedrario grossed $275,000 last year, enjoys his work and relishes election year when he gets to pump the hands of politicians who flock to Grand Central looking for ethnic America.

Cedrario and Irving Kazan, another long-time stall owner, have been selling food here longer than anyone else. Kazan, who started when he was 25 and gave up his ambition to be an optometrist, now grosses about $400,000 a year selling fruits and vegetables and glazed fruit.

"Grand Central Market is really coming of age these days," because of the food price situation Kazan said, looking over the panorama of busy stalls. He rises at 6 a.m., does his own buying at the wholesalers and stays behind the counter until 6 p.m. "There's a lot of excitement here for me and the people who come here," he said.

Burglary Charge Is Admitted By San Franciscan

A San Francisco man admitted Friday he burglarized a Belvedere house July 4 and his codefendent was bound over to Marin Superior Court to stand trial on the charge.

His codefendant, Raymond Stanley Glasser, 22, also of San Francisco was ordered by Smallman to appear Aug. 13 in Superior Court on a felony burglary charge after the judge ruled there is enough evidence to try him.

San Francisco's Record Sundae

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco, celebrating the centennial of its cable cars, served a world record 1,201-pound sundae Friday at a party in Union Square.

Mrs. Hans Klussmann, who led the fight eight years ago to preserve the little hill-climbing cars, stood on a step-ladder to put the final scoop on the 8-foot-high confection.

That scoop was the record-setter since the Guiness Book of Records lists the previous record holder as 1200 pounds.

Fuel Lack Said Real By Oilman

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Robert R. Dorsey, chairman of the board of Gulf Oil Corp., denied Friday that major oil companies are contriving the fuel shortage.

"There is absolutely no truth to the charges," Dorsey said during graduation ceremonies at the Graduate School of Business at the University of Pittsburgh. "Personal judgment and uninformed opinion have been used to present an entirely false picture."

Dorsey said the energy crisis is "very real," and has been the subject of repeated warnings from oil company spokesmen for many years.

"I fail to see the reasoning behind the false allegations... except that, possibly, some individuals are reluctant to accept the blame for failing to heed the warnings of impending energy shortages," he said.

In apparent reference to a Federal Trade Commission complaint, Dorsey said, "if the public knew how closely the oil industry is regulated and monitored, it would realize that the major oil companies could not have contrived the shortage."

He said some 60 federal agencies and bureaus monitor and regulate the petroleum industry. Dorsey also said "the complex structure of the industry is added proof that collusion would be impossible."

Gas Main Work To Start Monday

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. crews will begin replacing a mile of gas main in downtown San Rafael Monday, according to Donald L. Johnson, Marin County manager for the utility.

The work will modernize gas distribution lines originally installed between 1924 and 1940 on Main and Shaver streets and in the 13-block area bounded by Fourth Street, Fifth Avenue, Lootens Place and F Street. Street digging will be minimized by inserting new plastic pipe into existing old installations, Johnson said.

The work will be finished by early October.

Wrong Address Given Officers

One of those arrested Tuesday in a vice squad raid of an alleged bordello in San Francisco apparently gave police officers an incorrect San Rafael address.

The landlord of the 90 West Crescent Drive property told the Independent-Journal that Patricia Hebert has never lived there.

San Francisco police said today that it was possible that Miss Hebert had given them a bogus address.

10-Year Tam High Reunion Is Slated

A reunion of the Tamalpais High School class of 1963 will be held Sept. 22 at the Sausalito Women's Club and Mill Valley's Boyle Park, according to Douglas Chambers of San Rafael, chairman.

A baseball game is planned for noon to 4 p.m. at the park. A buffet dinner with music by Eggs over Easy, is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the women's club.

ALMANAC

The moon is approaching its first quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

Scottish comedian Sir Harry Lauder was born Aug. 4, 1870.

On this day in history:

In 1735, freedom of the press was established when John Zenger, publisher of a New York City newspaper, was acquitted of libel charges.

In 1914, the United States issued a proclamation of neutrality in World War I. The United States declared war on Germany on April 6, 1917, after the Germans initiated unrestricted submarine warfare.

In 1949, more than 6,000 persons were killed when an earthquake leveled 50 towns in Ecuador.

In 1972, Arthur Bremer was found guilty of shooting and critically wounding Alabama Gov. George Wallace and sentenced to 63 years for the crime.

A thought for the day: Scottish comic Sir Harry Lauder said: "Oh, it's nice to get up in the morning, but it's nicer to stay in bed."

Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.

Carbon monoxide, clean air.

Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, clean air.

San Jose, significant pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

THE ENERGY CRISIS

Gas Rationing Could Work Well

By S. FRED SINGER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service
(Last of 12 Articles)

A set of energy policies to safeguard national security has to consider all kinds of possibilities, ranging from a partial or even a complete embargo by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to situations where sabotage or third countries interrupt OPEC supplies.

A deliberate blockade could bring the United States close to warfare. For this reason it is only proper that a large portion of the costs of securing an energy supply and of making the nation invulnerable to interruptions be billed to the defense budget.

Rationing is a policy of last resort when there is a real shortage of supplies or an anticipated shortage. Wartime rationing has worked reasonably well. There is no reason why it should not work during peacetime, for short periods. In case of national emergencies, of if supplies are interrupted by accidents or natural disasters, rationing is a fair way of allocating whatever energy supplies are available.

A credible rationing scheme is an excellent bargaining chip in negotiating oil-import agreements. The emphasis has to be on the word "credible." It has to be perfectly clear that a supply interruption cannot cause unacceptable economic damage or collapse.

This requires that a rationing plan be prepared in great detail and that the preparations be fully displayed. In essence, one avoids blackmail by showing that one is immune to it; one invites blackmail always if it is evident that it will produce an effect.

Along with preparations for rationing, there must be adequate storage and reserves of fuel supplies. They have to be on all time scales, from extremely short, 30 to 60 days, to medium-term and long-term — more than one year.

Stockpiling not only gives us real national security, it also saves us money by improving our bargaining position with respect to negotiating long-term contracts for oil imports.

Short-term storage must be in the appropriate products rather than in crude oil, and storage must be dispersed geographically since transportation facilities may not be available or may be overtaxed. Such short-term storage is needed also in the event of natural disasters and is a sensible national investment and insurance policy.

This does not mean, however, that the federal government must take on the complete job; rather it should be done by public utilities, industries, farmers, and even households.

With respect to a possible interruption of oil imports, medium-term storage can be mostly in the form of crude oil, which should be accessible to refineries. This avoids the tremendous dislocations that come with longer supply interruptions. Such storage must be available on a time scale of a few months and may consist of wells operating at less than 100 per cent capacity.

In order not to penalize the owner of the well the government may wish to purchase the oil in the ground, and then sell it when it is lifted and recoup the purchase money.

Long-term storage can consist of crude oil in place — in oil fields that have been proved in but not fully developed. Such fields should generally be owned by the government/and could even be offshore or Arctic fields that have been defined and partly drilled up, analogous to the existing naval petroleum reserves.

Hand in hand with storage must go construction of deepwater ports, or preferably offshore terminals, to handle the oil supertankers of today and of tomorrow. There are none on the East Coast today. We also need adequate internal transportation for energy supplies, pipelines for oil and gas, and unit trains for barges for coal.

Above all we need a geographically dispersed refining capacity. At present refining capacity is strained, with refineries operating close to 100 per cent, and at considerable profit, too.

No new refineries have been constructed on the East Coast in the past five years. Hopefully, we have overcome the economic distortions of the oil import control program, which have unfortunately led to an export of refining capacity. Hopefully also, the vociferous environmental objections have taught us how to construct refineries that are essentially pollution-free.

Refinery construction also has been held back by general uncertainties on where the oil is going to come from and what kind of oil it might be. Few realize the huge investment that a refinery represents and the great risks involved in locating and in constructing it in a certain way.

With more certainty re-established with respect to oil imports and with respect to Alaskan oil, and with environmental concerns satisfied, there is no reason why refinery construction cannot proceed rapidly.

The complete program of establishing reserves, better transportation capabilities, and adequate refining capacity will require great capital outlays by government and by industry. But it will be worth it: More value added in the United States means more jobs and fewer dollar outflows; more national security and more protection against disasters, natural and manmade; and finally, less likelihood of shortages in either fuel oils or gasoline.

Setting up a detailed allocation program for national emergencies, a hierarchical stockpiling program, and an infrastructure represents a tremendous job of planning.

What is the optimum amount of stockpiling and of redundancy? How much insurance do we really need? The answer depends on the likely scenarios, the risks, and the economic consequences of interruptions. But the insurance, provided it is credible, also will buy us cheaper and more secure oil imports.

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Mill Valley man has received a 90-day suspended jail sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of living in a house of prostitution.

Charlie Banks, 32, of 333 Countryview Drive, was also placed on 18 months probation Wednesday by San Francisco Municipal Judge Thomas Dandurand.

A second charge, suspicion of being in a place where narcotics are dispensed, was dismissed by the district attorney's office.

Andrew J. Waite of Sausalito, and Patricia Hebert of San Rafael will both appear Aug. 14 before San Francisco Municipal Court Judge Eugene F. Lynch on charges stemming from the same raid.

Christian Churches Not Fond Of Strong Organization

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

"We are not the only Christians—but we are Christians only."

That is the historic slogan of a large family of American Protestants who were a full century ahead of the modern ecumenical movement in seeing denominationalism as a blight on Christianity.

Despite valiant efforts, however, they have not managed to avoid all the pitfalls of denominationalism — including its worst one, schism.

This Protestant movement, which emerged in the 19th Century under the leadership of two Protestant Irishmen, Thomas and Alexander Campbell, has been divided since 1906 into two main branches, which have little to do with each other.

ONE CONSISTS of about 5,000 local congregations with approximately 1,400,000 members. Although each congregation enjoys complete autonomy in managing its own affairs, there is a national organization with headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind. This body is known as "The International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ)". Its members call themselves "Christians" or "Disciples."

The other branch consists of some 6,000 local congregations, whose total membership is in excess of 1,000,000 and may approach 2,000,000. Precise statistics are hard to obtain because these congragations—which call themselves simply "Churches of Christ"—have no national organization and no headquarters.

PERHAPS THE nearest thing to a Church of Christ "center" is Abilene, Tex., where thousands of members gather for an annual lecture series at Abilene Christian College, and where the Highland Church of Christ sponsors a nationally-broadcast radio-tv program called "Herald of Truth."

Both Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ are found in all 50 states, but Disciples membership is strongest in the South and Midwest. Churches of Christ are most frequently found in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Years ago, members of both branches were called (by other Protestants) "Campbellites." The name was taken from a remarkable father-and-son team of frontier preachers. The father, Thomas Campbell, was a Presbyterian clergyman who immigrated to the United States and settled in Western Pennsylvania in 1807. He deplored denominational divisions among Christians, and appealed for spiritual fellowship of all Christians based on no formal creed save common adherence to the Bible.

HE PRACTICED what he preached, admitting all confessing Christians to communion in his church. In that era of strict and contentiously-minded denominational lines, this was enough to get him formally censured by the Presbyterians, whereupon he withdrew from that denomination and formed what he called "a Christian association." The one thing he never meant it to become was another Protestant denomination.

Thomas Campbell said denominational divisions within the Christian family are "uncharitable, anti-Christian, antiscriptural, anti-natural, and productive of confusion and every evil wok."

He believed churches should base their teachings and practices solely on the New Testament, accepting into membership any person who professed faith in Christ and requiring no creedal test other than acceptance of the New Testament as understood and interpreted by each believer for himself.

WITH CHARACTERISTIC American passion for capsulizing complex ideas in simple slogans, his followers soon summarized Campbell's teachings in two catch-lines:

"No creed but Christ."

"Where the scriptures speak, we speak; where the scriptures are silent, we are silent."

These slogans remain dear to "Christians" in both branches of the now-riven movement begun by Thomas Campbell.

Alexander Campbell, a gifted preacher who joined his father in Pennsylvania in 1810, added several other cardinal concepts: that each local church should be entirely independent, calling its own pastor, handling its own finances, making its own decisions; that the Lord's Supper should be served at every Sunday service; and that baptism should be by total immersion and restricted to believers of sufficient age to make a conscious decision for Christ. In practice, this means that Christians, like Baptists, reject infant baptism and normally baptize children around age 13.

BOTH OF the Campbells worked in close association with Barton Stone, a frontier evangelist of Cane Ridge, Ky., who shared their passionate belief that denominationalism was the curse of Christianity. Stone, who is revered by both branches as a patriarch of the movement, taught that salvation had little to do with formal church affiliation or even with giving assent to defined doctrines. "Deeds," he often said, "are more important than creeds." This view also has a decidedly contemporary ring.

Since both groups deny being denominations, the Disciples of Christ and the Churches of Christ do not officially acknowledge, to this day, that a schism occurred between them. The historic fact which they cannot blink is that their congregations have been listed and their members tabulated separately in every official or unofficial census of religous bodies since 1906.

THERE ARE at least four distinctive differences between the two groups.

First, the Churches of Christ tend to be considerably more fundamentalist, more literal in their reading of the Bible, than the Disciples.

Second, Churches of Christ still forbid instrumental music (because scripture doesn't mention it as part of early Christian worship) while Disciples congregations have organs or pianos.

Third Churches of Christ carry their fear of "hierarchicalism" to the point of refusing to form any kind of national organization, even a missionary society. (Each congregation supports its own foreign missionary.) The Disciples, after seven years of agonizing reappraisal, adopted in 1968 a new structure under which its local congregations are welded into a national body that must be called a denomination, out of fidelity to common sense, however little the term may appeal to them. It has a national headquarters, and national officers, boards and societies; a General Assembly that meets annualy; and a policy-making General Board.

THE FOURTH difference is that the Churches of Christ, because of their wariness of all forms of ecclesiastical organization, have kept aloof from the contemporary ecumenical movement. But the Disciples, translating the Campbells' vision of Christian unity into contemporary terms, have been extremely active in the National Council of Churches and in the Consultation on Church Union.

New Catholic Leader Sees Need For Priority Changes

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the new general secretary of the United States Catholic Conference (USCC) has his way, one of the top priorities of the organized Roman Catholic church in the United States will be to mobilize on the issues of aid, trade and population policy.

Bishop James S. Rausch, in one of his first major statements since assuming the post with the administrative arm of the American Catholic heirarchy, singled out the issue of international economic development as of particular urgency.

"The plight of the developing countries is in danger of becoming a forgotten factor of international affairs," he said.

While Catholic teaching has given the issue of underdeveloped countries high priority, the problem is assigned "low priority...on the American agenda of world order issues," he said.

"To be the American church, standing in the face of the present inequities of international economics — often brought about by the policies of our nation —and bound in conscience by Catholic teaching of the rights of every man and woman to the conditions for decent human development, is to face an awesome challenge."

He added: "The function of informing, motivating and mobilizing a community of people, directing it toward a significant human problem and evoking from it a selfsacrificial response is preeminently a task of the church."

The tortuous path of recent foreign aid bills through Congress —and growing sentiment for trade restictions —indicates that Rausch has given the church just that —an awesome challenge.

Rausch drew on analyses by World Bank President Robert S. McNamara to show that the gap between developed and undeveloping nations is growing wider.

According to McNamara, there has been a failure on the part of the developed countries to provide development assistance and to make structural reforms in trade relationships.

This, Rausch said, "constitutes the primary moral issue for those of us in the developed world." Development assistance —foreign aid —and trade relationships are the primary means available for lessening the gap between rich and poor, he said.

Rausch cited lack of leadership for the development of an informed and effective constituency to move on the issue.

"Mr. McNamara was thinking of political leadership, about which he was not optimistic," Rausch said. But the bishop said the church could provide a means of leadership which McNamara did not consider.

In Rausch's view, the role of the church is not to provide technical expertise or massive financial assistance to the developing countries but rather "to shape a community with a conscience."

"Such a community, properly informed by the teaching church, motivated by the preaching and worshipping church, and mobilized as members of the servant church, could provide the critical margin of difference in the American body politic —the margin between forgetting the developing nations by insulating our consciences and isolating our affluence, or by following the drastically different course of fostering their development by a program of extensive cooperation on aid, trade and technical assistance," Rausch said.

One of the difficulties the church will face in forming that constituency is the overlapping of Rausch's own constituency — the Roman Catholic laity —to a considerable extent with the labor constituency.

In recent years, it has been the labor constituency that under the threat of losing jobs, has been one of the prime voices arguing for greater trade restrictions.

Another possibly more touchy issue for both the Catholic constituency and the development establishment, is Rausch's insistence that Catholics assert a voice in articulating "a just global population policy."

Noting that the Catholic community "has not been conspicuously involved" in the question, Rausch said: "Within the ambit of the best theological reflection our tradition can provide, Catholics should be visible, audible and intelligent participants in the forthcoming U.N. Population Year."

At a time when American consciousness of developing countries is on the wane, Rausch, citing church teaching, claimed as one of the church's chief priorities, that: "...in a very real sense, it is no less important for the church to be doing the work of social justice every day than it is for us to provide for the celebration of the Eucharist or to preach the Gospel."

Collegians To Sing At Nazarene Church

Five collegians called "Love Revealed," from Point Loma College in San Diego, will present a program of sacred music at the Church of the Nazarene, 1509 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in San Anselmo California Thursday, Aug. 9, at 7:30 p.m.

The group was organized in the spring of 1973 for travel during the summer. The name was selected because of their desire that Christ's love will be revealed through their songs and testimonies.

Richard Fauss is a sophomore from Ceres, Calif., and is speaker and soloist for the group. He is a speech major and has lettered in basketball and baseball. He is a member of the Modesto First Church of the Nazarene.

Soprano Cynthia Mokhtarian is a junior from San Mateo. She is a sociology major and has a minor in music. She is a member of the College Treble Choir and "The Belles," and a member of Pasadena Central Church of the Nazarene.

Soprano and Alto Janine Jones is a junior from Visalia, Calif. She is a nursing major and belongs to the Student Nurses Association of California. She is a member of the Treble Choir, "The Belles" and Chamber Singers. She is a member of the Ivanhoe Church of the Nazarene.

Second Soprano Debbie Latter is a sophomore from Walnut Creek. She is a music major and is a member of the Treble Choir and "The Belles". She plays both piano and guitar. She is a member of the Walnut Creek Hillside Covenant Church.

Pianist for the group is Melva Pagan, a junior from Pasadena. She is a piano major and holds a president's and piano scholarship. A member of the Treble choir, and "The Belles," she is a member of the Glendora First Church of the Nazarene.

A wide repertoire of hymns, spirituals, gospel songs, and contemporary sacred music will be sung by the group. Some of their most popular numbers include "I've Got Confidence," "I'm Gonna Keep On Singin' ", "Amazing Grace" and "I Don't Know Why Jesus Loves Me."

Faith In God Is Best Help For Ex-Prisoners

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Faith can still work wonders, even in getting a job.

Once the head of a school for men released from jail, Rev. Small says:

"I took the wrong approach. I tried to teach them a trade, but its useless to train a man for a job when he's hooked on alcohol or dope. As soon as he's free, he'll go back to stealing to maintain his habit."

Now Rev. Small relies mostly on faith itself. He concentrates on helping "my prisoners" to find God.

The House of Mercy operated by Rev. Small now helps the needy and the down-and-out, as well as newly released prisoners, with free clothes and food. But that's only part of it.

"Faith means hope," he says, "and more than anything, these men need hope. That's what I try to give them."

Sign Language Sermons Given By Young Girl

She preaches sermons on Sunday mornings, teaches a speech class Sunday nights, sings in the choir and twirls a baton as a majorette in parades.

Her speciality is teaching the sign language for the deaf. Every Sunday morning she uses her unusual knowledge to interpret the sermons for the deaf members of the congregation.

"I learned the sign langugage as a hobby six years ago," Carol explains. "I love to teach it to others."

In interpreting the sermons, Carol says she does a little acting to get across.

"When the minister preaches fire and brimstone," she says, "I put a little speed and emphasis into my sign talk." (Los Angeles Times Syndicate)

Answers To Violence Are Planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Television, which increasingly has the finger pointed at it as an influence in creating violent behavior among children, will have a chance to present some mini-alternatives early next year.

Broadcast agencies from four denominations are cooperating in producing three television spot announcements aimed at helping children see and use methods other than violence in resolving conflicts.

"The models a child finds in a majority of his TV experiences depict physically violent behavior as a workable and socially acceptable method of dealing with conflict," according to Ben T. Logan, coordinator of the project.

"We believe TV can also present positive models of dealing with conflict," he added.

Cooperating in the creation, production, research and distribution of the 30-second "counter-commercials," are the broadcast agencies of the Episcopal Church, the United Methodist Church, the Christian Church, Disciples of Christ and the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Logan said the spot announcements will show everyday conflict situations which a child could encounter and offer an alternative to violence with a model, drawn from the Christian faith, as a way to settle the problem.

"The hope is that as children view the messages they will imitate the model and thus put Christian principles to practical use in dealing with conflict," Logan said.

While based on Christian principles, Logan said the spots will not contain "overt Christian content." Such content, he added, makes children's spots very difficult to market.

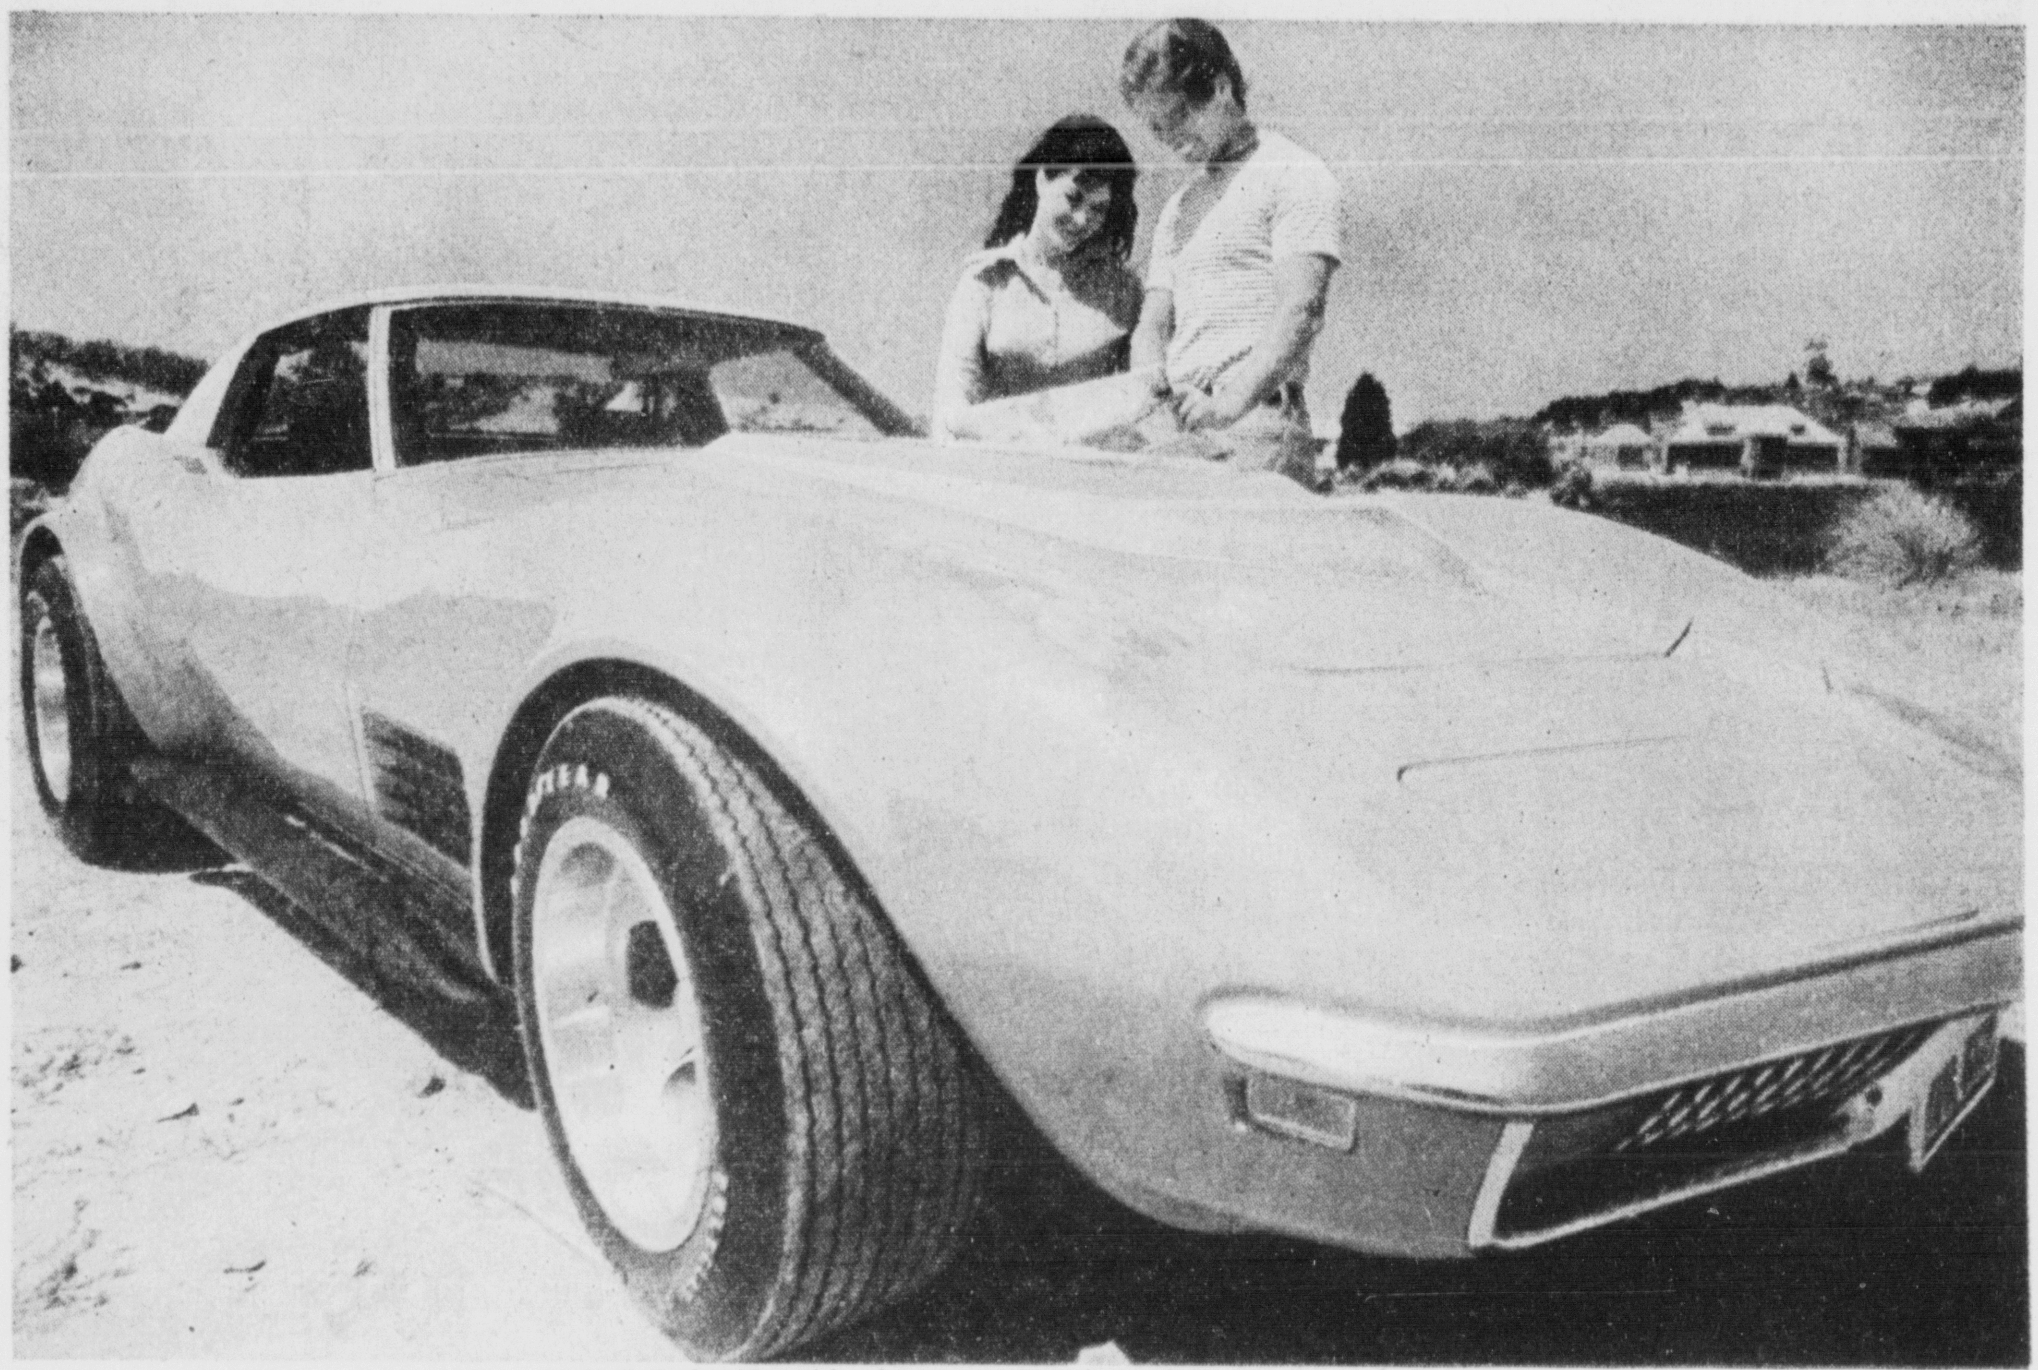
Corvette Clubs On The Go In Marin



MARIN'S TWO ACTIVE clubs of Corvette owners, the North Bay Corvette Assn. and the Redwood Corvettes Unlimited, participate in a busy schedule of social, car show and racing events, with tomorrow's eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show at Mill Valley, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., one of the highlights. Included in a record showing of Corvettes will be the burnt orange car of Jim and Susie Simontacchi, "updated from a 1969 wreck to look like a 1972 model," including 25 coats of paint plus a layer of crushed glass. Simontacchi, president of Redwood Corvettes Unlimited, spent six months on the restoration. (Independent-Journal photo by Alfred M. Arn)

First and foremost with Robin Andersen are her roles as wife (Mrs. Neil Andersen) and mother.

And she is totally feminine in appearance — blonde, tanned and a tall five feet 11 inches, moving and walking with the grace of the model that she was in her days as a San Rafael High School student.

But the most ardent advocate of Women's Liberation would find good reason to take pride in her driving. She handles the family's 1964 gray fastback Corvette like a man — and sometimes better.

In what used to be the all-male sport of drag racing, Robin aced out her male competitors in 1969 to win the San Francisco Open Championship at Sears Point. She became the only woman to do so, and still is. Scared to death of motorcycles, Robin is blissfully happy racing on a quarter-mile strip revved up to 105 miles per hour and once did 114 miles an hour. Her fastest clocking was 12.6 seconds.

THE CHAMPION also excels in auto crossing.

About as unassuming as a person can be and "not really competitive," claiming she races for the fun of the sport, Robin is, nevertheless, regarded by other women drivers as a formidable opponent. Known from California west to the Mississippi, the boundaries of the Western States Corvette Council, Robin took first place in the 1972 competition's women's prepared class.

This year's winner in the Corvettes women's prepared class autocross in the Northern California Sportscar Council, Robin is also in first place for ongoing autocrosses with the Northern California Sportscar Club Council.

IN FACT, ROBIN'S point lead is so great that she can afford to miss a few events. Which, she claims in a soft, high octave, little girl voice, may be a good thing.

"Maybe some more girls will race. Anyway, I couldn't drive last month because the accelerator stuck and I hit a cyclone fence. I wasn't scared, just mad. It looked awful because Corvettes crumble upon impact and don't bounce like other cars. But it really makes them much safer."

She recalls one frightening incident when the car hit oil on a strip and rolled over. "I was worried about fire, but that's silly. It just can't happen because of the fuel injection system. Sirens were wailing and people were all over the place trying to help me. I climbed out fast yelling, 'I'm fine, I'm fine, but my jade ring is broken.' I didn't leave until we found every piece."

MORE ACCOMPLISHED with a wrench than with knitting needles, Robin can pull the head, drop leaders, change spark plugs, jumper the battery and adjust the clutch.

"Now, when worse comes to worse, I'm sure I can figure some way out on my own. I wanted to learn about the repairs and help Neil since I was doing so much racing."

Leaning toward more domestic interests, Robin sews "easy things," gardens, works for Coleman School Parent-Teacher Assn., where Rebecca, age 6, is a student, and anticipates getting involved again in the San Rafael Co-operative Nursery when Sarah, aged 3, starts in the fall.

ROBIN AND NEIL Andersen have been "in-to" Corvettes for more than 10 years. They met through mutual friends interested in racing.

"I didn't know anything about it then but after I met Neil it was either fight him or join him. I joined. You see, I have a nifty husband and if his thing was jumping off the Golden Gate Bridge I'd be doing it, too. But instead it's cars: Corvettes, drag races, autocrosses, rallies, concourses. He just loves it, and so do I."

To prove the expertise of the team, there is a wall-to-wall display of 450 trophies of which Mrs. Andersen has won about half.

Robin's most precious award is the Sears Point trophy "because I won it all by myself. Neil didn't help me at all. I keep it close to the door so if this old house ever burns I can grab it fast, take my kids and run."

A CHANCE TO add to their collection comes up tomorrow for the Andersens at the eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show, Strawberry, Mill Valley, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The admission price of $1 will benefit the Marin County Chapter Kidney Foundation of Northern California. Children under 12 are admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

Co-sponsored by the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, and the Antique Car Club of America, the show expects more than 140 entries. James Webb, shopping center manager, is show director. Gene Babow will be master of ceremonies.

The show's nine classes of stock autos (that is, cars not customized or hot-rodded) will include Horseless Carriage 1900-22; Antique 1923-34; Vintage 1935-48; Classic 1925-48; Post-War Sedan 1949-63; Super Sport and Sport 1930-72; and two Porsche classes.

Marin Counts Its Serious Bridge Players In The Thousands, And Numbers Grow

By WAT TAKESHITA

The card game of bridge has suffered many a black eye it does not really deserve.

The classic story about marriages being wrecked at the bridge table, and the standard joke about the player who was shot dead because he trumped his partner's ace are exaggerations that reflect unfairly on a popular social activity that has probably accomplished far more good than harm.

Admittedly, there are a few rude and arrogant bridge players, especially in the highly competitive duplicate bridge circles, but for every one of these are a hundred friendly people who enjoy an inexpensive (about $1.50 fee for an afternoon or evening of entertainment and socializing) pastime that keeps the mind alert and provides social companionship and camaraderie that might not be available otherwise for the retired, the lonely or the non-joiner.

NEW PEOPLE moving into Marin find in the bridge clubs a built-in social center where young and old mingle in friendly competition, drawn together by a common interest. Chance aquaintances at bridge clubs lead to lasting friendships and sometimes to marriage.

Serious bridge players in Marin number in the thousands, and those who occasionally dabble in afternoon or evening card parties or follow the bridge columns in the Independent-Journal would raise the figure into the tens of thousands. This large group of "party" bridge players are fairly well known.

The group that needs an introduction and perhaps an explanation in their behalf are the duplicate bridge players, who have earned the reputation in some quarters of being rude and conceited grouches, who think bridge is a matter of life and death.

MUCH OF THIS reputation is undeserved; they are just as human as "fun" players — except that the rules of duplicate bridge make the game much more competitive.

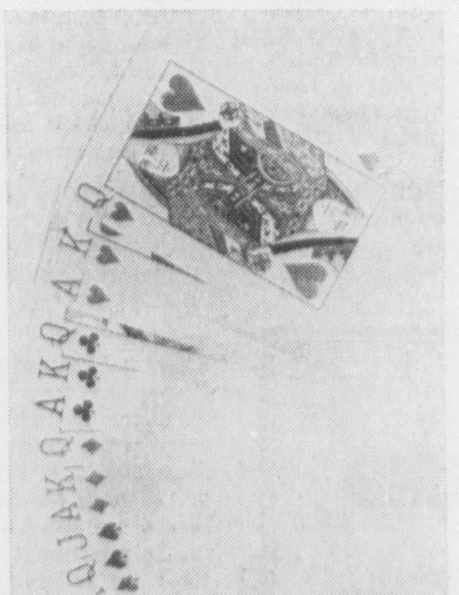
Here's the difference between "party" bridge and "duplicate" bridge: In party bridge, a group of four will sit at one table (other foursomes at other tables) and take turns dealing out cards — 13 cards to each player. Normally, if you happen to get good cards all evening, you'll end up the winner, even against a Goren or a Sheinwold.

At a duplicate bridge club, the element of luck is largely eliminated. Each foursome deals out the first deck of cards and plays the hand, but the cards are never reshuffled thereafter. The four hands (each with 13 cards) are placed in a metal holder with four slots. The metal holder, called a "board," is then passed to the next table of players so that each table plays the same hands that were played at each of the other tables.

AFTER ALL COUPLES have played all the boards, the results are compared. Those who make the most out of the same hands get the best scores. In other words, you can sit all night without a single face card and still emerge the winner because each of the other couples sitting in the same direction will have played the same hands.

Like any game with intense rivalry, emotions run high and tempers may flare, but these instances are exceptions, particularly within Marin's three duplicate bridge clubs, which are favorably known throughout the Bay Area for their friendly atmosphere.

Every club in Marin has novice and junior games where those inexperienced in duplicate bridge will get instructions, pleasant partners, a warm welcome, and free refreshments.



MARIN'S THREE bridge centers are:

CROSSLEY BRIDGE CENTER

Marin's first bridge club was launched in 1952 by Dr. C.F. (Cap) Crossley and Lura Crossley at the old Jewish Center on Mission Avenue in San Rafael. They were the only two members of the American Contract Bridge League at the time.

The club drew only about three tables once a week. As the club expanded, it moved to larger quarters at 714 C Street in 1967 where it operated for six years. Last February, the Crossley Bridge Center moved to Greenbrae in the spacious Greenbrae Rod and Gun Clubhouse, with kitchen facilities and beer and wine in addition to coffee and snacks.

Crossley Bridge Center now has 10 games weekly, drawing about 3,000 players each week.

Mrs. Crossley now operates the club with the help of sons Bill, David and Bob, all life masters, and daughter Janet. Also on her staff is Les West, who has 3,200 master points and is one of the leading players in the country.

West Coast representatives of Travel With Goren, Mrs. Crossley and her sons conduct bridge cruises throughout the world.

The Crossley brothers were members of a team that won the knockout team-of-four event in the regional tournament held in Medford, Ore., in May. They have been qualifying for years in the Blue Ribbon Pairs event of the fall national tournaments, where almost every team is nationally ranked.

Crossley Bridge Center has the following games:

Mondays — 10:30 a.m., open game for all players. (Crossley Center also spon-

PROFILE OF A MARINITE

"Swimming teaches you that when you think you're trying hard to do something, you're really only touching the surface of what your body can do," says Marin's Olympic star Rick DeMont, who has never regretted the time and the effort he has devoted to the sport, and who now looks forward to a college career.

'I'm Naturally Competitive,' Says Swimming Champion Rick DeMont. 'I Don't Want To Lose At Anything.'

By PAUL CANE

A recreation that started out as just "something to do" has turned into a life style for Olympic swim champ Rick DeMont of Terra Linda, and the 17-year-old college freshman doesn't think he's missed out on anything at all.

"I just do my thing — swim," DeMont says.

And swim he does: up to five hours per day, six days a week. But not even considering the many awards he has received — the wall of his bedroom is lined with plaques and certificates, including a personal letter from President Richard M. Nixon — DeMont says that swimming has given him something special that will stay with him for the rest of his life.

"Swimming teaches you that when you think you're trying hard to do something, you're really only touching the surface of what your body can really do," DeMont philosophized. Afflicted with many allergies, and later asthma, since early childhood, DeMont's rise to prominence, and then fame, in the sports world is a testimonial to his determination to succeed in what now consumes his days.

THE OLDEST OF four children of Dr. Willard and Betty DeMont, Rick lived his first six years in Mill Valley. The family moved to their current home in 1963, seeking a more complimentary environment for Rick's many ailments.

A nature lover, DeMont would spend much of his time wandering in the woods in the Mill Valley area, a hobby not agreeable to the many allergies he suffered from at that time.

"I'd go off into the woods and come back with welts all over my body, and puffy skin around my eyes," he recalled. "But my mom didn't baby me — she didn't say, 'You can't do this or that.' "

JUST AFTER moving to his present 138 Circle Road residence, DeMont and his younger brother, Ken, joined the Ann Curtis swim team in Terra Linda, and it was while representing this club that Rick gained his first national recognition — at the ripe old age of 10.

Although only training "about an hour a day" DeMont set a National Amateur Athletic Union record for the 10-and-under age group 200-yard freestyle: 2:09.5. (Rick's time for the event now is nearly 30 seconds faster than the mark he set at age 10.)

With a national age group record to his credit, was he starting to think "Olympics?"

ALTHOUGH AT the top of others his age then, Rick says, "I mostly was just fooling around. It was just fun time, and I really wasn't working out that much."

A rapid series of local swim club mergers had DeMont training under a series of coaches — from former Olympic gold medalist Ann Curtis Cuneo to Art Octavio and Galen Hopkins of the Marin Aquatic Club. (Rick's siblings, 15-year-old Ken, Diane, 12, and 8-year-old Jeanine are also swimmers for the Marin A.C.)

After a three-year period of relative aquatic dormancy — "I didn't really get serious about it until I had Don" — DeMont's attitude and performances underwent tremendous changes in the beginning of 1971. Now Rick can trace the start of his surge to a particular incident.

HE HAD BEEN selected to participate as a relay member on the "North" squad in the annual Pacific Association vs. Southern Pacific Association dual age group meet.

"I didn't want to blow it," he remembers, "so I came to every practice (the Marin A.C. was then working out 3.5 hours per day) for about three weeks." When the time for the meet came, he said, "The coach (former DeAnza Swim Club coach Lash Turville) didn't let me swim the relay." That angered DeMont so much that he decided, "From now on I'm going to do my best all the time."

The way to greatness, he affirms, is nothing but hard work. "There's no way you can do it without working, especially in distance events," he said.

HIS DEDICATION paid off that spring, because although he didn't qualify for the National AAU Championships, he startled local swimming fans by being the first Marin County swimmer to break four minutes in the 400-yard freestyle, traveling the route in 3:51.

He did attend the Nationals, though, as a spectator. "That was the neatest thing I ever saw, it was so exciting, watching guys like (Mark) Spitz, (Gary) Hall, and (John) Kinsella for the first time."

Although it was, as he put it, "a little mind-blowing," he said the experience inspired him to work even harder for higher levels of success.

HE COMPETED in his first national championship that summer in Huston, Tex., and despite suffering an asthma attack the night before his 400-meter freestyle, he improved his best times in both the 400 and 1,500-free races, placing 14th in the 1,500.

Now was he thinking "Olympics?" No way. "It seemed so far away, Rick recalled. "I didn't consider myself in that class."

The winter of 1972 saw a little reorganization of his personal priorities. The summer before he had taken time out to go on a Canadian vacation, but this year other interests were put to the side. Hobbies like fishing, backpacking, bicycling, nature study, ping-pong and chess were relegated to backseat importance. "You have to give yourself to swimming," DeMont said.

BUT DESPITE that dedication, the Munich Olympics still did not seem a possibility, he said.

Good finishes in the early spring led to a third place at the short course National AAUs in Dallas. Then, all of a sudden, Olympic-mania struck. "I was freaked out, and got all nervous," he reports. "It was like a piano dropping on your head."

All he could do to escape the mounting pressure was to train harder, harder, harder. Top performances in early summer meets labeled him a favorite to land an Olympic berth in the 1,500, and when the Olympic Trials in Chicago came along, Swartz also sent Rick to the blocks in the 400, an event that was considered by some to be too short for the distance ace to do well in. DeMont justified his coach's gamble by grabbing second in the U.S. Trials behind Tom McBreen of the Golden Gate Aquatic Club.

FROM THEN ON at the Trials it was almost a breeze. Two days later, he won the 1,500-meter free in a world record 15:52 time. On to Munich.

The biggest thrill of his life came just four weeks later in the 20th Olympiad, when he outdueled Australia's Brad Cooper to score a surprise victory in the 400-meter freestyle in 4:00.2. His joy ("My whole body just tingled for two hours after that. I think I wore my medal to bed with me that night") turned to sorrow and shock a few days later, when the International Olympic Committee ruled that an ingredient in Rick's asthma medication, ephedrine, was illegal.

He was notified of the decision to disqualify him from the upcoming 1,500 finals just minutes before he was to leave the locker room for the race.

"IT DROPPED ME from the highest high to the lowest low," he said. He was more bothered that he was not allowed to swim the 1,500 than he was that his 400 title was to be taken away, because "I knew I won the 400, and that's what counts."

Sickness hurt DeMont's short course season in this post-Olympic year, as he only took fifth in the 1,650-yard free in the April Nationals. But he gave every indication that he was back on the beam in the end of June, capturing the Santa Clara Swim Invitational 1,500 crown in a speedy 16:08.8 clocking, a time that promises a better summer this year than in 1972.

What goals does he have for the future?

"I'M HOPING to make the World Games (in Belgrade, Yugoslavia) this September," he said. To do so, he would need a top-two placing first at the long course Nationals in Louisville, Ky.

To again bring up the eternal question, what about the Olympics in 1976?

"It's too far away to look," Rick says. The Terra Linda High School grad said he plans to relax a little next summer following his first year at the University of Washington.

"You can't go full speed for four years or you'll never make it," he said.

ALTHOUGH CAUTIOUS about burning himself out over the next few years to the point where he's sick of swimming, DeMont says he hasn't missed anything in life through his dedication to the sport. On the contrary, he feels he has gained a great deal in return for the long hours he's spent in the water.

Obviously, his labors have been financially useful since he has earned a four-year scholarship. "Some guys work all summer to pay for their college education. I do it in the pool," he said.

But Rick certainly isn't swimming just for the financial aid. If he gets tired of the sport, "I'll give up the scholarship and quit."

HE DEBUNKED triple-gold medalist Shane Gould's reasons for retirement. She has claimed that she just was not leading a normal life in the rigorous conditioning routine.

DeMont said, "I have time to do whatever I want." He noted that few students his age had done as much travleing as he had, and emphasized that he had many friends out of the pool as well as in it.

Swimming, he continued, has taught him to organize his time to get everything done, a habit that will stay with him long after he hangs up the suit.

But mostly, DeMont says, swimming has taught him that a person can accomplish far more than he believes possible, in any endeavor.

A GOOD STUDENT in high school, Rick is looking forward to his upcoming college career, both in the water under coach Earl Ellis, and out of it. When he traveled up to look at the school, he said he fell in love with the setting and people there.

DeMont commented, "The area is like utopia" for an outdoorsman such as he.

Also entering Washington as freshmen are Olympic medalists Robin Backhaus and Doug Northway, both of the Marin Aquatic Club. Rick predicts Washington will challenge for an NCAA championship in two years.

DeMont admits he's "naturally competitive."

"I don't want to lose at anything," he affirmed.

An attitude like that should carry him far — in any field.

"There's no way you can do it without working, especially in the distance events," says Rick DeMont of achievement generally, and of the challenging sport of swimming specifically.

UPON THE INSTRUMENT he chose at age 9, the cello, Jed Barahal, now 18, performs with a brilliance that belies his youth. He will next be heard Saturday, Aug. 11, at 8 p.m., in an Inverness Music Festival performance at St. Columba's Church, Inverness. But Jed is a young man of many interests and a member of a versatile family. At right, with his mother, Anabel, his sister Rachel, 17, and his father, Allan, he enjoys a game of multi-lingual scrabble in their Terra Linda residence. They share a fascination for languages sharpened by an extended stay in Europe in 1971.

Virtuoso cellist Jed Barahal carries himself with a serene poise and self-confidence bespeaking a maturity and depth of sensitivity beyond his 18 years.

Having just graduated as a top honors student in his class at San Rafael High School, Jed looks back upon an impressive early career of concerts and solo recitals, and upon years of training under the tutelage of several world renown instructors.

Looking slightly ahead, he is devoting practice time to his recital next week with the Inverness Music Festival, to be directed by one of Jed's most enthusiastic admirers, Maestro Sandor Salgo.

JED STARTED WITH the piano at the age of 6, but in three years he transferred his interest to the cello under the auspices of the Dixie Schools String Music Program. Concurrently, he drew much encouragement and support from the rich cultural home environmental provided by his talented parents Allan and Anabel Barahal, both teachers and string musicians themselves.

"Richard Anastasio is the most important person in my musical development," emphasizes Jed. "We are very close in musical concepts. We have a one-to-one student-teacher relationship.

"I also studied with Hugo Rinaldi in the Marin Youth Orchestra for four years. He is a great person and his attention and help was vital."

IN 1971 THE BARAHALS toured Europe, and Jed, by virtue of his outstanding sophomore year scholarship at San Rafael High School, took a year long leave of absence and spent a summer in the master classes of Paul Tortelier in Nice and Pierre Fournier in Zurich,. In the fall he attended the Geneva Conservatory of Music.

While Jed was studying Mrs. Barahal and Jed's siter, Rachel, 17, made a tour of medieval English churches and cathedrals where they set to the intriguing art of "brass rubbings," whereby impressions of 14th and 15th Century brass engravings were transferred to large sheets of paper rubbed with colored wax sticks. Many of these striking replicas of Middle Ages folk history have been suitably framed and now grace the walls of the Barahal home in Terra Linda.

The year in Europe was worth a lot in experience to Jed: "The masters are not teachers but coaches. They show you how to play, and hopefully you learn from that. I was upset about it, I expected them to be teachers. I did get personal attention from Tortelier, but essentially it was a one-way relationship.

"MAINLY THE master classes were an opportunity to relate and compare with other young students from around the world. I found teacher relationships secondary to relationships with other students."

"I spent six months at the conservatory in Geneva. Contrary to their reputation the level of musicianship is much lower there than in American schools. The teaching is old-fashioned and backward there . . . the European schools don't compare . . . the schools here are much better. European schools over-emphasize technique with too little inter-relation with the feeling of the music, the performance.

"Perhaps the distance of the European schools from the United States explains the undue romance and reputation."

NOTWITHSTANDING his experiences in Europe, Jed has been awarded several grants and scholarships for outstanding musicianship, and this fall begins his study of music theory at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

"I don't want my life to become restricted by music, I still have a lot of growing and learning to do. Music is an emotion derived from life's experiences. Music involves living and experiencing.

"You don't need theory to feel music; its not basic but secondary. My greatest difficulties are maintaining my concentration on the music and trying not to become overly involved in technical details . . . they become a trap.

"THE AUDIENCE provides stimulation — it also makes you nervous — and I do better in concerts than in practice. Playing for the audience keeps me from becoming overly involved in the technical aspect.

"European audiences clap madly at the end of a performance, clap in unison for an encore, American audiences are more critical and have more taste.

"Europeans start learning their instruments much later than American students and it affects the quality of musicianship. It is important to start early and to grow up with music."

LOCALLY, JED has been involved in the performing youth groups, the San Rafael High Orchestra and the Marin Youth Symphony with which he gave his first solo recital at the age of 13. This year he has appeared as guest soloist with the Fremont-Newark Orchestra and as solist with the Marin Symphony Orchestra to rave reviews under the direction of Salgo.

Among his other credits he was first cellist, on scholarhip, with the World Youth Symphony at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich., with the All California Youth Orchestra in Santa Barbara, the Dominican Chamber Orchestra, the Orchestra Piccola, and the Boston University Young Artists Program at Tanglewood.

He has also participated in music camps at Sun Valley, Idaho, and Flagstaff, Ariz.

HIS MANY scholarships include the 1971 Marin Symphony Memorial Scholarship and the Maurice Wilk Memorial Scholarship from Dominican College in 1970.

Jed had planned to spend his summer in Santa Barbara at the Music Academy of the West directed by Maurice Abravanel, but found the relationship with his instructor unworkable and thereupon returned to Marin to devote his time to rehearsing for the Inverness Music Festival.

It was in fact Sandor Salgo's decision to include the gifted young cellist in this year's West Marin festival program. "I enjoyed performing with Maestro Salgo, although we've had only one performance together."

SALGO'S INTEREST in Jed is particularly noteworthy, inasmuch as the maestro has heavily emphasized his favorite composer, Mozart, in the program with few exceptions. And as it happened Mozart did not write for the cello.

"I guess it was because Mozart's father didn't like the cello . . . and the viola da gamba was going out of style," mused Jed.

Upon review of the cello recital, however, Salgo did delete a contemporary work by Britten.

Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms are Jed's "most meaningful composers, but he also favors the modern composers Prokofiev, Shostakovich and Britten. His recital next weekend at Inverness includes works of Luigi Boccherini, J. S. Bach and J. Haydn.

ANOTHER POWERFUL insight into Jed is his range of interests and his supportive family life. At one time he was considering architecture as a pursuit and his interests include drafting, calligraphy and a particular fascination for languages developed in the course of his European tour. (In fact, the entire family played multilingual scrabble games throughout Europe.)

Mrs. Barahal herself plays the violin and teaches string instruments and orchestra in the Dixie School District grades four through eight. She and daughter Rachel enjoy ceramics and pottery-making, and an electric kiln adjacent to the front entrance bears silent testament to this.

Barahal, formerly a longshoreman, also plays the cello, but, notes Jed, they stopped playing together some time ago "when I mentioned that he was playing out-of-tune."

BARAHAL TEACHES philosophy and humanities at the San Rafael High School alternative school Nexus. He is at the moment hiking in the Swiss Alps and may not return in time to hear Jed's recital next week.

Just behind the upright piano a full-size ping pong table sits incongrously between the living room and a seven-foot framed brass rubbing on the far wall. Outside, badminton and basketball courts, and a potter's wheel.

Next Saturday Aug. 11 at 8 p.m., Jed will give his recital with the piano accompaniment of William Grant in the beautiful St. Columba's Church in Inverness. Reservations for the Jed Barahal recital and the other performances are available at Box 2, Inverness, 94937.

Road & Track called the 450SL "one of the ten best cars in the world."

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience — maybe for the first time in your life — what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

The Park at Old Browns is a bird store that sells plants. And fish and minerals and shells.

Sometimes you can hear our store before you see it. Our birds do that advertising for us. One even does a dance with his song. And in return, we specialize in keeping birds healthy. We even give our free Park Bird Survival Manual with every bird, bird accessory or birdcage that we sell. And we sell a lot of birdcages to people who keep plants in them. But that's okay. We're not just a bird store. We're also a plant store. Fish store. Mineral store. Shell store. And we're the only store that sells custom living systems. You'll find us in a redwood building with 52 stained glass windows in front, a domed skylight above, and a brook below. Take 101 to the Stinson Beach/Mill Valley exit, follow the signs to Mill Valley, and bring a little nature home with you.

Open 10 to 8; closed Tuesday. Fish. Plants. Birds. Minerals. Shells.

MARIN LIVING

The Name Of Game Is Bridge

HERE IS BRIDGE AS it should be played, in a relaxed atmosphere for those who want a pleasant diversion from daily routine, and with expert instructors to help enthusiasts with the finer points of duplicate bridge. The Crossley Bridge Center at the Greenbrae Rod and Gun Clubhouse is operated by Lura Crossley and her three sons, all life masters and well-known nationwide. Coffee and refreshment stand is in background. Note how each player places his cards in neat piles in front of him so that the same hands can be passed on to the next table unshuffled.

HOUSEWIVES FIND IT relaxing to break up the day's work with an afternoon of bridge at San Rafael Bridge Studio. Maxine Cantrell (standing), director of the studio on West End Avenue, makes a ruling on proper procedure at one of the tables. Whenever a playermakes a play or bids out of turn, the director is promptly called for a ruling on how to proceed. This large room and two others in the back, plus refreshment facilities, provide pleasant quarters for 13 duplicate games and two rubber bridge games each week.

BRIDGE EXPERT Bill Crossley gives pointers on how and when to finesse, execute squeeze plays, or just bang down the cards and pray for a drop of the key cards. The "students," all seasoned players, are (clockwise) Janet Crossley, Caye Elliott, Lorraine Hopkins, Frankie Berryman, and Virginia Goodall, and the scene is the Crossley Bridge Center.

YOUR BRIDGE GAME may turn sour on occasion, but the tasty refreshments cooked up by Maxine Cantrell at her San Rafael Bridge Studio is enough to put the smile back on the faces of her many patrons. The individually decorated cups lined on the shelves have names of customers who have won four first places in club competition during a two-month period.

SAN RAFAEL BRIDGE STUDIO

What to most people is a hobby and a social game has turned out to be a bread-and-butter enterprise for Maxine Cantrell and Gerry T. Lent. The San Rafael Bridge Studio at 215 West End Avenue operates about 18 hours a day, six and one-half days a week, but it started out nine years ago as a four-hour class once a week for 10 persons. The club now averages 1,200 to 2,000 persons per month.

Maxine Cantrell started duplicate bridge in Merced. When her husband Everett took a job in San Rafael with the city schools, the family moved to Marin where Mrs. Cantrell taught third garde at Lagunitas School and maintained a home with five teen-aged children. In the evenings she attended local bridge clubs for relaxation and to perfect her duplicate bridge game.

In 1964, she opened a duplicate club of her own at Lagunitas School. As the club grew, the Cantrells moved their bridge club to 1220 Grand Avenue in San Rafael, but parking problems forced them to seek a better location. They found a two-bedroom house in commercial zoning at the present location, 215 West End Avenue.

The Cantrells, with the help of their son-in-law and friends, remodeled the interior for bridge use, and on Sept. 7, 1967, San Rafael Bridge Studio held its grand opening at its present location.

Since then, the Cantrells built a large addition to the building to provide spacious quarters for a full-fledged bridge studio, with kitchen facilities and the coziness and comforts of home.

Lent, Mrs. Cantrell's partner in the business, first dropped into the studio in March of 1970. With a varied background in bridge, education and psychology, Lent found himself on the staff fairly quickly and worked in the studio in various capacities for two years before becoming a partner in June of 1972.

To cater to all tastes, San Rafael Bridge Studio has 13 duplicate games a week as well as two rubber bridge games per week and classes for the beginning and novice duplicate players. People who lack partners may walk in to the club any day; Mrs. Cantrell and Lent have a reputation for pairing up players of comparable rank.

They also have three full-time certified directors, with others on standby to fill in when needed.

San Rafael Bridge Studio has the following games:

Sundays — 7 p.m. open game. (An afternoon game at 1 p.m. is held once a month).

Mondays — 12:30 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. (The 7:30 game is rubber bridge).

Wednesdays — 12:30 p.m. (This one, called Vic's Club, is run by Ludovica Bigelow of Fairfax, one of the county's first life masters); 7:45 p.m., junior game.

Thursdays — 12:30 p.m. and 8 p.m., open games.

Saturdays — 12:30 p.m. open game; 8 p.m. (Vic's Club) open game.

BETTY'S BRIDGE CLUB

The county's newest duplicate club was opened in April of 1972 by Betty Krambs, who has Dirf Benford and Mary Boone Gibson helping her as directors.

Betty's Bridge Club, located at 912 Sherman Avenue in Novato, near the city hall, has the following games:

Wednesdays — 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., open games.

Thursdays — 8 p.m., both an open game for all players and a junior game for the less experienced.

Firdays — 8 p.m., open game.

Saturdays — 8 p.m. open game.

THE RUNNING argument on whether the duplicate player is superior to the "party" or "rubber" bridge player may never be settled because the differences in the games call for different styles of play.

The consensus of those who have played both types of bridge appears to be that bidding techniques of the duplicate player are more precise, but the play of the hand depends on the amount of experience and the skill of the individual.

Some of the top party players in Marin can run circles around many of the duplicate players. They take delight in inviting their duplicate friends for a fast game of party bridge, employing a free-wheeling bidding style, tempered by good card sense and intuition, that confounds the more meticulous and convention-bound duplicate players.

The aim of the party player is to draw good cards, leap directly into a game or slam contract without giving too much information to the opponents, finagle the opposition out of a trick or two, and rack up the points. Their play is rapid because the goal is to make the contract, and an extra trick or two over the contract is of little consequence. Party players waste little time discussing and analyzing each hand because the same hand will probably never be dealt again.

THE DUPLICATE player savors each hand like a tasty morsel to be chewed carefully and digested slowly. On occasion, he might ponder for three minutes before making a crucial play, calculating the odds of finessing for the queen of spades or playing to drop the queen because the opponents have only four spades in their combined hands.

For the duplicate player, making a game or slam, or even a part score contract is not enough; he must squeeze every trick he can possibly squeeze either by trickery or superior play because others in the same room will play that same hand. If either players in the room make five spades while he makes only four, he gets a score of zero for that one hand.

The duplicate player is armed with a long list of conventions, many of them artificial, which in theory should enable him and his partner to arrive at the optimum contract on each hand. In actual practice, some of the duplicate players, particularly if they are loaded down with unfamiliar conventions, sometimes wind up in ridiculous contracts that are not conducive to partnership confidence.

THE FASCINATION of duplicate lies in the fact that the player can later discuss each hand with others in the room to see how they handled the same cards. Most duplicate players soon lose interest in party bridge, where much of the fun comes from getting good cards and the evening is a bore if opponents keep drawing all the aces and picture cards.

"Bridge," says Webster, "is a card game, derived from whist, in which the trump suit (or the fact there will be no trumps) is determined by the side proposing to take the higher number of tricks. . ." But to the game's devotees, it is much, much more than that.

The question of who is better — the duplicate or the party player — need not be resolved because their objectives differ. The important thing is for all players to enjoy their game without shooting partners, wrecking marriages and showing contempt for those with a different outlook on what this game of bridge is all about.

special classes for five or more of any one type.

LAST YEAR'S event brought to the Town and Country Village show the largest display of Porsches in the Bay Area. Bidding for a similar title this year are the Corvette clubs in Marin who hope to double, perhaps triple, previous Corvette entries.

The North Bay Corvette Assn. is the biggest, with 29 cars and 50 members, the most active and oldest of the two clubs.

Starting with four Corvette owners, Bud de Castro did the spade work in 1968. Later Stan Wisness acted as adviser and Allen Foster was the club's first president.

Present officers are Nelson Humphreys, president; John Rittles, vice-president; Jean Humphreys, secretary; Ted Lindstrom, treasurer; Greg Conklin, social director. Neil Andersen, former club president for two years and membership chairman, now edits The Vette News, the club's bulletin.

SOCIAL IN NATURE, the club meets monthly at Campbell-Bishop Chevrolet, Corte Madera, and the emphasis is on members' participation in activities related to Corvette clubs and other sports-car groups. An annual event is joining the Tour to Tahoe, sponsored by the Fresno Corvette Club, and this year slated for Sept. 15-16.

Also on the calendar is the Napa Concourse for Corvette cars, Aug. 18, and the club sponsored Northern California SCCA Championship Autocross at the Cow Palace, Sept. 9.

Although guest speakers are welcomed, the club members feel that all learn more when an assigned topic is researched by a fellow member and his findings presented at a meeting.

The club's territory stretches from Cupertino to Santa Rosa and inquiries should be addressed to the North Bay Corvette Assn., Post Office Box 2012, San Rafael, or to Neil Andersen.

According to Jim Simontacchi, president, "We are still getting organized and we are in a learning period. We take tours and have planned a Tahoe Tour, Russian River Canoe Trip and Dinner Rally."

For more information, inquiries can be sent to Empire Chevrolet, Novato, where the club meets twice a month.

Although the clubs are distinct entities, mutual Corvette ownership makes them all blood brothers. And very quickly a prideful and refreshing red, white and blue streak surfaces when they declare that they chose Corvettes because they are "the only American-made true sportscar."

PRODUCED BY General Motors in limited numbers (30,000 is the estimated production figure for 1973 - up 2000 over last year) the car is built for American highways, claims the Corvette News from G.M., and "its record of 20 straight years of enhancing, enticing, frustrating, thrilling, roaring, racing, rallying and spinning wheels in pure joy is not matched by any other American car."

Most of the members agree that it can outaccelerate any other stock car. They call it a "brute — with muscle."

Some of the club members believe, however, that the days of muscle cars are over because new smog control laws are vastly influencing automobile power, and consequently motors are tuned down. Some accept the trend as necessary because of the great increase of cars on the highway, while others wonder if these devices will really alleviate the smog problems.

GARY THOMPSON, North Bay Corvette Assn, who with his brother Dave drag races in a 1963 Corvette, drives for pleasure a red 1965 hardtop roadster. He asserts that two years ago he averaged 18 miles to the gallon. Now, with smog devices, mileage is cut back to 10, which nearly doubles the fuel consumption and, he asserts, does not reduce emissions.

But car racing, which came into its own five years ago, goes on, and is now ranked as the second largest spectator sport in the USA. TV has widened coverage to bring frequent programs, and movies such as "Bullet" and "Beach Boy" have added glamour to the sport as have Hollywood stars Steve McQueen and James Garner.

THE NBCA HAILS Ken Burge as one of its claims to fame. Burge's solid black with blue striping 1967 custom roadster has been rebuilt from "the ground up." It is a show car and in five major concourses in Northern California and Arizona has taken four first prizes, one second and two sweepstakes awards. Burge shies away from the limelight, but friends will tell you that his car has over 200 per cent more chrome than the average Corvette, and that its chrome undercarriage is as clean as the interior.

Past President Bill Costello of the NBCA, who drives a 1960 white Corvette, also races and wins prizes in his hardtop 1955 Chevrolet.

Greg Conklin, NBCA, enters and wins in the street show roadster class with his 1966 maroon Corvette. Unique features include a minimum of chrome, a three-speed manual transmission and air conditioning in a roadster. Conklin believes that Corvette owners adapt the car to fit their personalities. "I'm conservative," he says.

Neil Andersen's 1964 gray fastback and a recently sold 1961 has autocross awards from Canada, Arizona and Oregon. Ted Lindstrom's 1961 silver stock roadster has taken many first places.

Because the Redwood Corvettes Unlimited Club is still so new, few of its members have competed, and many are waiting for their warranties to expire before customizing their cars. An exception is Jim Simontacchi who has owned Corvettes since 1964.

"Now I don't think I'd be happy with another car in the $6,000 to $7,000 class; besides I like them because they are American-made. When my dad helped me buy my first car he vetoed the Jaguar I had in mind and said it had to be an American product.

"Statistics show that more people are buying them now, but they've become a status symbol. I went into them when I was 14 purely and simply because they were fast."

NOT ONLY CAN the now 28-year-old Jim make his car tick on the inside, but his hobby is professional body moulding and painting — an art that should earn him the cognomen of "car sculptor" because he takes new parts and hand molds them to style. His car is a 1969 model made to look like a '72, and its only age clue is the interior.

"It was more of a challenge to take an old wreck and bring it up to date than to buy a new one," he says. The burnt orange body has 25 coats of paint plus a layer of crushed glass. Frosted silver with black and white webbing accented with orange lines drawn free hand highlights the rear roof section and the L88 hood configuration. It carries a price tag of $1,000 when done in a shop. The total remodeling took Jim six months.

For the fifth consecutive year proceeds from the Strawberry show tomorrow will aid the Marin County Chapter Kidney Foundation of Northern California. President-elect Charles Alvarez, who will head the chapter in November, is the organization's auto show chairman, which is the unit's only major fund-raising event. Receipts will substantially assist the Kidney Disease Screening Program.

THE ONLY PROGRAM of its kind in the Bay Area, its purpose is to detect urinary tract infections in school children from kindergarten through sixth grade.

What began as a pilot program at Coleman School last year has developed to include Kentfield, Reed and Mill Valley school districts with 7,500 children tested. Fall testing will cover the San Anselmo, Lagunitas and Corte Madera-Larkspur districts.

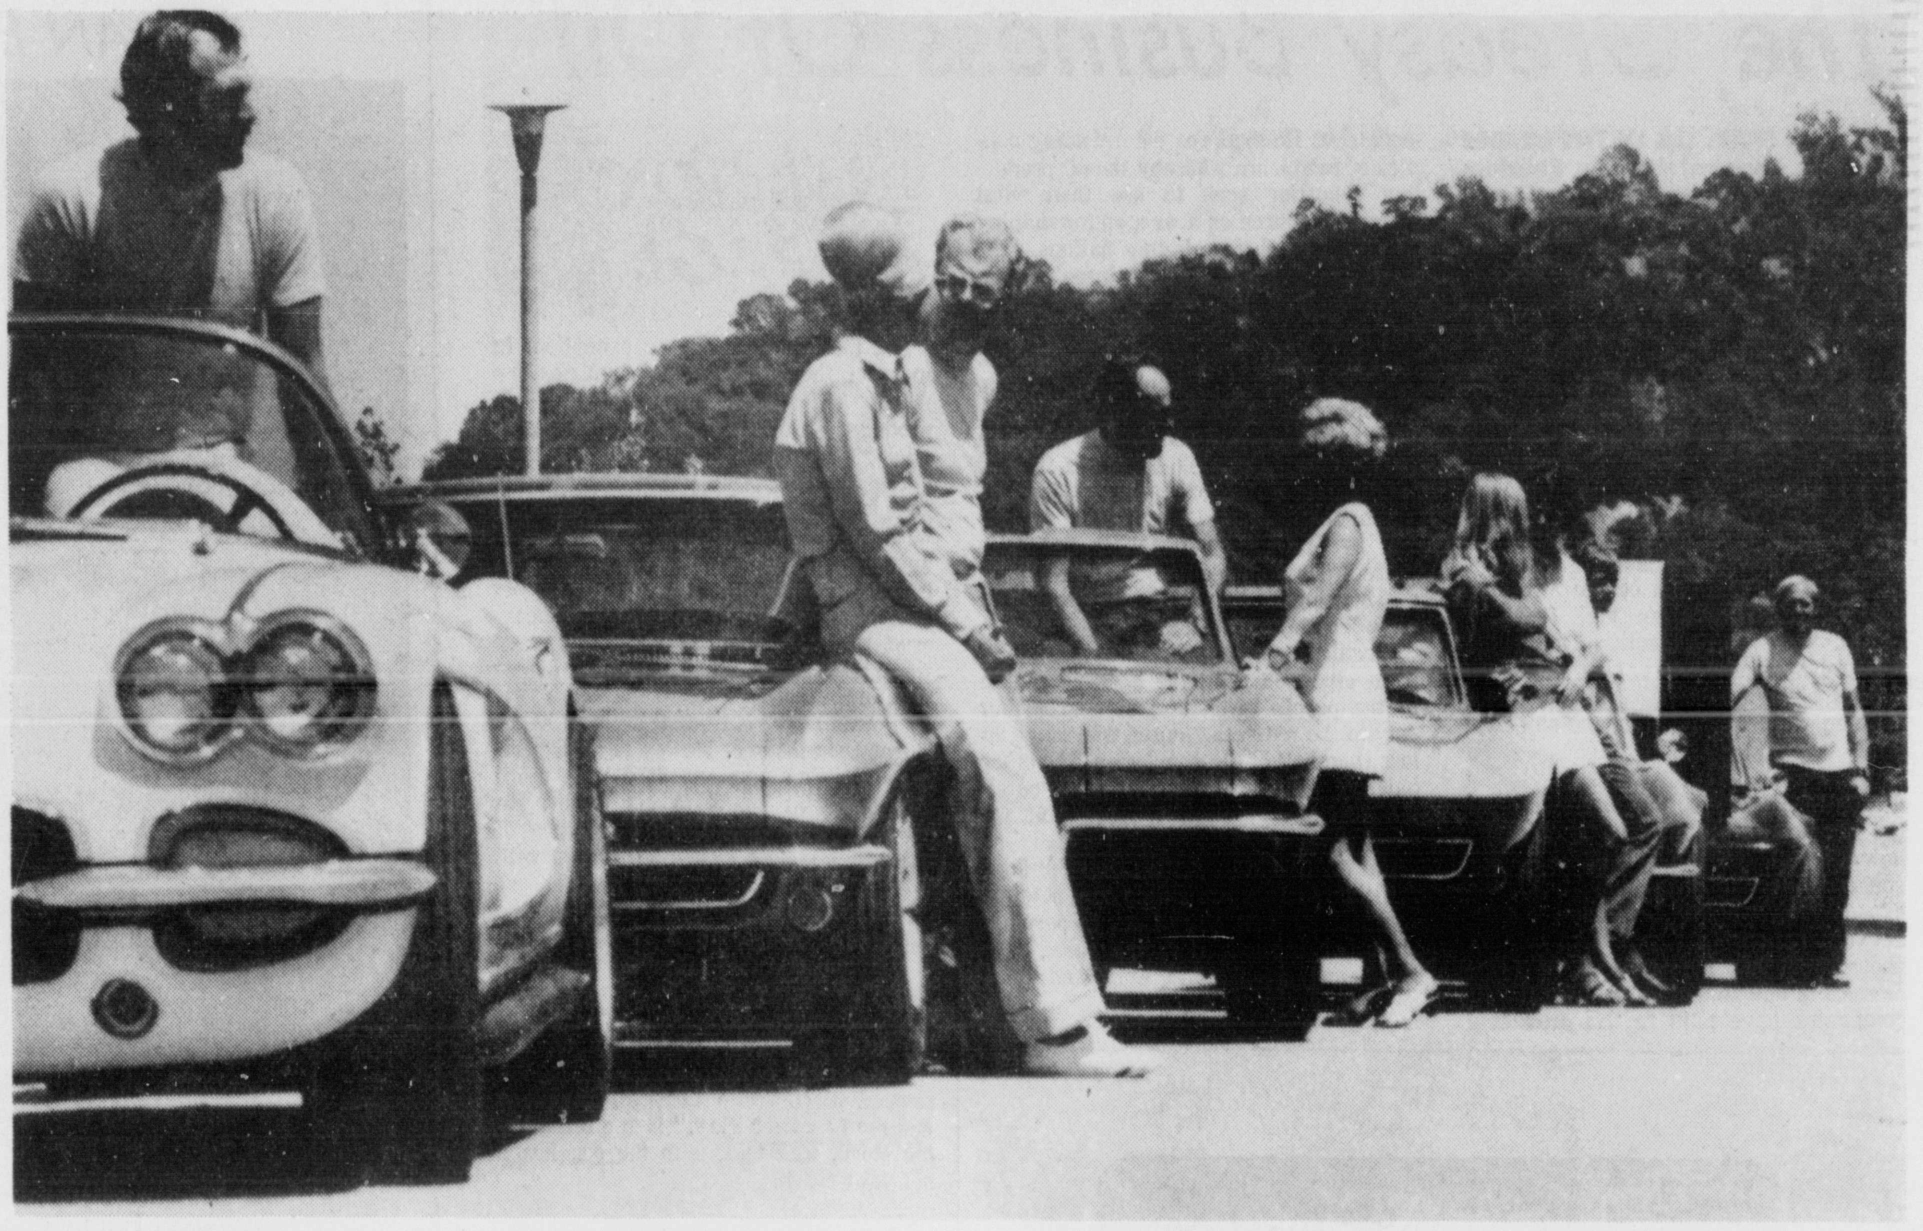
Speciemsn are checked for urinary tract infections, protein, blood and sugar. Statistics for the urinary infections show that between 1 and 2 per cent need retesting.

Volunteers with registered nursing backgrounds do the laboratory work and P-TA groups aid with the paper work. Testing was done at the Ross Valley Medical Clinic, which had donated free space. Recent remodeling of the clinic makes it impossible for the program to continue there and the Kidney Foundation is in search of new headquarters.

ABOUT 300 TESTS are run per week. To help defray the $1.60 expense per child parents are asked to give $1.

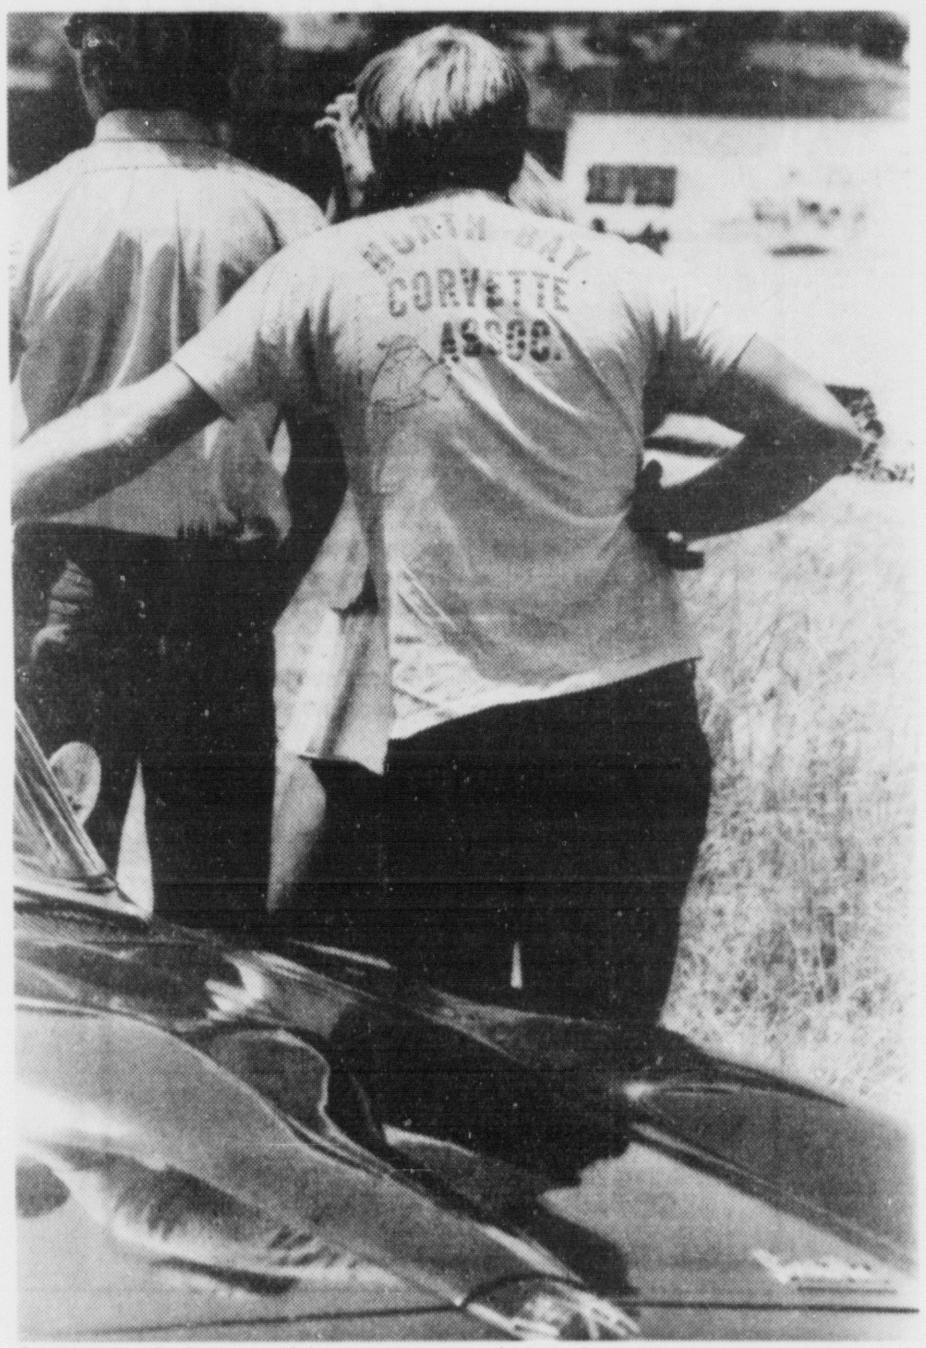
Also benefiting from the 61-member organization are 26 kidney patients who, through the drug bank program, can obtain expensive medicines at cost or, if necessary, free of charge.

Phone inquiries and donations are invited to continue the county-wide program and can be directed to Marin County Chapter Kidney Foundation Northern California, Post Office Box 153, San Rafael, or by telephoning the Marin County Heart Association.

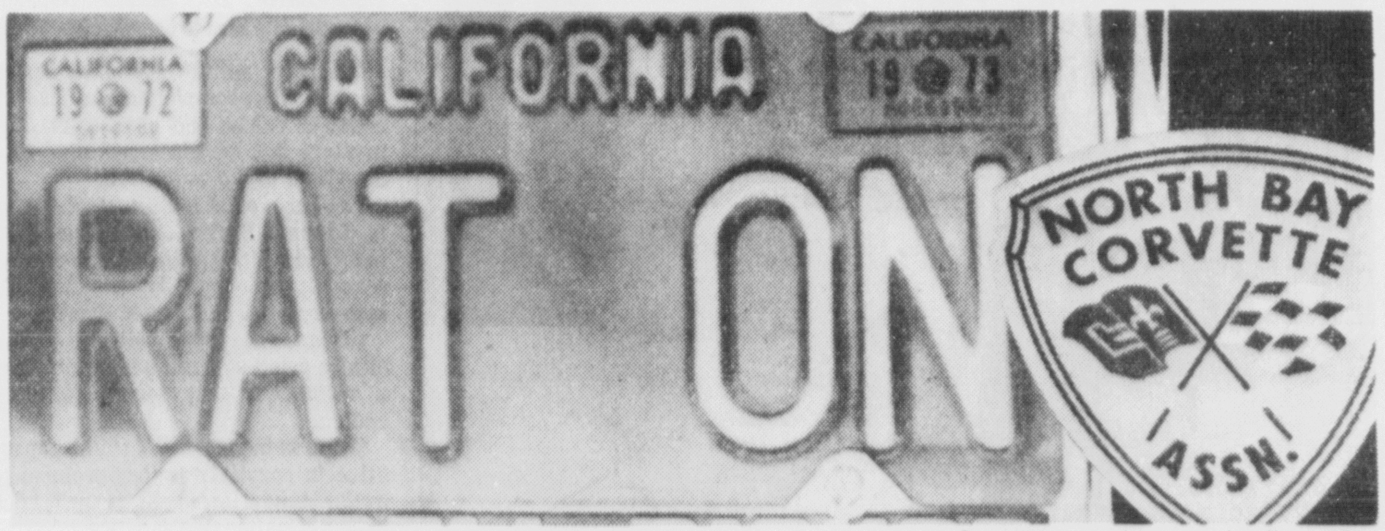


SIX OF THE MORE than two dozen Corvettes that will be on display tomorrow, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show in Mill Valley were lined up for this photo. Left to right are Bill Costello and his 1960 white roadster; Neil and Robin Andersen, 1964 grey fastback; John and Jane Rittler, 1965 red roadster; Nancy Lovell and Gary Thompson, 1965 hardtop roadster; Greg Conklin, 1966 maroon roadster; Ken Burge, 1967 solid black with blue striping custom roadster. All are prize-winning cars which will be competiting tomorrow and are owned by members of the North Bay Corvette Assn.

"YOU BROKE IT, you fix it," Neil Andersen tells his wife. And he can say it with a smile because his pretty blonde wife can pull the head, drop the leaders, change sparkplugs, jumper the battery and adjust the clutch." Between them the Andersens have a wall to wall display of more than 450 awards won in their 10 years of racing and showing their 1961 and 1964 Corvettes. Andersen served two years as president of the North Bay Corvette Association and now edits "Vette News", the club's bulletin.



OF THE TWO Corvette clubs in Marin, North Bay Corvette Assn. is the oldest and biggest. Formed in 1968, it has 29 cars and 50 members. The more recently formed Redwood Corvettes Unlimited has 17 active couples. Working together the two groups hope this year to bring the biggest display of Corvettes to the eighth annual Town and Country Village Auto Show tomorrow. Directed by James Webb, shopping center manager, the event is co-sponsored by the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America and the Antique Car Club of America.



KEN BURGE'S PERSONALIZED license "Rat-On" is a Corvette owner's way of telling other motorists, especially Corvette owners, that his car has a big block engine, otherwise known as a "rat motor." Small engine blocks are called mouse motors. Burge's prize-winning Corvette will be one of the many attractions at the auto show at Strawberry tomorrow. It is the major fund-raising event for Marin Chapter Norther California Kidney Foundation.

The Greasy Business Of Oil

POWER PLAY: OIL IN THE MIDDLE EAST by Leonard Mosley; Random House; 457 pages, $10. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

"Oil friendships are greasy," said Calouste Sarkis Gulbenkian, explaining why none of his friends were in the oil business, even though oil had made him one of the richest men in the world.

Gulbenkian knew at first hand the greed, duplicity and chicanery that black gold arouses in men of all colors. The industrial plant of Western Europe is fueled by Middle Eastern oil and the person, company or country controlling that oil is guaranteed immense wealth. The flame of that rich candle attracted Arab, Iranian, Western and Japanese moths. They were relentless, unscrupulous, adventurous, brave, even heroic, in pursuit of their goal. Like moths, many of them were consumed by the object of their desires.

In "Power Play," Leonard Mosley details the history of the development of the Middle Eastern oil industry. He tells how the oil companies acquired their concessions, the risks they took, the expense they went to, the double-dealing between nations that were involved. He shows what has happened to the ever-increasing amounts of money that the oil companies have paid to the producing countries. He explores the unfolding politics of petroleum whereby the oil producing countries seek to use their vital natural resource as a weapon for shaping the foreign policies of other nations.

France needs oil. She refuses to ship fighter planes to Israel. Italy and Japan need oil, but they are Johnny-come-latelies not welcomed by the old-timers, so they crack the monopoly by offering to pay more for the oil they must have.

For the people of the Middle East the great wealth from oil has been filtered through the avarice of their rulers. Aramco, damned as an "imperialist exploiter" by Mid-East nationalists has done more to provide education, health care and housing for its native employees than have the natives' leaders.

Kuwait is a unique case where benefits from oil resources have been passed on to the people in significant degree, but only to the native Kuwaitis, who make up less than half of the population. The other half are like the slaves who made possible Athenian greatness. They toil for small reward.

But the native Kuwaitis suffer for their selfishness. They are sitting on a powder-keg of discontent. They flock to psychiatrists because despite their wealth, ". . . they can't sleep, can't work and can't enjoy life."

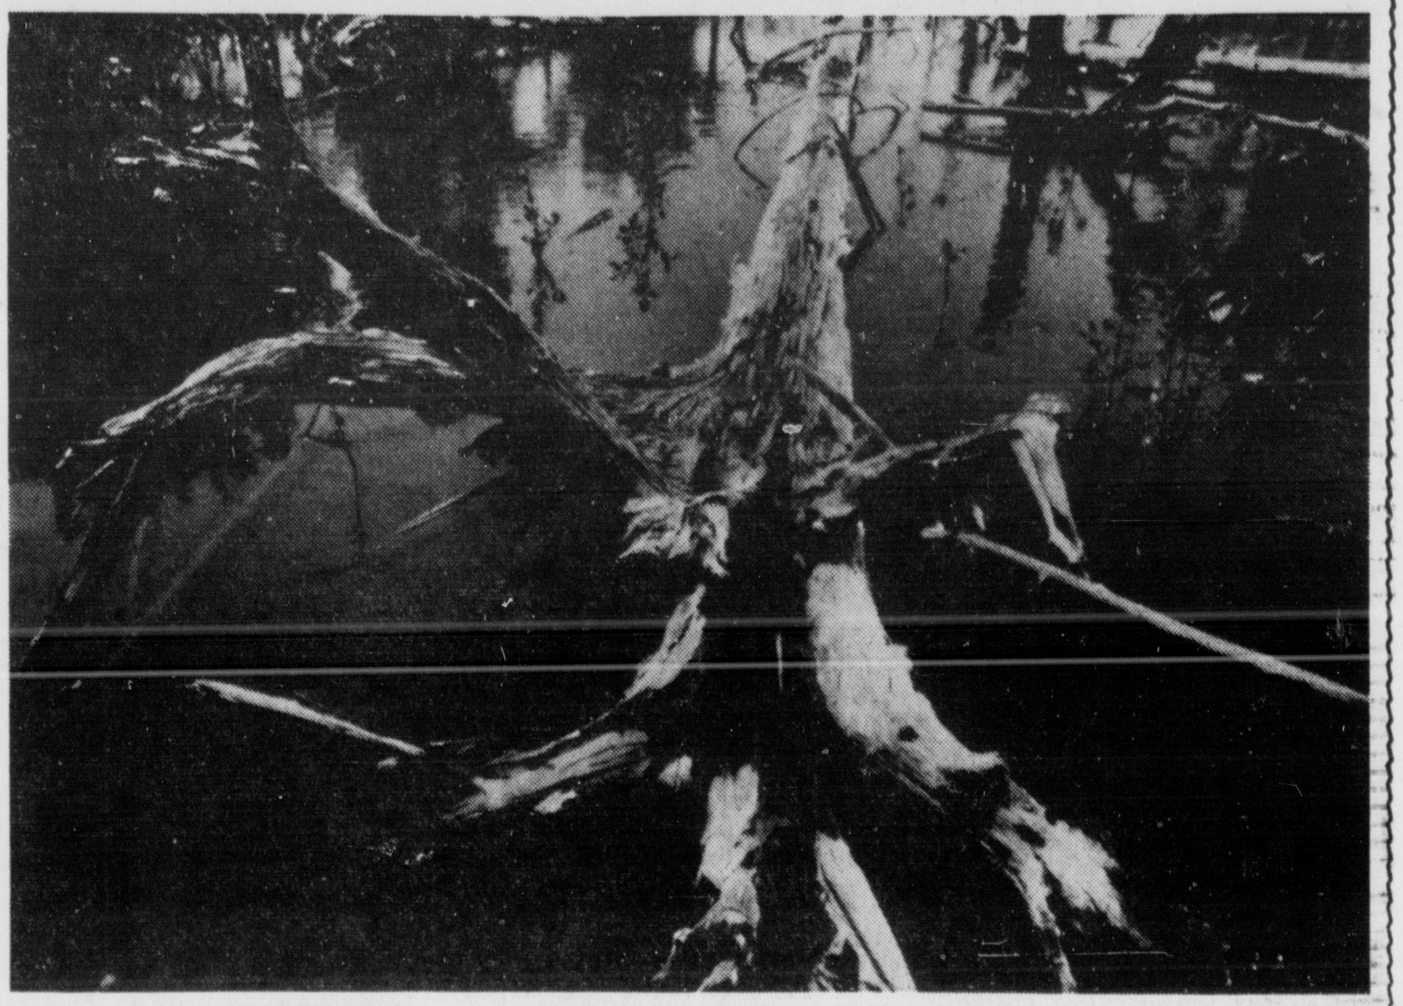
But the Kuwaitis are an exception. In most of the oil-producing countries the people are spared the burdens of oil-produced wealth. Their rulers don't let it trickle down to them.

The sheik of Abu Dhabi hoarded his gold and his pound notes in a storeroom. With millions of pounds a year in revenues and only 15,000 subjects, he did nothing for them. And when he was overthrown by his brother it was discovered that the hoarded paper currency was gone beyond recall, eaten by desert rats and insects.

"Power Play" is critical and forthright journalistic history. Mosley is an experienced foreign correspondent with more than a dozen books to his credit. He knows how to identify key sources of information, how to get interviews with them and most important, how to ask penetrating questions and evaluate the answers. Based on his reading and his questioning of rulers, diplomats and oilmen, he describes what has happened so far and speculates about what might happen in the future politics of power.

While you're saving gasoline during the present questionable shortage, stay home and read "Power Play." It is a remarkable story, well told, with the conclusion not yet written.

AN ECOLOGY THAT IS UNIQUE



THE DEAD HULK of a mangrove felled by Hurricane Donna in 1960 sprawls in the Shark River, among seedlings that presage a new forest, in this Dan McCoy photograph from "The Everglades" by Archie Carr, ninth volume in Time-Life's The American Wilderness Series. "The Everglades are unique," asserts Carr, before guiding his reader through 184 pages of exploration of the region and its distinctive ecology. Special photographic essays focus on particular aspects of the Everglades' fascination, in the proven Time-Life manner. Wildlife comes in for special attention, from alligators to the birds shown in a "sampler" of reproductions of John James Audubon paintings. Author Carr is a graduate research professor in the zoology department at the University of Florida. Dr. William B. Robertson Jr., research biologist for Everglades National Park, served as his consultant.

As a writer, Gerard I. Nierenberg, lawyer, semanticist, and founder-president of Negotiation Institute, is best known as the author of the popular "How to Read a Person Like a Book."

This book, however, is a combination of two of his other, more specialized books, "The Art of Negotiation" and "Creative Business Negotiation."

To those two books Nierenberg has added some new material to produce "Fundamentals of Negotiating," a basic test on how to conduct yourself in the give and take that is the foundation of today's economic and social systems.

One basic premise: In your negotiating never press for total victory. For the completely one-sided outcome is one that cannot stand the test of time. Both negotiators must feel they have gained, if they are to abide by their agreement.

Nierenberg and his publisher obviously are hopeful of an audience that will go beyond the obvious one of the professional and semi-pro negotiators of business and industry. They hope to convince the layman that he, too, can benefit from the same techniques. And well he might. But the truth is that "Fundamentals of Negotiating" is written in a style and in language that the non-professional is likely to find difficult and/or dull. And quite likely Neirenberg's readership will remain pretty well restricted to professionals whose business is the give-and-take around the table.

BROWSING BOOKMAN

Naturegraph, the based-in-Healdsburg publishers of natural history and Indian lore books, has issued a new edition of its highly regarded "Handbook of California Birds."

The book is the work of naturalist Vinson Brown and ornithologist Henry G. Weston Jr., with illustrations by Jerry Buzzell of San Jose, and now sells for $8.95 clothbound, $5.95 paperback.

The publisher describes the new addition as "more than just another revision . . . a completely new and vastly improved volume that covers nearly all the birds known in California and with more than 370 of them pictured in full color."

In addition to the photos and descriptions ideally arranged for identification purposes in the field, the book contains good basic information on bird behavior — migrations, feeding, courtship, sounds, habitats, etc.

There are maps, line drawings and black and white photos in addition to the color plates, and the improvements are more than sufficient to justify its acquisition by birdwatchers already owning the earlier versions issued in the 1960s. Indeed, it is outstanding.

FROM GOUSHA Publications, Post Office Box 6227, San Jose: "American Crafts Guide," a directory of craft shops, galleries, supply houses and craftsmen through the U.S., edited by Marian Way. The price in paperback: $3.95.

PLAYING HOUSE by Fredrica Wagman; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 165 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Courtesy of the Supreme Court, we once again have open season on pornography. This new novel might well be target for many of the worn-out discussions of the fine line between art and obscenity.

"Playing House" purports to be a love story. But the subject, no matter how swathed in "fine writing," is incest.

The lovers are brother and sister. Now over 30, the sister tells their story in an hysterical, stream-of-consciousness, flash-back style. Most of the time she is pre-adolescent, a willing victim and an eager participant in the games — described too explicitly for this reader — devised by her 14-year-old brother.

He is a manipulator, a user, a predator, a viciously innocent character whose second favorite outdoor sport is stringing cats from tree branches and switching them to death.

This is Fredrica Wagman's first novel and she appears to have been influenced by the Bronte sisters, Tennessee Williams and James Joyce. The result is a wild combination of Gothic romance, Southern decadence, and pseudo-modernistic realism.

Yet Mrs. Wagman occasionally writes vividly and has a flair for description. A chair is "going fat and sloppy like an old army general still somehow at attention." The house is a "Victorian matriarch pitched across green velvet grass."

This book probably will make money. Quite possibly, Mrs. Wagman could do as well financially — and better artistically — if she reconciled, and learned to practice, discipline and decency.

A New Way For Listening To Your Favorite Recordings

MUSIC AND YOUR MIND by Helen L. Bonny and Louis M. Savary; Harper and Row, 161 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Sarah Mizel.

Helen Bonny, professional musician and educator, musical therapist at the Maryland Psychiatric Research Center, and Louis Savary, Ph.D., writer and also a professional musician, have written a new book proposing a revolutionary approach to music-listening.

The authors show us, step by step, the way to a "new awareness." There are 25 music-listening experiences for individuals, groups and music appreciation classes.

The book invites you to learn to listen to music with heightened consciousness. The idea is to deepen your normal listening experience to learning to let music take you to places, in your mind, that you have not known to exist. Adding this new dimension to your music-listening can, the authors promise, increase your realization of your human potential and serve as a new tool for getting you in touch with yourself.

The unique, operative element in the new way to music is ASC (altered state of consciousness). The first objective of the authors is to show you how to achieve this — how to pass from ordinary consciousness into a non-ordinary state. The description of relaxation is similar to elements of Zen meditation, Gestalt therapy and hypnosis. Concentration is next, and then induction, leading to the altered state of consciousness.

You are now ready to listen to your favorite recording. It can be folk, pop, rock, country, western, classical, opera music —whatever is your thing.

But this reviewer finds the routines and experiments for relaxing while listening to one's favorite recordings superfluous if not ridiculous. Why should anyone have to try to hypnotize himself in order to have such listening?

The authors assure us that the exercises in the book are perfectly safe, when carried out according to instructions and with a healthy, positive motivation. People who are emotionally disturbed, deeply depressed or under psychiatric care are advised not to use self-induced ASC without professional approval and/or assistance.

It is a well known fact that music-listening does not need detailed analysis. One listens with their ears — their memories — and their hearts. "Music and Your Mind," thus, proposes what seems to be needless complications to a simple, intuitive, enjoyable process.

Encyclopedia Britannica maintains a staff of 400 writers, editors, researchers and experts just to keep the giant reference work going from year to year, according to Warren Preece, its editor.

For instance, he says, 20 people are assigned the job of culling the world's storehouses for illustrations. There are 16,000 in the current Britannica, which totals 24 volumes and 28,264 pages. The total number of words is estimated at 34,538,000.

Insights Into The Life Of A Texas Clan

All the ingredients for a strong family novel are present in Humphrey's story of a close-knit Texas family, but his recipe falters, with uneven results.

Edwina Renshaw, leader of the clan, is a powerful figure, but Humphrey's portrayal of her is weak because he tells about her, rather than showing her in action.

The family gathers while Edwina lies dying and the reader is bewildered, not only trying to keep track of all of them but by trying to follow Humphrey's technique, consisting of quick cuts from one scene to another and flashbacks.

A reader gains some insights into the life of the clan and life in Texas, but the efforts to work through the literary maze lessen the impact.

Fine portraits of the family doctor and the faithful daughter and a wild scene at a storm cellar entombment stand out in the clutter of characters and events.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

"A Grave Affair" seems at first to be the typical uncomplicated (at least in the sense of values and characters) English mystery but there's more meat to chew here than in the usual fare.

The hero, or at least central character, is Edmund Burke, a member of parliament, who stays with his pretty, spoiled-seeming wife mainly because of the inconvenience of English divorce.

He and the wife both have flaming affairs going — but it's his which leads to a nightmare that seems to have no ending.

Smith is his country's prime representative in negotiations that promise peace in the Middle East and, as such, he is the target of nationalist fanatics.

This circumstance, plus his beautiful well-known girlfriend and his wife's powerful boyfriend add up to a complicated plot. There is a development of characters, particularly of Burke and his wife, though, that make the novel more than averagely readable.

Alexis Karel, noted writer and Czech patriot living in England in exile from the Communist tyranny of his native land, disappears suddenly and mysteriously. His adoring niece Gail Fleming leaves her New York job to hunt her missing uncle.

The search begins in Karel's English home, Deer's Leap, and then takes Gail, and the young man who insists on accompanying her, to Majorca, Nice and into the Alps. And finally back to Deer's Leap for the conclusion.

The novel is billed as "Gothic suspense," but there is less of the mood associated with the genre than one might expect.

There is, however, the required romantic underline, and an international, fast-changing setting. One must accept yet again the old frayed Cold War suppositions with the Commies as the baddies, and one must , as so often is required of readers of this kind of fiction, put up once more with a heroine stubborn, at times blindly obtuse and quite predictable.

Still, this English writer has fashioned a story that is generally entertaining. It moves rapidly. And one becomes genuinely interested in the fate of Alexis Karel.

Jerusalem: The City Of Contrasts In Its Peoples And Its Landscapes

The dust rises from the rose colored limestone hillsides and spreads in a delicate thin film over the streets and sidewalks. In the spring and fall, when the "Sharav" desert wind blows, the dust is heavier and coats your clothing. But in the winter after the cleansing rains and pure Mediterranean winds sweep the air, a crispness predominates, giving Jerusalem an unaccustomed sharpness and clarity.

The visitor to Jerusalem will probably be most impressed by the striking contrasts offered by her people and her landscape.

THE CITY HAS historically always been a melange of ppulations. In the Old City, whose outer walls date from Turkish times, the quarters are labeled Christian, Moslem, Armenian and Jewish for the traditional residents of those areas. Today, the various populations of the Old City, which is largely Arab, and the modern new city which is mostly Jewish, mingle freely on the streets and in the markets, giving Jerusalem a unique character.

Hasidic men with side curls and caftans walk next to Arab women, baskets of fruit perched on their heads; off duty soldiers clad in khaki pass Greek Orthodox priests, and Israel matrons doing their afternoon shopping. None seem aware that to the outside observer they form an unusual picture together.

Jerusalem's 291,000 residents live scattered over an area that spans the Judean Hills almost to the Dead Sea. The hills are the most outstanding feature of Jerusalem's landscape, and each summit provides a subtly varied view of the horizon. Mount Zion, the Temple Mount, the Hill of Evil Counsel, the Mount of Olives; each have particular significance in the history of western civilization.

MOST RECENTLY, as Jerusalem builds to meet the needs of her growing population, the hills seem to be growing flatter, and the valleys more shallow.

Apartment houses now overlook the site of Solomon's Temple, and the square outline of the new parliament building stands scant meters from the seat of the ancient assembly, the Sanhedrin. But the Old City remains as always, the holy precinct, for within its bounds are contained the Western Wall of the Second Temple, the Dome of the Rock, the Via Dolorosa and the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Jerusalem's planners, careful to preserve the unique character of the city have been building with an eye to the historic view and in the Old City, especially, they have been reluctant to change a stone.

To those who anticipate visiting Jerusalem, a word of caution: Jerusalem cannot simply be visited; it must be experienced by all the senses. The casual visitor will see the holy places, the hills, the sunsets; but to enjoy Jerusalem to the fullest, one must smell the spices, taste the fruits, stroke the cold stones, listen to the church bells in the early morning, and most of all inhale the special atmosphere of Jerusalem.

EACH YEAR THOUSANDS of young people from America and Europe pour into Israel for the summer. Some work as volunteers on the communal farms, others at the archaeological digs. And still others camp out on the miles of beaches. The bicycle is a common and convenient mode of transportation for the younger visitors to Israel.

Prices in Europe have risen considerably since a year ago, and chances are they'll go up even higher in the future.

The dollar-wise traveler can keep his expenses down without sacrificing the enjoyment of a European trip by adhering to the following tips, according to Dick Denton, managing director of Pan Am in San Francisco.

1. Ask your bank or American Express about the advantages of European rather than dollar traveler's checks. Regardless of currency, always cash them at banks. Hotels and restaurants usually give much lower rates.

2. Save several dollars at each arrival and departure point by taking airport buses or trains rather than taxis into the city.

3. Discover where Europeans stay, and follow their examples rather than sticking to American-style hotels and tourists circuit restaurants. Buy guide books that have a good budget section such as Pan Am's paperback, "Real Economy Guide to Europe" and "Real Restaurant Guide to Europe" (each under $2), and remember that European tourist "bibles" such as the British "Egon Ronay Guide" and French "Michelin" have separate lists of inexpensive restaurants.

4. Think carefully before ordering that dry martini or mint julep. The prices are often surprisingly high and the quality of what the bartender turns up is often surprisingly low. Experiment instead with low-cost local wines, beers and liquors.

5. Don't over-tip. Many European hotel and restaurant bills include healthy service charges, and foreign coins that American tourists so freely distribute are often worth 30 or 40 cents.

6. Go easy on buying little gimmicky souvenirs. Many are shoddily made, over-priced and destined for the trash can as soon as you get home. Concentrate instead on one or two objects you can use over the years such as Italian leather goods, British woolens or French perfumes. When buying something expensive always ask about discounts for foreign shoppers. Duty-free shopping facilities are also available in most European airports.

7. Don't rent a car if you're staying in the center of car-clogged cities like London, Paris, Rome and Amsterdam. Instead utilize their excellent and inexpensive public transportation system. If touring, check on rail and bus discount tickets or consider renting a car.

8. Get out of the big cities for lower prices and for a look at the more traditional life. Experience France's Chateaux country, Eastern Bavaria in Germany, southern Italy, northern Portugal, and western Great Britain or Scotland.

9. Consider the alternatives to living in hotels. For instance, try Portugal's pousadas, state-owned, inexpensive and often charming rural inns; camping; or staying in a farmhouse. Most European tourist boards now promote farmhouse holidays, often in areas with many tourist attractions.

10. When shopping, remember that you often pay extra for the "overhead" at stores located on main thoroughfares. Try to find shops away from the center of the city where you'll find the bargains that Europeans look for.

11. Check carefully to determine what air fare makes the most sense to you. If you're planning a long trip, the 22 to 45 day excursion fare is probably best. If you're under 24, youth fares, again available this summer, are the cheapest way to travel.

12. After you've added up the cost of traveling independently, compare it to one of the major tours. Because of special group rates, tours often enable you to stay in a hotel you couldn't afford independently. Also, the price of a tour package will not change regardless of whether there are further currency revaluations.

A Canadian School In Hospitality

Run by the Quebec government in Montreal, admission is open only to students who definitely prefer to work in hotels and whose personalities are considered ideal for developing good relations with guests.

Basic subjects are psychology, philosophy, architecture, interior decorating, plumbing, electrical wiring, accounting, and business machine operation — plus — serving, bartending, pastrymaking, guest relations, and hotel-food industry administration.

An important skill is developed in the 5,000-bottle wine cellar. Students are taught how to uncork a bottle, how a wine should, and should not, taste, the differences between wines from different countries and regions of countries and the right wine for a particular menu.

The Canadian hotel school has created quite a stir in the international accommodation world.

Accolades and visitors have come from famous European hotel academies like L'Ecole Hotellerie in Lausanne, Switzerland. It is also getting an increasing number of requests for graduates from hotels across Canada and the United States.

An Inland Sea

Not far from Bolivia's capital city La Paz is the inland sea known as the Sacred Lake of the Incas. According to the American Automobile Association, Lake Titicaca is the world's highest navigable body of water. Situated at an altitude of 12,507 feet, the fresh-water lake is 120 miles long, 40 miles wide, and as deep as 1,000 feet.

THE WILD ROGUE AND NEIGHBORS

Steelhead fishing or white-water raft and boat trips down Oregon's twisting Rogue River or its California neighbors is magnificent late-summer and fall action for outdoor lovers.

The Rogue or the Klamath, for example, contain plenty of water when lesser streams are running low. Consequently downriver "floats" stay popular later in these mighty waterways.

A survey by the Redwood Empire Assn. brought these replies from private operators of river "runs" in the area:

Wilderness Waterways, 4 Live Oak Circle, El Sobrante, Calif., 94803: Rubber raft trips through Labor Day on the Rogue from Galice (near Grants Pass) to Illahe, Ore. Wild water through rugged canyons. Three-day camping trips $90 per adult, less for youngsters. "Lodge" stops for the night $10 extra. No fishing.

Orange Torpedo Trips, Box 1111, Grants Pass, Ore., 97526: Paddle-rafts on the Rogue from Almeda Park to Illahe; three days, 44 miles. Through Aug. 31, $150 per person. Day trips, 13 miles, from Indian Mary Park, $30, through September. Klamath River runs (two days, 34 miles) from Brown Bear Lodge through September, $100. Not for fishing.

Bob Pruitt River Trips, 1807 Thomas Rd., Medford, Ore., 97501: Three-day whitewater adventures, two passengers to a boat with "lodge" stops, $225 each; four-day trips $240 per person. This drops to $185 or less (three days) or $205 (four days) with three passengers to a boat. Pruitt has drift boats or high-speed, shallow draft jet boat trips for a single day at $17, lunch included. All are available through November.

Briggs Rogue River Guide Service, 2750 Cloverlawn Dr., Grants Pass, Ore., 97526: 70-mile scenic trips lasting three days: $330 per boat (two persons); four-day fishing trips, $550 per boat (two persons). Price includes licensed guide, food and lodgings and return trip to Grants Pass, if desired. (All operators provide delivery of your own car downstream at extra fee.) Through mid-November.

River Trips Unlimited, 1810 Corona Ave., Medford, Ore., 97501: Scenic "drift" or rubber boat trips lasting one through four days down the Rogue, through August: $20 to $165 per person. Four-day steelhead fishing runs through mid-November: $250 (parties of six or eight required). With three passengers per boat: $180. This firm also has one-day salmon and steelhead trips on the Rogue, Klamath, Smith and other coastal streams at $30 per person, starting Nov. 1.

Morrison's Lodge, Merlin, Ore., 97532: three-day whitewater raft trips from Merlin to Agness, through Sept. 1, $130 per person in groups of four or more, otherwise $150. Overnights at lodges enroute. There are also one-day, two-day and four-day trips at comparable prices. Fall steelhead trips, $100 a day per couple, with guide $50 or $60 extra.

Hellgate Excursions, Post Office Box 982, Grants Pass, Ore., 97526: Two-hour scenic trips in 32-foot jet boats through the rocky Hellgate Canyon, 18 miles below Grants Pass, and return to downtown. Three trips daily through Labor Day: $4 per person, children under 12, $2. Reservations (deposit) advised.

The Rogue has been declared an official "wild river" by the federal government, one of a very few accorded this status. For most of its length the only access is by boat, or on foot, along the rugged trails. (Pruitt in fact offers a hikers' service, carrying packs and gear to pre-determined locations.)

The scenic trips are made before the fall steelhead run, and are favored for boating, swimming, photography and nature-observing. The later runs benefit from some of America's finest sportfishing, climaxed by grilling steelhead or salmon on a sandy bar over an open fire.

You Can Change Your Scenery With A Movable Feast Of Color Plants

If you look upon container plants as portable props, and use them as beautiful accessories, the surroundings of your home and garden needn't ever be dull.

No matter what the season, there are always choice plants in bloom — as well as distinctive foliage plants —and featuring them in movable containers gives you the opportunity to enjoy them in prominent locations, indoors and out.

Right now, for instance, obtain and plant up Hibiscus shrubs in pink, red, yellow, gold and white for sensational color throughout the rest of summer. Hibiscus appreciates good drainage, hence growing the plants in containers is highly recommended by the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

WHITE, YELLOW and pink Marguerites are unfailing sources of summer color, as are Felicia (often called Blue Marguerite), Geraniums, and Transvaal Daisies. Since most will bloom more profusely in pots than in the ground, they are ideal for containers.

If you're entertaining, use the colorful plants indoors for the day, or overnight, for delightful, conversational decorations. Then you can move them once again outdoors into their natural environment.

The list of plants ready to bring dramatic color changes where you want them now is a long one. This barely scratches the surface. You'll get many other ideas by browsing through your local nursery.

FOLIAGE PLANTS are the backbone of a container plant collection. Once you start using artistic Japanese Black Pines, Azaleas, Camellias, Dwarf Citrus, Podocarpus, and Japanese Maples in portable containers, you will be encouraged to seek out even more possibilities for changing the scenery as you wish.

Shopping for plants, and the containers in which to showcase their beauty, is a fun experience. Be on the lookout for such unusual things as Sago Palms and Bottle Palm, whose gourd-like base supports finely textured, arching greenery. Your nurserymen will suggest other "exotics" that do very well in Marin.

Indoors, don't hesitate to try your hand at growing a tall, pendulous Weeping Fig (Ficus benjamina) in a decorative container. The creation will enhance the appearance of your rooms and furnishings, and bring enjoyment to those who share the natural beauty.

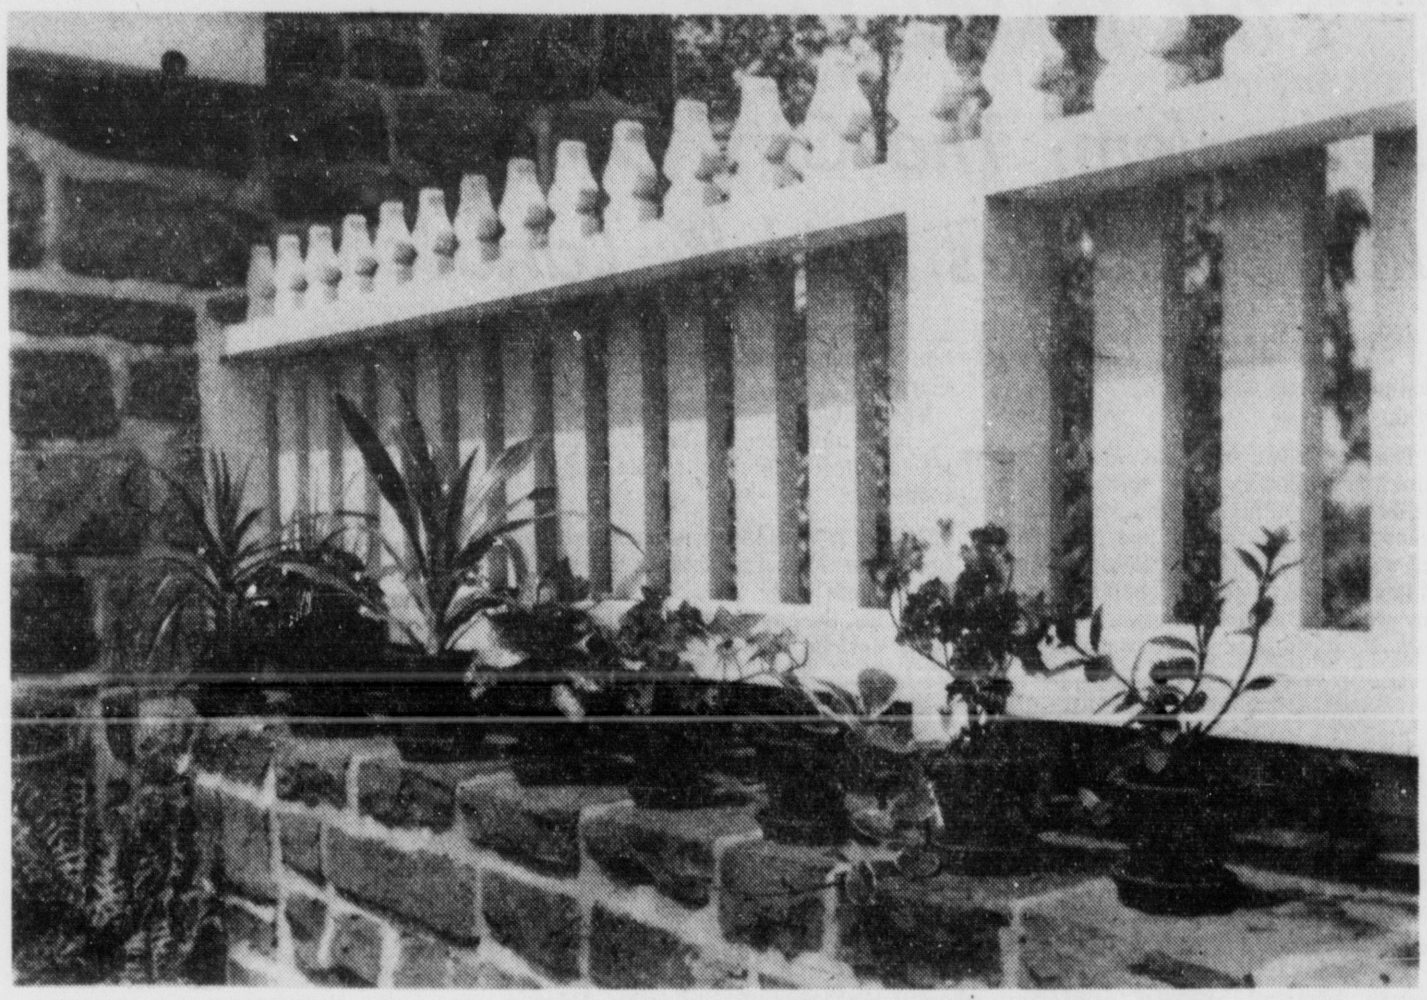
ALONG A GARDEN WALL



A GARDEN WALL or a fence almost requires plantings for their softening effect. Sometimes the conditions are such that planting your greenery in the ground itself is difficult. But you can always resort to containers, such as has been done here. Clay pots do fine, with their natural, earthy color. And your plants are now portable so that you can move them around, to follow or escape the sun temporarily, in cases of extreme weather.

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

Sometime this summer or autumn you might like to build and plant a rock garden. Fall is particularly recommended for this project because you plant as you build; but if you are moving small plants from your borders or can buy potted plants from the garden center you can build it any time that is convenient.

Of course Alpines are charmers and different from one's other plants. There are, however, many plants you may already have that are good for rock gardens. Alpines, too, tend to do their thing in the cool of the spring, and by choosing plants that bloom in succession you can have your rock garden in bloom here and there all season.

WHERE TO locate it?

Wherever you decide to have it, it should look natural. If you have a bank or slope, that may be the place. Land that has rocky outcrops and ledges is fine for such treatment, provided the soil is not too shallow. If your land is flat, you ay be able to build up a rocky bank against a stone wall.

Often behind a pool is a good place, again building a bank along the back of it against a hedge of shrubbery reinforced with big rocks. The mound type of rock garden sometimes seen sitting out in the open on a level lawn never seems to look as if it ought to be there.

So if one just must have a rock garden —and many of us feel we must — the initial challenge is to locate it where it looks as if it belongs in the garden landscape.

WHAT KIND OF rocks to use? Sometimes the landowner already has some. Weathered rocks of irregular and varied shapes, preferably of local stone, serve best. So if you buy a supply, get this kind. Thin flat ones and round boulders are hard to work in and should be used sparingly if at all.

Your rocks are going to be buried so only about one fourth will show.

Suppose you are turning a slope or bank into a rockery: First remove the topsoil and set it aside. Slant the slope back the way you want it and mix coarse drainage material into the subsoil — more or less depending on your subsoil. Clay will need small rocks, pieces of brick, and other sharp drainage material.

Before placing the rocks, you might like to study natural rock formations and a few well-planned rock gardens elsewhere. You don't want rocks in rows, or of the same shapes together. The trick is to set them so they look as if they belonged there.

OVER THE subsoil spread about three-fourths of your topsoil, a layer about two feet deep. The rest you are going to use to fill in among the rocks.

Starting at the bottom of your bank and with the biggest rocks, dig out soil for each rock and set it in, with the broadest and flattest side at the base. The rocks should be tilted up in front so moisture will run down them into the bank.

As you go along, filling in between the rocks with soil and tamping it firm with a short length of two-by-two or something similar, set in your plants, spreading the roots back in and packing the soil around them.

WEATHERED ROCKS OF irregular shape take on the look of belonging in a garden. As far as the eye can tell, they have always been there. And the gardener has an easily-maintained landscaping for a difficult care area.

Water the whole thing with a fine spray to settle the pockets and clean the rock surfaces. Don't plant every cranny. Save some for things you plant later, like a few little spring-flowering bulbs. Have the crannies different sizes and shapes, too.

IF YOUR location suggests it, a few dwarf evergreens will look well. Dwarf Mugho pine, dwarf box, and Cornish heath are among these. The prostrate Cotoneaster horizontalis is a beautiful plant if there is room.

From your garden borders you can transplant small things suitable for a rock garden. Here are some I moved into mine as I built it: Alyssum saxatile, dwarf columbine, Campanula carpatina, Iris cristata, perennial candytuft, sempervivum (houseleek), some saxifrages and some thymes, curly-leaved mints, Sedum acre, phlox subulata, violas, Vinca minor, nd pinks.

In most regions of the United States the intense heat and direct sun of our summers are difficult for all but early spring Alpines. (I did once try edelweiss for sentiment, but it needed the Swiss Alps for a backdrop.)

In autumn you can add some of the lesser bulbs — crocus, scilla, miniature daffodils and jonquils, and the dainty species tulips.

Your rock garden asks for little care. It does need generous watering, though, and always with a fine spray. For some plants feeding is welcome, and, of course, at intervals a spot of hand weeding.

Night Light Can Upset Your 'Mum

If your garden chrysanthemums do not set bud it may be because they are near an outdoor night light.

Bud set is influenced by the length of day and night. Generally, they set bud when the day shortens. Outdoor lighting thus would lengthen the day period and keep them from setting bud. Try covering the plants from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. with black cloth or black plastic to encourage bloom.

THIS WEEK'S CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓You should be feeding your Fuchsias lightly every three weeks or monthly. And Chrysanthemums should be fed lightly twice a month up until the buds show color.

✓Pots of Chrysanthemum in bloom are a quick and ideal solution to the problem of the summer-time bare spot in the garden.

✓Add years of life to your garden hose. Protect it by using a hose reel or storing it on a wallhanger.

✓Petunias and other annuals which are losing their first bloom can be cut back, and fed, to encourage a second flush of flowers.

✓Brighten the garden scene with yellow Marguerites and low mounds of blue Ageratum, in the foreground. Nurseries will offer both in full color this month; what quicker way to fill in garden bare spots?

✓Camellias will be soon setting buds for next year's bloom. Make sure the plants are well watered during warm weather. An overhead sprinkling is always welcome.

✓Shop for, and plant corms of the showy Autumn Crocus — sold as Colchicum. They will flower soon after planting.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

Here's Lesson In Furnishing One Of The Problem Areas

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Living rooms are not meant to be showrooms where we sit uptight and put on party manners.

Living rooms should provide formality on certain occasions, but they also should offer feet-up comfort during those precious hours when the family relaxes and gets the most mileage out of its environment.

Floor plans sometimes seem to create problems when it comes to striking a balance between family and formal use.

The living room that shares its open space with dining facilities is a perfect example. The moment you devote a specified space to dining furniture, the remaining area for living room furnishings seems minimal.

Designed for a new community in Florida called Poinciana, the floor plan combines living-dining areas. The average home owner would probably be tempted to succumb to a cliche placement of one sofa, a big coffee table and two lounge chairs. Or she might have selected a pair of loveseats and used them on opposite sides of the room.

THE DESIGNER, a staff member of Armstrong Cork Co., prudently ordered an elongated chaise longue and placed it across the window openings. This left more of the available floor space free for family traffic, provided feet-up seating for more than one family member, and also utilized the nice daylight relationship with the outdoors.

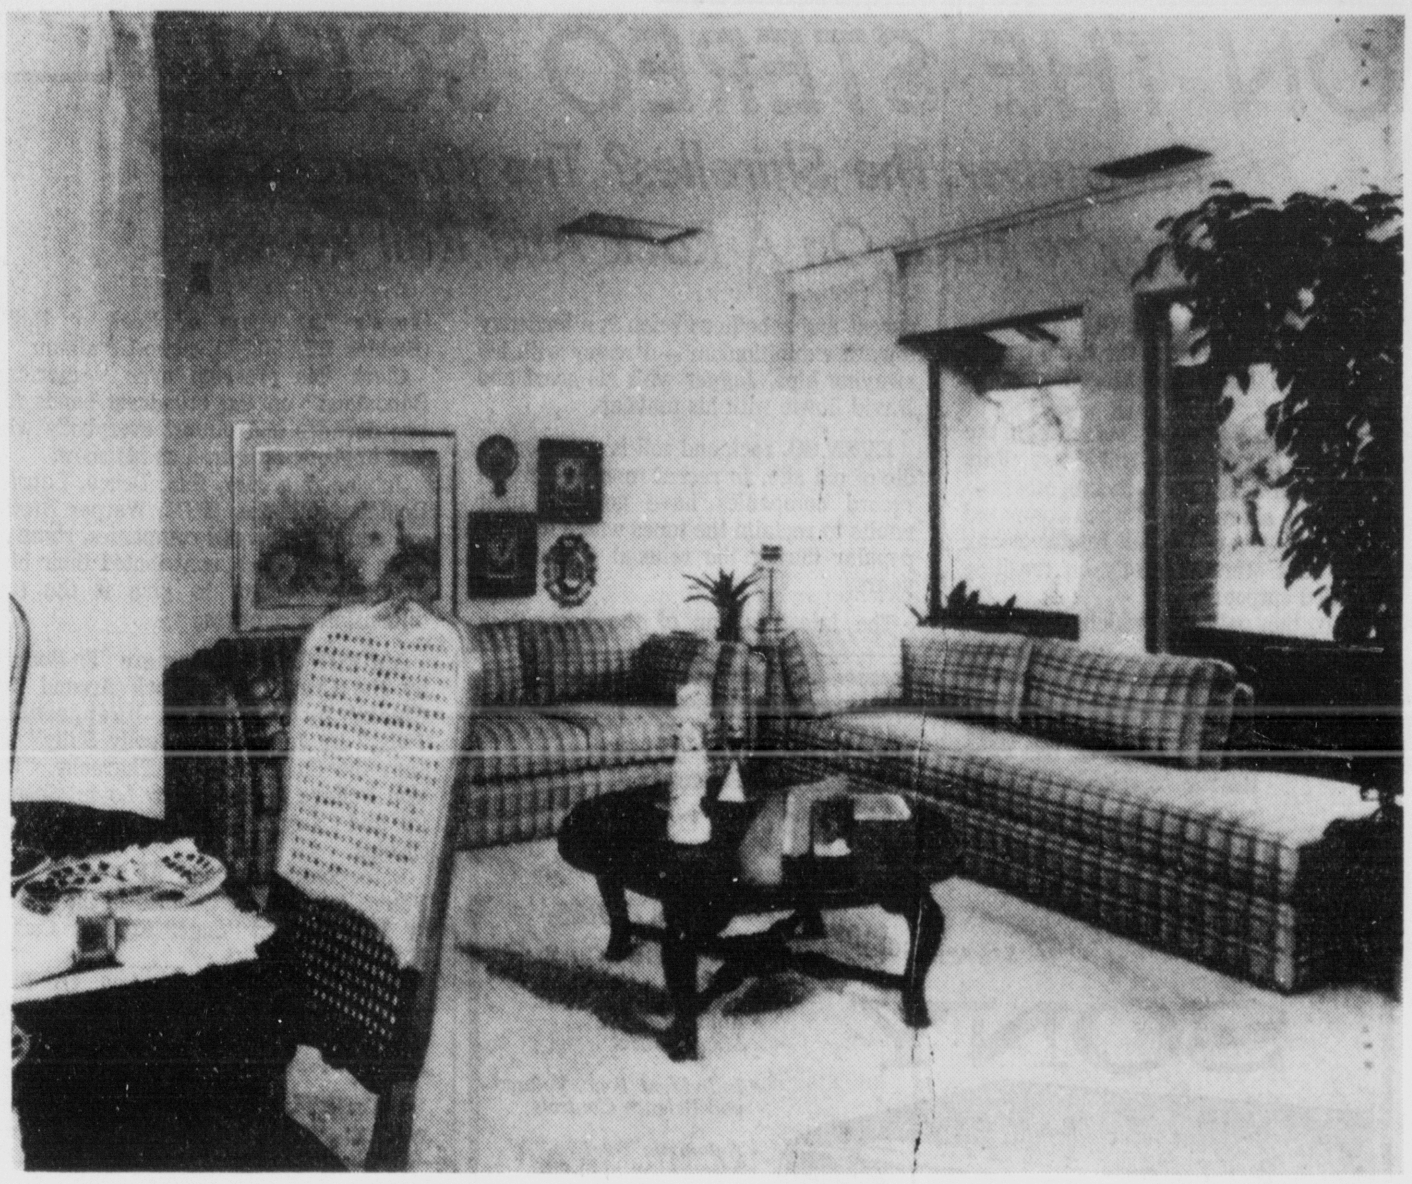
There are pull-up chairs available in addition to the dining chairs, so an overflow crowd can be made completely at ease. But during no-guest periods, there are fewer individual pieces of furniture eating up space.

THE FURNISHINGS and low-shag carpeting are all part of a pleasing country look being developed by companies like Armstrong and Thomasville for today's needs. But the project in Poinciana is part of a living experiment to solve problems with furnishings designed to fulfill specific purposes.

Sometimes it seems the needs in the home in no way relate to the needs in the furniture store — hence the lack of alternatives when it comes to shopping for problem spaces.



WHEN SPACE IS SMALL, or shared, it is wise — and nice — to minimize the number of furnishings, and especially of leggy objects. While this living-dining area wasn't lacking in space, it didn't offer much in the way of solid walls for furniture placement. The solution was a neat grouping of seating pieces emphasizing comfort, settled comfortably atop a gentle shag rug from Armstrong.

To Remodel Or To Buy? That Is The Question

By VIVIAN BROWN

Making a choice between remodeling a house and buying a larger one is a prime-time decision, advises one man who says an addition he built five years ago has priced him out of the real estate market in his area.

This is the time of year, he cautions, when enthusiasms are likely to run high and one may be carried away by agreeing to house pluses. You may start out needing an extra bedroom and bath and end up tacking to the plan a built-in swimming pool, work shop, sauna, sewing room, dog kennel.

He was promoted into a photography-projection room by his son, now at college, and he must wait until a "photography nut" wants that kind of house, he says.

HE IS IN the same position as a friend who had built dog kennels. The friend had to wait two years until he found dog people who were willing to pay the price for a house with an $8,000 kennel addition.

In agreeing to the projection room he is afraid he permitted himself to be influenced by the thought of making his house look more important than the look alikes in his development row. But people attracted to his neighborhood simply cannot afford to pay $15,000 more for his house.

The extra bedroom and bath would have been saleable, but how many people need a fully equipped photography room?

THE REMODELING vs. new house decision must be made carefully, agreed two other people who have had similar experiences. An extra bedroom and bath is the limit in many neighborhoods.

If one is in a good area and wants to stay, the next step is to consider how much money can safely be put into an addition. A fair-size extension to a house may not be as costly as one might think if one equates it with current housing prices, but even a fair-sized addition may be too much of a plus for some neighborhoods.

One man offers these suggestions in determining which course would be more worthwhile:

DECIDE HOW much space is needed, consult an architect, show his drawing to a builder for an estimate, consult the local bank to see how much the home improvement loan would cost. Figure the painting and decorating along with all the other costs to get a useful round figure as to how much would be in your house at the end.

Banks can advise whether you are making a good investment in your area by adding a particular addition to a house (or buying or building one.) Real estate appraisers can give you the fair market price of the house now and then.

Next look at some houses before you make the ultimate decision to remodel or move. The larger house in its better neighborhood should be a good investment. It may be an emotional wrench and a chore for the family to move. But once accomplished, things soon get back to normal, especially if you have made a step up the ladder to a better house and neighborhood.

THE NEW BIGGER house should make everyone happy after the initial trauma has passed.

If one is living in a neighborhood with homes in a wide range of prices, one can look at the remodeling project in a different light. Just about anything you do in the way of improvements will increase the value of your property and be saleable. But you must make sure the addition has wide appeal.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I am a beginner in woodworking. So far I have just been practicing on scrap wood. I'd like to put up some shelving in a cabinet. What kind of supports should I use to hold up the shelves? The shelves will be pieces of one- by-10 pine.

A. — There is no one answer to that question, simply because there are several factors you did not mention. Most important are the length of the shelves and what will be put on them. Also to be taken into consideration is whether you are building the cabinet yourself or merely adding shelves to it. The simplest of all shelf joints is where the shelf is inserted between sides of the cabinet and then nailed or screwed into place through the vertical sides. But this is done only when the shelves will be called on to support light objects and the shelves are not too long; roughly, no longer than 32 inches.

Two pieces of wood glued and screwed into the inside of the vertical sides will serve as a shelf support and hold more weight than the butt joints previously described. This cleat-type of support can also be utilized with metal angle irons instead of wood.

If you are building the cabinet from scratch and have a router or other power tool to handle the job, making grooves in the sides and then fitting the shelves into them produces a neat and efficient result. These grooves can also be made with a saw and chisel, but it takes longer, is more tedious and requires a certain amount of skill.

There are various kinds of ready-made brackets and supports that can be used, some strictly functional, some both functional and decorative, although the latter type appears unnecessary on the inside of a cabinet that has a door.

Q. — The resilient floor tiles in our kitchen are about 10 years old and have faded from sunlight. They are still solidly attached to the floor. Can I put new tiles over the old and how can I prevent them from fading?

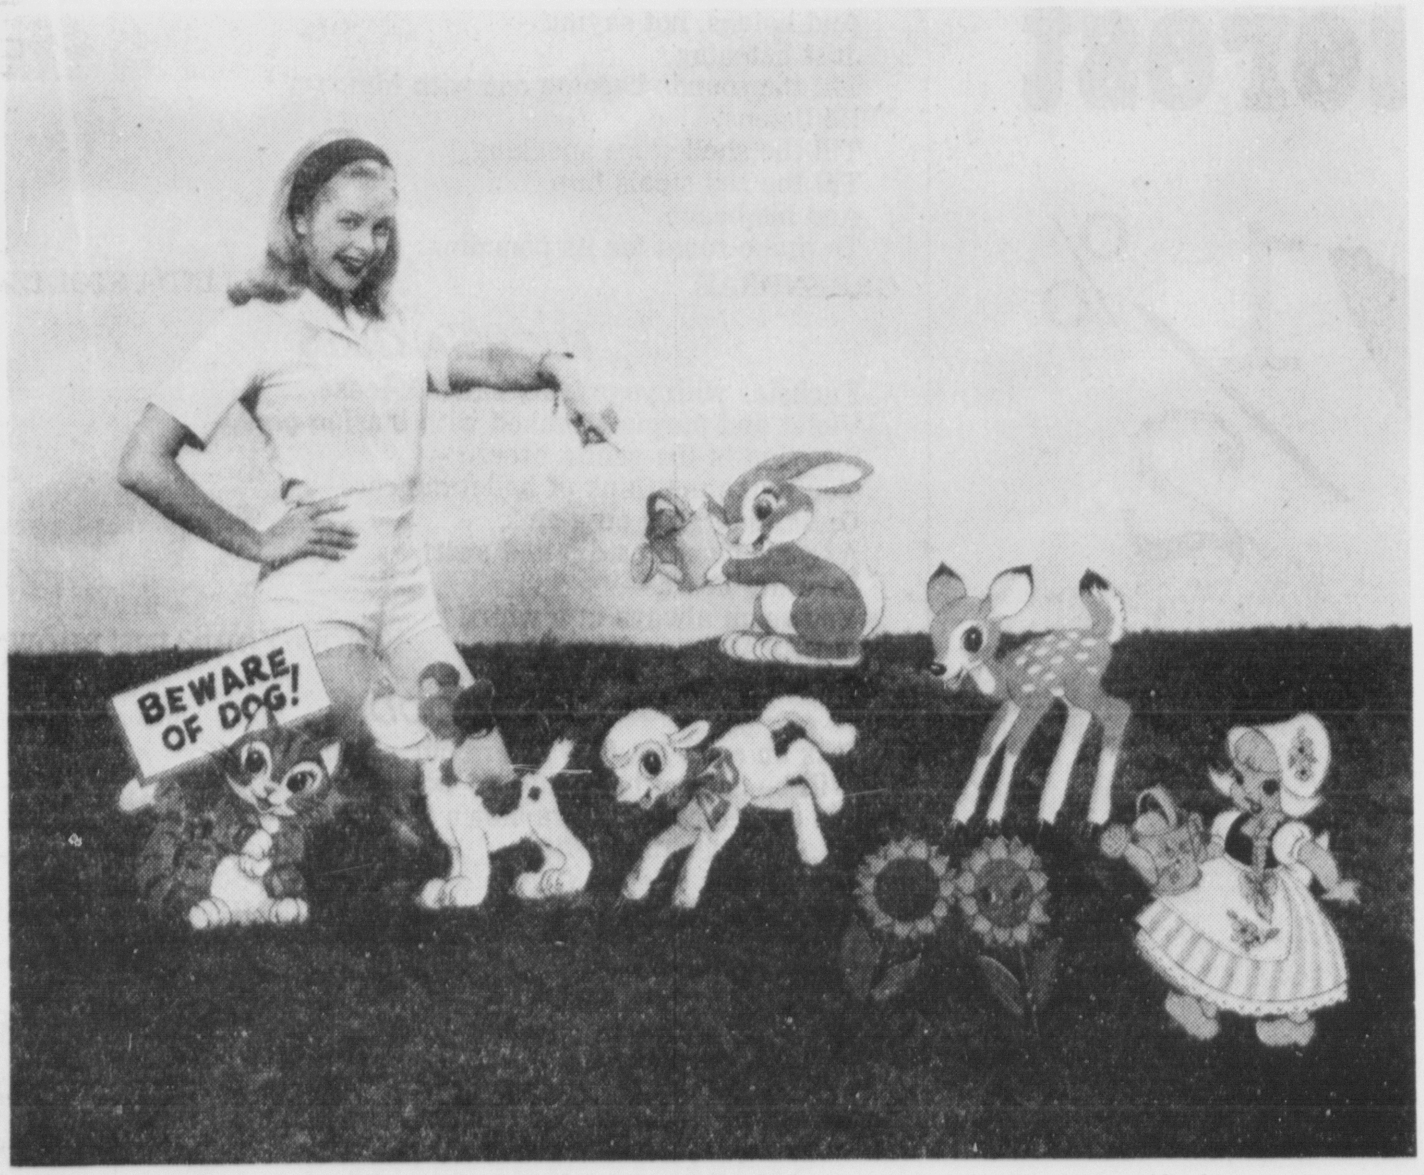
A. — Any floor constantly exposed to the sunlight will fade over a period of years. Tiles especially formulated to resist fading should be chosen for a room where sunshine streams in most of the day. Yes, you can put new tiles over old, but they will stay in place only as long as the old ones do.

Q. — I want to put in one of those air conditioners that are installed directly in the wall. Can you tell me how to install it?

A. — I can, but it would take half of this page. The dealer where you buy the air conditioner has written instructions for the project. But before you select the machine, be sure you give your dealer every possible bit of information, including where it will be installed, whether you have insulation, the number of windows in the room, etc.

(For either of Andy Lang's booklets, "Paint Your House Inside and Out" or "Installing Resilient Tiles," send 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, Post Office Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743.)

PUT SOME FUN IN YOUR LAWN



BEWARE OF DOG!

ONE OF THE best ways to give your lawn a touch of distinction in its neighborhood is to add a few imaginative ornaments. The ones being shown you here by actress Carol Wells, no mean ornament herself, are guaranteed to give any yard new life. They have all been made with the help of Steve Ellingson patterns. For that same assistance for yourself, send $2 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Lawn Ornament Patterns Assortment C-14. Then all you have to do is trace the full-size pattern onto regular plywood (scrap pieces are all you need), saw it out with a coping saw, and paint over tracings that show you exactly which color goes where. With that, your lawn ornament is complete. But these little figures can do more than simply decorate your lawn. They can be used on mail boxes, as weathervanes, on gates, barns or sheds, or wherever else your fancy might indicate. Wherever you place them, you have come up with an assortment of eye-catchers and conversation-starters. And furthermore, you have catered to your own ego by producing something of which you can honestly say: "I made it myself." After you have finished with the ornaments, you might want to tackle a Dutch Windmill for the garden. For that project, send another $2 to the same address, and ask for Pattern 397.

ON THE STEREO SCENE —

Remember The Shirelles? The Kingsmen? They're Back On A Rock And Roll Re-do

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

The rhythm that was popularized in the 1950s by Elvis Presley, Bill Haley, Fats Domino and Joey Dee — among others — now seems old-fashioned when compared with the sounds of a Mick Jagger or any of the rock stars who rely on crashing amplified outpourings.

About the only tie which binds the parent and rebellious scion is a tendency toward exhibitionism — Presley with his swaying hips, Jagger with his scarf and David Bowie with his makeup.

EVEN SO, rock and roll is not about to die of old age. In recent months, several record companies have gone to their vaults to reclaim the tunes which were so popular during the relaxed Eisenhower years.

The latest is one of the best, Dick Clark's "20 Years of Rock n' Roll" (Buddah BDs 5133-2), a two-LP album.

Clark has presided over "American Bandstand" on the broadcast bands for two decades and almost everybody who was anybody appeared on his show.

Jubilee, Mercury, Sun, Decca, Laurie, Roulette, Atlantic, MGM, Warner Brothers and other record companies, some of them long extinct, contributed their hits to this collection to give it the full dimension it requires.

AMONG THE numbers are "Sh-Boom" by the Crew Cuts, "Rock Around the Clock" by Bill Haley, "Peppermint Twist" by Joey Dee, "Woolly Bully" by Sam the Sham and the Pharaohs, "Do You Believe in Magic" by Lovin' Spoonful and "Crying in the Chapel" by the Orioles.

Late comers include Al Green's "So You're Leaving," "Candles in the Rain" by Melanie, and "Super Fly" by Curtis Mayfield.

Remember the Shangri-Las, the Shirelles, Brenda Lee, Frankie Avalon, the Everly Brothers, and the Kingsmen? Their hit songs also are featured.

UNFORTUNATELY, Presley is not represented, possibly because of contractual red tape. This omission is unimportant, however, since Elvis has made numerous recordings for RCA Victor that are available at most record stores.

ELVIS PRESLEY
He's still the king

While it is impossible to predict the outcome of an engagement involving personalities of separated generations — such as a fight between Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis or an assessment of Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron — it is safe to say that Presley would have been a great star had he started his career in the 1970s instead of the middle 1950s.

During the last week of June, Presley made four appearances in a two-day period — matinees and night shows — at the cavernous Nassau Coliseum just beyond the limits of New York City and packed the massive auditorium in each appearance.

PRESLEY WAS showing the inevitable encroachments of time upon man. He was somewhat heavier than the lithe man who returned to live appearances after a nine-year absence in 1969. The swiveling hips no longer gyrated and the dynamic leg movements were almost reduced to wobbles. Yet Presley electrified the audiences with his personal magnetism and extracted squeals from girls who were not yet born when he came out of Memphis with "Blue Suede Shoes."

Elvis is still the King. Long live the King!

Curt Gowdy Loves His Fishing

By VERNON SCOTT

Curt Gowdy has emerged as television's top sportscaster, appearing on both NBC and ABC. And when he can steal a few days from his busy schedule he devotes his time to his own favorite sport, fishing.

A personable man with a relaxes outlook on life, Gowdy and his wife, Jerre, have been married 24 years. He is probably the only weekly television personality who makes his home in Wellesley Hills, Mass., a handy 25 minutes from the Boston airport.

Because he spends almost as much time in jets as he does at home, flying to cities across the United States, a nearby airport is a necessity.

GOWDY, A FORMER six-letter man at the University of Wyoming, lives in a large English Tudor home of red brick set on five acres which includes a swimming pool. He first went to Boston to broadcast the Red Sox games in 1951 and liked the area so well he decided to stay.

They both love New England, so they purchased a 500-acre farm near Franconia, N.H., more than a year ago.

The ancient house is built of native fieldstone and looks like an old English hunting lodge. There are seven bedrooms to accomodate the Gowdy offspring and their friends.

THEY ARE THE parents of Cheryl, 22; Curt Jr., 20, and Trevor, 16.

It's a two and a half hour drive from Boston to their country home, a trip Jerre and Curt make as often as possible during the summer.

When the snow begins to pile up, the Gowdy's enjoy skiing on nearby mountains. They own three snowmobiles for family fun in the winter.

In summer Curt enjoys fishing in nearby lakes and streams. But if he gets the itch to fish in winter he and Jerre fly down to their condominium home in Key Biscayne, Fla.

CURT WORKS almost every weekend of his life broadcasting baseball, basketball, football and special sporting events, so he must schedule trips to New England or Florida during the week.

The Gowdy home in Massachusetts is furnished in gracious antiques and Tiffany lamps. The New Hampshire house is more rustic and has a breathtaking view of the mountains.

One room in the Gowdy home is a radio studio. Curt broadcasts his network show from the house, saving him the drive to Boston. He also owns three radio stations in Laurence, Mass., Laramie, Wyo., and Portsmouth, N.H.

HE IS ALSO international field tester for the Berkeley Co., which is a labor of love. The firm manufacturers Curt Gowdy fishing rods.

Gowdy is an authority on ecology and a national director of Trout Unlimited. His biggest thrill did not come in sports at all, but when a state park in Cheyenne, Wyo., was named in his honor in March, 1972.

When he's not broadcasting or fishing — which is seldom — Curt enjoys a game of tennis. But patching up the New Hampshire farmhouse has been a major preoccupation in the past year.

THINGS ARE A bit easier for the couple in Wellesley Hills where there is always help in the house. Jerre needs as much as she can get with 17 rooms to look after and a garden which Curt enjoys planting in the spring.

The future looms bright for the Gowdys who are thinking about installing a ski resort in New Hampshire — and a fish camp for the summer.

Star Trek Creator Had No Idea Of What Future Held

Little did Gene Roddenberry realize what he was starting when he began work, almost a decade ago, on a science fiction television series called "Star Trek," being produced by Film ation Associates for this fall's Saturday daytime schedule.

"I had no idea at the time that 'Star Trek" would one day be so popular," Roddenberry says. "We know of 3,000 active fan clubs, and there are probably more."

IN A NEWLY published book, "The World of 'Star Trek'," author David Gerrold explores why "Star Trek" is the definitive science fiction series.

"Just as it is impossible to write a science fiction story about robots without being aware of Issac Asimov's massive body of work in the area, it will be impossible to do stories about interstellar explorers without recognition of the ground covered by 'Star Trek'," Gerrold writes.

"In developing 'Star Trek' as he did, Gene Roddenberry accomplished a feat of no small magnitude. Whatever else one may say about 'Star Trek' and how it accomplished its goals, one cannot deny that it established a new genre for television — a genre as distinct and rigid as the Western, the cop show, the private-eye, the doctor series and the situation comedy. Gene Roddenberry developed the 'Star Trek' format.

" 'STAR TREK' wasn't the first place the concept of men exploring the galaxy appeared — but then again, Shakespeare wasn't the first writer to deal with Troilus and Cressida. Shakespeare just did it a little better. And so did Roddenberry.

"The difference is that when Shakespeare was through with 'Troilus and Cressida' it was recognized as the last word on the subject and no one else attempted it. Roddenberry's 'Star Trek' however, will stand not as a landmark — only as a challenge.

"The series will be recongized as the best statement of form only until someone betters it. And it will be bettered. Someday. Television demands that it continue to top itself."

Gerrold was one of the first writers contacted by "Star Trek" story editor Dorothy C. Fontana to write for NBC-TV's new "Star Trek." Gerrold's "The Touble with Tribbles" is one of the most honored of the live-action shows, having been nominated for both the Hugo Award and the Georges Melies Award for Outstanding Cinematic Achievement in Science Fiction, Television.

THE STORY focused on Tribbles: furry little animals whose only purpose was to reproduce. In the sequel, written for the animated "Star Trek," Gerrold deals with "safe" Tribbles. They don't reproduce, they only grow larger. And larger. And larger.

Whatever The Job, Don't Sluff It Off

"Whether you're doing a comedy or dramatic series or just a one-time shot, don't sluff it off as just another series or just another performance," says Dom DeLuise, star of NBC-TV's "Lotsa Luck," new fall comedy series. "I believe a performer should take the attitude that if it's worth doing, it's worth doing well."

ARMANDO ISLAS IS cast as Manuel, a young orphan runaway who with his faithful dog Pancho outsmarts a horse thief on the West Texas plains in the 1880s, in "Pancho, the Fastest Paw in the West," an adventure story to be given a repeat colorcast Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Channels 3 and 4.

TUNING IN ON THE TV

By JACK GAVER

Elgin Baylor, retired star of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association, will be an analyst for NBA games broadcast by CBS starting in October.

A new Saturday morning program for children on NBC, "Sigmund and the Sea Monsters," a live-action show, will have Johnny Whitaker and Billy Barty as stars.

Still another dramatic version of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," a story that has served stage, screen, radio and Video several times, will be seen as a two-hour NBC special. Successful Broadway playwright Sidney Michaels will be the adapter.

ABC plans for the new season a two-hour dramatic work titled "F. Scott Fitzgerald and 'The Last of the Belles.' " It is a biographical look at the late novelist combined with one of his short stories. Richard Chamberlain will portray the author, and Broadway's Blythe Danner will play his wife, the equally flamboyant Zelda.

By TED STANGER

PARIS (UPI) — Movie fans still mourn Gerard Philippe, the boyish-faced idol of French stage and screen, who died of leukemia in 1959.

Stunned by Philippe's sudden death at age 36, his most ardent admirers started what is now a Gerard Philippe cult.

His films are constantly being revived in the Latin Quarter of the French capital, the Mecca for French "cinephiles" movie addicts. A recent showing of "Le Diable au Corps" (Devil in the Body) in which Philippe played his archetypal role of the youthful seducer, drew long lines of fans.

FARTHER DOWN the quarter's main street, the Boulevard Saint Michel, on the same evening, the latest film of modern star Alain Delon played to a half-filled house.

Permanent homage is enshrined in the Gerard Philippe theater, which stages plays around the year. Few others — one is Sarah Bernhardt — can claim the equal distinction of having a Paris theater-namesake.

For his still loyal fans Philippe remains the object of a posthumous cult like that for Humphrey Bogart, minus the tough-guy cynicism of the American.

PHILIPPE WAS anything but the tough guy, in acting or in real life. A tall man with a shock of unruly brown hair, he had large blue eyes and features that bespoke abiding youth.

His image was that of the young romantic and when the script called for seduction, he used what one film critic called "a disarming sincerity" rather than a Bogartian world-weary disdain.

"Gerard was loved and remains loved," offered Henri Pichette, a poet friend of the actor. Pichette's theory is that Philippe is adored for the very reason that, unlike other actors, he sought to avoid public adulation.

PHILIPPE LIVED quietly with his wife Anne and provided no fodder for the scandal sheets. In France, where "discretion" is a way of life, Philippe's own modest ways brought, it seems, all the more admiration.

The question of Philippe's greatness among 20th Century French actors is rarely disputed. Other names — Pierre Fresnay, Raimu, Louis Jouvet, Michel Simon, Jean-Louis Barrault, Pierre Brasseur — often come up, but hardly with the same regularity.

Another attraction may be that Philippe never "went Hollywood." In a country that now finds it fashionable to imitate American faded blue jeans, hamburgers and "Le Drugstore," Philippe's old-fashioned Gallic steadfastness may have a nostalgic charm.

AT THE VERY pinnacle of his popularity, when producers were vying with drawn checkbooks to sign him, Philippe forsook the screen for the legitimate stage to act in the 17th Century classics for a paltry $6,000 a month.

It was in his role as the lead of Corneille's play "Le Cid," a classic drama long-relegated to high school literature classes, that Philippe raised theatergoing eyebrows and entered the galaxy of all-time classic Thespians.

He proved that he was a good actor as well as a famous one.

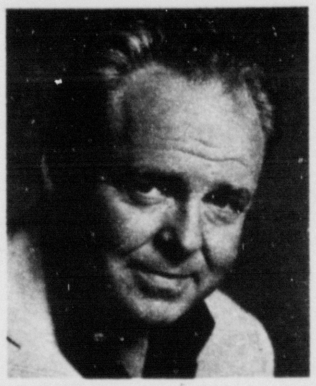
Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.



FOR CARROLL O'CONNOR

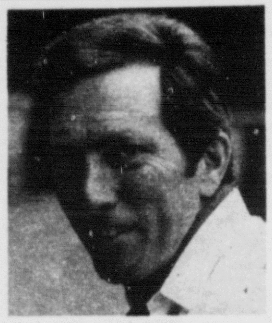
I read in a magazine that you are totally opposite to your role in "All in the Family." Is this true?—Harold Presley, Stockton, Calif.

● Archie and I differ when it comes to civil rights, politics and the treatment of members of one's family and friends. But we are also alike in some ways. Archie doesn't like swearing around women, and that is a value I hold and pass on to my son. Archie has a short temper, and so do I. Archie doesn't like promiscuity, and although I consider myself a liberal, I too won't tolerate promiscuity under my roof.

FOR DOUGLAS EDWARDS, newscaster

I heard you tell an anecdote involving the late Adlai Stevenson and a latter-day Mrs. Malaprop. Could you repeat it?—K. C. Johnson, Utica, N.Y.

● The lady came up to Mr. Stevenson after one of his addresses and said, "Your speech was absolutely superfluous." He smiled and said, "Perhaps I should publish it posthumously." The woman said, "Oh, yes, the sooner the better."



FOR ANDY WILLIAMS

When you started in show business, you were one of the Williams Brothers team. Whatever happened to your brothers?—J. N., Ann Arbor, Mich.

FOR CYBILL SHEPHERD, actress and former winner of the "Model of the Year" award

What were you thinking during that nude scene in "The Last Picture Show"?—Mary Roblez, Paterson, N.J.

● Actually it was a semi-nude scene, in which I stood on a diving board and tossed my bra into the pool. I did the scene only because it was natural for Jacy, the spoiled, rich-kid heroine, to do such a thing. I do remember thinking (a testament to my proper upbringing), a split second before I disrobed: "If God is going to strike me dead, let it be quick!"

FOR TAYLOR CALDWELL, author

You give the impression that you don't think the Women's Liberation Movement has much of a future. True?—Mrs. John Morrison, Atlantic City, N.J.

● I am sure it doesn't have a future, because American women have never had it so good. Most are shrewd enough to realize this and are not interested in changing that situation.

FOR SANDY DUNCAN

Now that your show is canceled, do you have any plans to quit show business?—Barbara Lacey, Pittsburgh, Pa.

● I was sorry it was canceled, but I believe things happen for the best. And who knows? I might be doing something more interesting a year from now. I don't plan to quit show business—maybe I will when I'm 50. Then I'd like to get a place in Carmel, Calif., and settle down there.

FOR SEN. JAMES B. PEARSON (R-Kans.)

I read in some reports that the family farm is alive and kicking, and in others that big business has taken over. Who's right?—N. O. Bettinger, Des Moines, Iowa

● There's no question that the family farm is still the dominant unit in American agriculture. Nevertheless, there are trouble signs. For example, 30 percent of our fresh vegetables, 25 percent of our potatoes, 30 percent of our citrus fruits and 60 percent of our sugarcane are produced by large conglomerates.

FOR JAMES MACARTHUR of "Hawaii Five-O"

Is it true you are in the dress business in Hawaii?—D. O., San Diego, Calif.

● Not exactly, but my wife Melody [actress Melody Patterson] has a boutique. I help her out sometimes by fixing things up, painting, putting down the floor. I'm sort of a general all-around handyman.

FOR CASS ELLIOT

Is a successful marriage particularly difficult for a performer?—G. Wood, San Mateo, Calif.

● If a woman is more successful than her husband, then problems are going to come up no matter how bright or intellectual the couple is. In my first marriage, people paid more attention to me than to my husband, now a drummer with James Taylor's group. I found that it was only so long that a man could tolerate being called "Mr. Elliot."

FOR MERLE OBERON

I've always been in love with you—from my seat in the movie theater, of course. Can you tell me what your favorite movie was, and who was your favorite costar? — A. Andrews, Albany, N.Y.

● "Wuthering Heights" was my favorite movie, since it was almost flawless. The truth, the authenticity of it! A lot of the credit goes to Sam Goldwyn, who found all the people and put them together. My favorite costar, I suppose, is Larry Olivier, an actor who was a friend and with whom my relations were always the best. I also loved working with Leslie Howard, and I had an exciting acting experience with Marlon Brando, playing Josephine to his Napoleon in "Desiree." Around me, at least, Brando was very amiable and helpful.

By Amy Vanderbilt:

Candid Confessions of a Talk-Show "Guest"

"If the show is live, I always seem to look much heavier than I do when it is taped. I also find that on CBS I look fatter than I do on NBC (or is it vice versa?). A rule of thumb is that television puts on about 20 pounds."

"Television has its pluses," says Amy Vanderbilt. "Perhaps one plus is that it reminds me to keep forever on my best behavior."

Television is easy for me now and very relaxed, but it wasn't always so. Even today, every once in a while something happens that shakes me up, although people tell me it doesn't show.

I've been on the "Mike Douglas Show" many times. In fact I was on his program in Chicago before he was nationally known. Just recently on his show, he reminded me of the faux pas I committed there just after my book was first published in 1952. (The book, by the way, which has been completely revised this past year, has a new title—"Amy Vanderbilt's Etiquette.") I was used to television by then, but I was certainly not as comfortable on it as I am now.

TV people frequently think of etiquette first in relation to table manners, and Mike was no exception. The table before me was set by the property men with a large array of cutlery. They had used the illustrations in my book as a guide. "Now," asked Mike, "if you sit down to a table set like this, from which side do you take up the silver—the side nearer the plate, or the side farther from the plate?" Without batting an eye, I said, "You take the silver from the inside." There was instant silence in the studio and Mike looked at me startled. "You can't mean that," he said. At this point I came to and corrected myself. You take it, of course, from the outside in.

Today I don't worry about such little slips. As Lowell Thomas told me years ago when I used to worry about fluffs on radio, people like it when an expert stumbles a little. He told me he often purposely made a slip in order to sound more "human."

I've appeared on radio and television in many corners of the world. In Osaka, Japan, they had a little fun at my expense and at the expense of Americans and Europeans. We were guests on the inaugural flight of Japan Air Lines via Paris, Moscow and Siberia to Tokyo. During the course of our visit to Japan, we appeared as a group – I was the only American woman correspondent – on Osaka television.

It was an Ed Sullivan-type show, with a little Japanese shoemaker busily demonstrating the making of getas, wooden-soled clogs. We were seated at the side of the stage and the studio audience watched us intently. In a pause in the demonstration, it was announced to the audience – in Japanese, of course – that we would be given getas as souvenirs of our trip. Each in turn was ceremoniously presented with a beautifully wrapped box. We were urged to open our gifts and to try on the getas. But when we opened the boxes, the getas were Japanese-sized—which meant, of course, about half the size of an American or European foot. This broke up the studio audience, and presumably the televiewers watching us. Then they explained—in case we didn't realize it—that it was a joke. Out came additional boxes, this time with getas that fit.

Perhaps you saw me recently on the "Mike Douglas Show," which is taped in Philadelphia and syndicated nationally. Again, Mike was curious about table manners and teamed me with Rocky Graziano (television people think it makes interesting programming to team me with somebody unlikely, for what they consider "shock value"). Rocky and I have been on shows together before, and he is very easy and pleasant to work with. The makeup man on that show, George, doubles as property man. After he made me up, he asked me to go backstage to inspect the table he had set for my part of the show with Rocky and another boxer. Certainly there was nothing elegant about the table setting, and I realized that George was rather limited in his backstage supplies. There was very undistinguished plated silver, and big pile of dishes, glasses, cups and plates. I asked him to take half of them off, but most importantly to straighten the round, fringed tablecloth, so it would hang evenly. Everybody assured me this would be done.

Later, onstage and in front of the cameras, I glanced at the table. The cloth was completely lopsided. Nothing could be done about it then, of course. Fortunately, everybody realized that I didn't mean the table to look as it did. No one complained.

I have a very good sense of time, and up to now have never worn a watch. I was on Fred Griffith's "Morning Exchange" on WEWS-TV in Cleveland the other morning for ¾ of an hour. As the show was drawing to a close, he leaned over, took my wrist and held it in the air. Turning to the audience, he said, "I suspect that she could buy any watch for herself that she wanted to have, but she chooses to wear a Mickey Mouse!" Then, turning to me, he said, "How come?" I explained that it was a gift of Edward Downe, Jr., chairman of the board of Downe Communications. He had been a recent dinner guest at my house and brought me the watch as a funny present. "I expect you to wear it," he said. And I've worn it ever since, in spite of my husband's jealousy. He had been trying to give me a watch for years and had finally become discouraged.

One terrible trial I have had on television is that, if the show is live, I always seem to look much heavier than I do when it is taped. I also find that on CBS I look fatter than I do on NBC (or is it vice versa?). A rule of thumb is that television puts on about 20 pounds. Of course, a still camera can do the same thing. (In a recent ad I did, I was photographed from below and I seem to have three chins.) Actually, I am a size 12-14 these days, after years of hard work trying to fit the requirements of the camera. If I got down to about a size 8, I might look like a size 12 on camera, so I'm afraid it is a losing battle for me. And no one who knows me and my big bones can imagine me a size 8 either!

But no one minds my being quite personal about this problem that should be my own private one. I was posing in Central Park for one of the last issues of "Life," and a hyperactive hippie came bounding out of the park. "Hey, Amy," he said, "you've lost a lot of weight!" I hadn't, of course. It was just that I looked thinner off television.

But television has its pluses. For one thing, I am immediately recognized everywhere I go. One day, passing Lexington Avenue near Bloomingdale's, I was hailed from a postal truck, "Hey, Miss Vanderbilt," the driver called, "I saw you last night!" The other day, riding on a crosstown bus that was momentarily stopped in front of a small shoe store, I saw the clerk and two women customers staring at me out of the window. I looked around to see if there could be anyone else on the bus that interested them, looked back and found them all pointing to me. The shop door was closed, and the bus window was, too, but the clerk mouthed: AREN'T-YOU-AMY-VANDERBILT? I nodded my head and smiled.

Perhaps the plus to this is that it reminds me to keep forever on my best behavior. This goes for travel abroad, too. Americans are everywhere. I have been recognized in a cathedral in Toledo, Spain, a hotel desk in Bergen, Norway, and of course on every cruise ship I've ever been on—usually within a few minutes after boarding. TV does it. No disguising myself with dark glasses. Somebody always spots me. No hidding behind my husband's name.

It's all right, too, unless I'm on my way to the hairdresser's after a weekend in a convertible. You might be surprised at how indignant some people can get if their celebrities don't live up to expectations at all times. fw

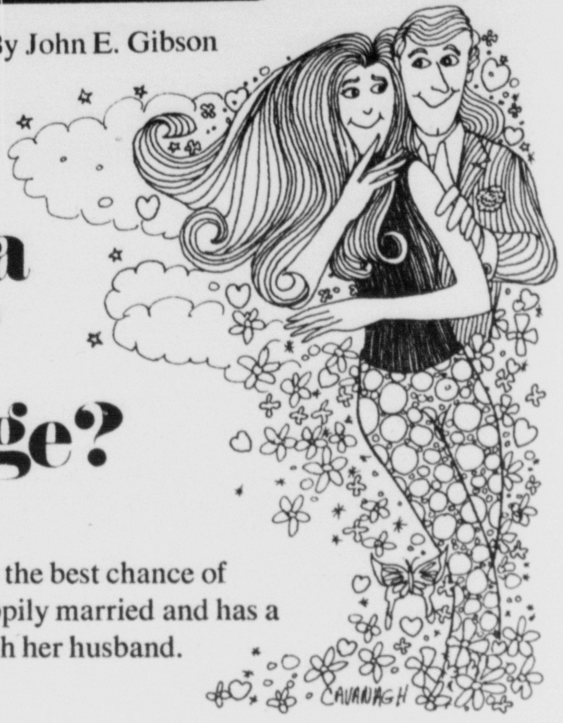
What Makes a "Happy" Marriage?



True or False: A woman has the best chance of keeping her figure if she is happily married and has a good physical relationship with her husband. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Though a husband is likely to think that it was he who picked out his wife, it's much more likely that his wife picked him out.

2. The woman who's always bragging about what a wonderful husband she has, usually hasn't.

3. If you can manage to avoid a crisis during the first year of marriage, there aren't likely to be any later.

4. A woman has the best chance of keeping her figure if she is happily married and has a good physical relationship with her husband.

5. A husband's feeling about his wife is influenced by her physical appearance to a far greater extent than vice versa.

6. Most husbands and wives agree on the things that are most likely to jeopardize a happy marriage.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to research findings cited in a University of Colorado study that show "more scientific support for the idea that girls marry someone like their father than that boys marry someone like their mother." This, as the investigator observes, would seem to indicate that women do most of the picking rather than men.

2. True. As one leading authority has observed: The woman who, without being asked, holds forth on the manifold virtues of her husband is usually trying to convince herself of something she knows is not the case. The odds are better than even that her husband is no bargain—but this is something she does not like to admit, especially to herself.

3. False. University of Michigan studies show that marriages are most vulnerable "during the first two years and again during the middle years, when the spouses are in their late 40's and 50's." The findings indicate that a great many crises occur at this time: The husband reaches a point in his career when it is clear whether or not he'll make it to the top. The children leave home, perhaps not turning out as the parents had hoped. It's further noted that physiological changes in both sexes compound these stresses, causing marriage partners to get on each others nerves and become overly emotional about things that would not ordinarily bother them.

4. True. Studies of thousands of case histories have shown that gaining excess poundage is frequently a result of food being used as a substitute for a satisfying husband-and-wife relationship. And when, as a consequence, the wife's figure deteriorates and she becomes less attractive, the relationship is likely to suffer further.

5. True. As one psychologist observes in summing up the findings of studies on the subject: "While women give more weight to the psychological and social characteristics of a potential mate and a relatively low weight to physical appearance, men attribute more weight to beauty."

6. False. A survey sponsored by the National Institutes of Mental Health shows that husbands and wives differ markedly in the nature of their complaints—with the wives averaging almost twice as many as the husbands. The study showed that: "Wives complained four times as often about money problems and about drinking, three times as much about verbal abuse, and significantly exceeded their husbands' complaints in various other categories. Husbands' complaints exceeded those of their mates only on two counts. They were more apt to mention in-law trouble ('If her mother would just keep her nose out of our business,' etc.); and they brought up physical incompatibility more often." fw

Released at last! From the physician whose average weight loss is 65 pounds per patient...the fat-melting program that

Overcomes the Body Chemical that keeps you fat!

And that therefore lets your body burn fat two to three times as fast as it's doing today! So that any amount of weight you want melts right off you . . . while you glory in what can only be called "The Eatingest Diet in the World"!

Do You Want Indisputable Proof? Then Read What The Doctor Did For The Boston Police Department! When He Carved AN AVERAGE OF 65 POUNDS APIECE Off 400 Policemen—While They Ate MORE Than Ever Before!

Perhaps you have read about this incredible new massive-weight-loss accomplishment in your daily newspaper . . . or seen some of the before-and-after photographs of the police officers who participated in it on your TV screen! In any case, let us briefly summarize its results for you here:

A few years ago, this eminent physician was called in by the Boston Police Department and given an almost impossible task: "Give our officers a diet they can stick to . . . that won't torture them, tire them out, or wear them down...and that will get them down to their ideal weight, FAST, and keep them there—FOR GOOD!"

Any other doctor would have thrown up his hands in despair! For how do you get someone to lose up to a hundred pounds in a few short months, and still not give him one hungry moment! How do you get him to peel off fat so fast that last week's clothes sag and still order him to eat MORE than the day he first came to you!

And how do you make automatic fat-burning feel so good that that person will STAY 20 . . . 40 . . . 60 . . . 80 . . . even 100 pounds thinner FOR THE REST OF HIS OR HER LIFE—and NOT because you stick around to keep him on the diet, but because that diet satisfies him so completely that he has ABSOLUTELY NO NEED to ever gain back an ounce!

Impossible By Ordinary Means—Yes! But THIS Doctor Had Discovered A HIDDEN KEY To Massive Weight-Loss! A Hidden Chemical That Locked Fat Right Into Your Body! AND THAT COULD BE OVERCOME AS SIMPLY AS THIS —

And, of course, all these members of the Boston Police Department were chronic Diet Failures! All had tried to lose weight before and failed —even with starvation diets! Or else they had managed to torture off a few miserable pounds by sheer agonizing will power . . . and then swelled right up again to even heavier weights than they had been before!

AND NONE OF THIS MATTERED IN THE SLIGHTEST TO THIS DOCTOR! For THIS doctor was no longer interested in torture, or will power, or starvation, or built-in failure! This doctor had gone far beyond mere calorie-counting, or food-deprivation! He had gone deeper than all of them, to the very heart of the body-mechanism that makes fat people stay fat!

EVERYTHING THAT THESE "CHRONIC FATTIES" HAD BEEN SAYING (and that friends, and even their doctors had laughed) WAS TRUE! It was TRUE that these fat people had something wrong with their body that KEPT them fat! It was TRUE that they could NOT lose weight on starvation diets (even, in some cases in this doctor's files, on 300-calorie diets), BECAUSE SOMETHING THAT WAS BORN INTO THEIR BODY KEPT BLOCKING THOSE DIETS EVERY TIME!

And that "something" was this —

A natural chemical (called an "antibody") THAT KEPT THEIR SYSTEM FROM BURNING FOODS THE SAME WAY THEIR "NORMAL" THIN FRIENDS' BODIES DID! So (as they kept on saying), while everything their friends ate turned to energy, "EVERYTHING" THEY ATE TURNED RIGHT INTO FAT!

But, Once This Hidden Chemical Was Discovered, You Could Then "EAT IT RIGHT OUT OF YOUR BODY" Like This:

So of course ordinary diets wouldn't work for these chronic failures—as they just don't work for you! Of course they were going to stay fat—as you are going to stay fat—UNTIL THEY OVERCOME THE FAT-BUILDING PROPERTIES OF THAT ANTIBODY . . . FOR GOOD!

And how do you do this? So simply and easily that you may gasp in astonishment! In these two ways:

1) You switch to a scientific combination of foods—lots of them—that naturally overcome this fat-building antibody by starving it, at the exact same time that they pour energy-giving nutrition into the rest of your body!

(Let us make this perfectly clear: In order to starve fat, and the antibody which keeps multiplying it, at exactly the same time that you stuff the rest of your body, YOU MAY ACTUALLY HAVE TO EAT MORE ...AND MORE...AND MORE THAN YOU ARE EATING TODAY! You eat till you groan—some of the officers on this "Diet" were actually sent back to the headquarters table to finish their meals! You eat deliciously! You eat a huge variety of foods! You may actually have your thin friends envy you—while the pounds are peeling away!)

And —

2) If you wish, you may also go to your family doctor, and have him give you an inexpensive, harmless little "supplement" that burns up this antibody—and the fat it causes—TWO OR THREE TIMES AS FAST!!! This supplement is for people who really mean business about losing weight—in massive quantities, fast! Any doctor can give it to you! It is perfectly safe! And it's like adding gasoline to a slow-burning fire! The fat virtually FLOWS out of your body!

And How Well—How Quickly—Does It Work? HERE ARE FACTS AND FIGURES THAT YOU MAY HAVE TROUBLE BELIEVING!

First of all, some 400 policemen were put on this Massive Weight Loss Program! In not one instance was there a single failure! All of them—every one of them—lost weight! And the average weightloss was 65 pounds per patient!

But this is just the beginning! With those officers who had only recently gained weight (and therefore did not have their fat locked-in solid to their body for ten or twenty years), weight-loss occurred so fast that their families gasped in astonishment! In fact, in case after case, 38 . . . 40 . . . and even 50 ugly pounds vanished into thin air in a matter of weeks!

With other officers, of course, who had been painfully overweight for decades, the process was slightly slower. But as the "Eat-Like-a-King" weeks turned into months, weight loss after weight loss after weight loss was reported of 78 pounds . . . 84 pounds . . . 92 pounds . . . 101 pounds . . . 114 pounds . . . even 130 easy-off pounds! Until that person himself said, "I don't want to lose anymore! I'm PERFECT the way I am now"!

No exercise of any kind needed! This doctor doesn't believe it's necessary! And besides, many of the people who lost the most weight were desk workers, who never even walked to work!

No more sliver-snacks! No nibbling on carrots or cucumbers or celery or olives when you need hunger-relief between meals! Instead, THIS WAY, you eat eat BIG, healthy IN-BETWEEN-MEALS-MEALS if you want them!

No more Diet Weakness! Because you're NOT starving yourself now! And because now your fat is being turned into sheer, pulsating ENERGY!

And, of course, no more holiday-guilt! Because then, as every day, you have a ball! And you still lose

And no more diet-nerves! Because there's no more diet-deprivation! And no more diet-sag to your neck and face! Because you're building muscle . . . you're building strength . . . you're building vigor into the vital parts of your body—at the same exact time that you're starving ONLY the hidden fat! And—most important of all —

As A Special Added Bonus — LOSE AGE AT THE SAME TIME THAT YOU LOSE WEIGHT!

This is the overwhelming (and at least partially unexpected) fact! That the hundreds of people who went on this diet in the Boston Police Department—as well as thousands of Dr. Berman's patients outside—seemed to shed years and years from their bodies and faces, every single day they enjoyed this Diet!

Why? Because this Program attacks the basic cause of aging, as well as the basic cause of overweight! And the same new chemical mechanism that unlocks fat from your waist, hips, buttocks and thighs ALSO UNLOCKS IT FROM YOUR ARTERIES AS WELL!

This is the reason that youth seemed to pour back into these suddenly slim bodies! And this is the reason that not one heart attack occurred to a single person taking this Program!

So The Facts Are In! The Theory Is Proven! The Massive Weight-Losses Have Been Confirmed Beyond Dispute! THE NEXT MOVE IS UP TO YOU!

This program literally means the difference between slow starvation, with no lasting results—or massive weight-loss that STAYS!

It is completely explained in one of the most exciting and fastest-reading books ever written! Why not send in the No-Risk Coupon—TODAY!

Chilled sangria can either be sipped icy cold, or made into a mold and wreathed with fresh fruit.

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares a summer menu with a Spanish accent. "One of the little tricks I've learned in summer cooking," says Marilyn, "is to borrow from countries and regions where sunshine and heat are everyday facts of life. Spain is an excellent example."

Sonic scientists have gone and done it—produced a minor miracle. It may not be as important as sending a man to the moon, but if mosquitoes think you're the tastiest lunch counter on the block—if you want to be free to enjoy the soft summer nights outdoors without scratching, itching, and constant slapping at mosquitoes, this might be the most important thing in your life this summer.

Girl Mosquitoes Hate It.
This tiny electronic device, smaller than a pack of Camels, puts an invisible sound shield around you that mosquitoes won't enter! You can forget messy sprays, creams, liquids. You see, scientists have discovered that there is a certain high frequency sound that girl mosquitoes hate (the girl mosquitoes are the ones that bite—the boy mosquitoes have only one purpose).

This electronic sonic marvel produces a very high-pitched sound. The girl mosquitoes hear it, not you, and they go someplace else on the double!

The sound shield protects you and you alone. Somebody else a few feet away may be slapping and scratching and they won't even know why mosquitoes are not bothering you. You can tuck it in your shirt pocket, loop it on a chain around your neck, carry it by its smart black cord around your wrist, or loop it on your belt. It's as if you were encased in an impenetrable screen that mosquitoes just can't get through.

If you want to enjoy yourself outdoors this summer, get the Electronic Mosquito Repeller now. Precision made instrument, attractive plastic case. It has an on-off switch, battery not included, and is guaranteed by American Consumer to give you a happy time outdoors or your money back. Try it at our risk for 14 days. Are Our Teachers Unfair to Boys?

"Boys try eight times more than girls to answer questions in school, but female teachers call on girls ten times more than boys."

Bob Witt

"When we talk about the 'failure of our schools,' what we usually mean is 'the failure of boys in our schools.' "

Your son may have more trouble learning to read than your daughter. He may hate school more, have less interest in learning and make lower grades. And it may be the result of an unconscious girl-oriented educational system in the United States.

Women's Lib activists have long had complaints of their own about sex discrimination in our lower schools. Elementary readers, they point out, are more likely to have a boy for a main character than a girl. Also, the traditional sex roles (man as breadwinner, woman as homemaker) are often reinforced in children's games and stories.

However, there is an equally serious —if less vocal—group of critics who claim that it is really the boys who are the chief victims of today's teaching methods. And they are amassing an impressive amount of evidence in support of their theory that if boys received more attention, if there were more boy-oriented studies and activities in school, boys would be much happier in school and do significantly better!

One of the most knowledgeable and respected of these critics is a professor of education and psychology at North Texas State University, Dr. R. C. Bradley. Dr. Bradley points out that when we talk about the "failure of our schools," what we usually mean is "the failure of boys in our schools." It is the boy who is not learning how to read. It is the boy who is dropping out—mentally, if not physically. Says Dr. Bradley: "If we spent 15 minutes a day in school on projects that are boy-oriented, we might change the whole motivational curve, in a positive way. By that I mean, in favor of boys. Girls are making it anyway."

Education specialists generally agree that boys and girls have the same motivation to learn in kindergarten. But as the elementary and high school years go by, girls gain motivation and then lose it gradually, whereas boys steadily lose motivation, then gain it. Boys and girls have about the same motivation again their senior year in high school.

The reason for this curve is not a mystery. Nor can it be explained away completely by such oft-quoted clichés as "girls mature faster than boys." There are some very clear reasons, says

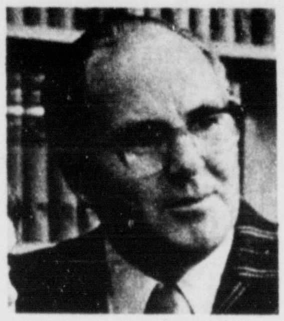
Are Teachers Unfair To Boys?

Continued



Dr. R. C. Bradley

Dr. Bradley, why girls are paying attention in grade school while boys are losing interest. And they can be found in studies that have been conducted under actual classroom conditions.

One such study, conducted by the University of Missouri, shows that boys try eight times more than girls to answer questions in school, but female teachers call on girls ten times more than boys. Another study, by researchers at the University of California at Berkeley, indicates that a teacher waits only 2.2 seconds for a response after a boy has been asked a question, but the same teacher will wait 7.7 seconds for a girl to respond.

"At all levels, when grades are given, girls are typically given higher grades," Dr. Bradley says. But they don't always earn them. "I believe I have enough research to say we must reexamine how the boy is being taught and treated in school," says the professor.

How does Dr. Bradley suggest we can improve the education of boys, without doing it at the girls' expense? The answer, he says, may be to relate to each pupil as a person, providing reading materials and asking questions of interest to each pupil in order to stimulate independent thinking and curiosity for further study.

Dr. Bradley draws from his own experience as a teacher to give an example of how to stimulate curiosity in a child and also to communicate to the child that the teacher really cares. "Let's say I have a class that's reading newspapers for a project in current events. I bend over Billy's desk and ask him, 'What is news?' He, of course, doesn't really know. 'Well, one way to remember news,' I tell him, 'is N stands for North, E stands for East, W stands for West, and S stands for South. These are the directions where interesting information can be found.'

"The child says, 'Gosh, he cares about me.' Actually, all I've done is taken the time to make the material more interesting."

When a boy is not learning to read as he should, diagnostic tests are often given, he is labeled a special reading case, and then is given more of what he didn't want in the first place—reading.

"Mothers are asked to listen to their children read at home during the evening hours. Perhaps asking fathers to listen to their boys read would make more sense. If a boy finds his father is interested in listening to him read, the male student may cease to view reading as 'sissy stuff' at the elementary school level."

Dr. Bradley also criticizes the practice of teaching reading as an isolated subject and limiting it to one tediously long reading lesson a day instead of two shorter, and probably more interesting sessions.

The theories Dr. Bradley has developed concerning reading problems of boys and the suggestions he has made have been tested in his own research in the Carrollton-Farmer's Branch Independent School District, in suburban Dallas. Dr. Bradley's research during the 1970-71 school year at Farmer's Branch Elementary School was aimed at increasing the pupils' powers of thinking, but he utilized the opportunity to concentrate on the reading problems of boys. Dr. Bradley spent no more time with the boys than he did with the girls, he says, but the time he spent with the boys was more than they were accustomed to. And it had significant results.

By spending only five minutes a day for 90 days with the boys, concentrating on subjects of interest to them and giving them an opportunity to respond to his questions, "We influenced boys to respond better on tests than did the girls," he says.

With results such as this, Bradley feels confident that more personal attention to boys and more boy-oriented activities in school could change the whole educational future for boys in the United States. fw

HEFTY HOWARD BROOKS
Are fat people being persecuted?

The fat fight back: Hefty Howard Brooks has amassed college degrees and is of sound health, but is on welfare because he can't get any kind of job. Why? Because, says a group formed to plump for those who are overweight, today's weight-conscious people think there's something wrong with you if you're fat. And Howard is fat. The National Organization to Aid Fat Americans, headquartered in Westbury, N.Y., points out that the obese suffer job discrimination and social stigma without just cause. They even have a hard time with little things—it's tough for chubbies to find reasonably priced clothes that fit, for instance. But the group notes that Rembrandt, Rubens and Renoir enjoyed painting charming fat women, and in Latin America the plump are considered most lovable.

David Brower

End of the big city as mecca? Conservationist David Brower claims: "Actually, wanting to go to the big city has just about ended. And small-town people should stay where they are. We're already beginning to run out of the resources that have enabled conglomerates like New York City to be built. Those in small towns should hang on, and find things to do to help the environment—the things the cities didn't do. People must become more self-sufficient to become sounder, and it's in smaller cities and towns that they can." Brower is president of Friends of the Earth and editor of "Only a Little Planet" (McGraw-Hill, $12.50).

ROSALIND RUSSELL
She'd rather be called a prude

QUOTE: Rosalind Russell says, "X-rated nude movies are stupid, ridiculous! If they weren't so damaging they'd be ludicrous. Sex can be either bathroom style or magic. There's nothing in between. I don't attend such movies. Not out of prudishness—I don't consider myself a cube—but I'd rather tolerate being considered a prude than patronize such movies. And violence is equally damaging. Perhaps the tail end of the Victorian Age, in which I was reared, wasn't the best for certain sex information and education, but certainly these movies are not the answer. It's so sad, so destructive, to think that this is the way it should be, the way it has to be. It's pitiful that no one—the government, church, school, parents—wants to take the responsibility for sex education. So they allow some character out to make a fast buck tell our children about sex." UNQUOTE.

But out of that came the most unforgettable westerns ever written.
A PAINTING BY HARVEY W. JOHNSON

Zane Grey never could resist the lure of danger or the challenge of an untracked wilderness. He walked across the oven-hot flats of Death Valley. He rode, hell-bent-for-leather, with a troop of rugged Texas Rangers. He endured bitter cold and risked life and limb to hunt cougars and mountain lions with Indian scouts.

No wonder his stories are so real you can almost smell the smoke of a blazing six-shooter, or reach out and touch the hard-bellied, broken-nosed, bullet-scarred men who tamed the frontier and brought law and order to the wild west.

If this is the world you would like to explore, we'll send you—for only $1—three of the greatest books that Zane Grey ever wrote:

Riders of the Purple Sage.

Probably the most popular Western ever written. Against a background of fiery action, a mysterious rider and the girl he loves gamble their lives in the winning of the West.

Arizona Ames.

The no-holds-barred epic of a hard-riding cowpuncher whose blazing six-shooter spread terror among the toughest badmen.

Wild Horse Mesa.

These handsome, hardbound books are clothed in sunset red, desert tan and cavalry blue, and stamped in genuine gold. They're the first of what could be a library of Western classics you'll be proud to own.

And to celebrate Zane Grey's 100th Anniversary, we'll send you all three books (regularly $11.67) for only $1.

We think you'll be impressed. And that you'll want to own others in the series as they become available.

They will include: Wildfire, The Vanishing American, Fighting Caravans, The Hash Knife Outfit, Maverick Queen, Wilderness Trek, The Thundering Herd, Dude Ranger, and many more.

Because we print in large quantities, and because we sell directly to the public, we can offer our subscribers beautifully bound Zane Grey books for only a fraction of what you'd expect to pay—only $3.89 each plus shipping.

If I don't want to keep these introductory volumes, I'll return them within a week and owe nothing. Otherwise, I'll pay just $1 for all three, plus shipping.

Also reserve for me other beautifully-bound volumes in the Zane Grey Library, which I will be entitled to receive as they come from the presses.

I'll get advance descriptions of all future volumes. I may reject any book before or after I receive it.

For those I keep, I pay just $3.89 each plus shipping. And I may cancel my reservation at any time.
